Fist Fight Challenges Are Hurled in Congress

SENATOR GLASS INVITES WHEELER INTO CLOAKROOM

Montana Solon Accepts But Intervention of Associates Prevents Battle of Senators.

TINCHER-STRONG CLASH IN HOUSE

Hot Words Pass But Speaker Longworth and Others Bar Battle of Heavyweights.

Washington, February 12.—(United News.)—Congress dropped its usual diplomatic and courteous exchange of arguments today and attempted to settle differences on legislation by the use of fisticuffs.

Two separate encounters livened the proceedings, one in the house and another in the senate.

Shortly after Senator Glass, Virginia, democrat, and former secretary of the treasury, invited Senator Wheeler, Montana, democrat, and former vice presidential candidate, into the cloakroom for a lightweight battle, Representative Tincher, Kansas, republican, and his colleague, Representative Strong, also a Kansas republican, attempted to "mix it up" in the house.

In both cases intervention of associates prevented nothing more than an exchange of hasty words.

In the upper body, Senator Glass, fiery southerner, objected to Wheeler's charges that leaders in charge of the Pepper-McFadden banking bill had "railroaded" him out of an opportunity of speaking.

Glass, who had been in conference on the republican side of the chamber, came over to the Montana senator, and after a minute's conversation pulled back his clenched fist as if to strike. Glass evidently reconsidered as Wheeler remained calm and invited the Montanan into the cloakroom to settle the argument.

Wheeler accepted the challenge and started after Glass, when we was held off by senate attaches and fellow members.

Rush After Glass.

The verbal row could be heard over the noise of a vote then being taken, and Senator Robinson, Arkansas, democratic floor leader, and others rushed after Glass as he disappeared behind the swinging doors of the democratic cloakroom.

Several members prevented Wheeler from following and in a few minutes Glass returned in time to answer to his name on the roll call. Wheeler then smiled and resumed his seat. Both senators denied reports that blows had been actually struck, but as Wheeler remarked they came "powerfully near."

The encounter occurred during a vote to consider the banking bill, which was adopted 58 to 9. A cloture petition, which would limit debate on the measure was introduced by Senator Pepper, Pennsylvania republican, and is scheduled for vote on Tuesday.

Senator Glass issued the following

Boyce was leaning against the typewriter when shot. Almost Glad Pal Died, Says Captured Bandit

:: BOTH IMPRISONED YOUTHS BLAME SLAIN MAN ::

BY HERB McCUSKER.

"Sorry for Boyce? Hell—I'm almost glad he got it!"

W. B. Cavender, 20-year-old Atlanta youth who, with Willie Sewell, 19 years old, was captured by Officer O. B. Rowell Saturday morning while attempting to rob the Barnham drug store in Brookhaven, blew a ring of cigarette smoke through the bars of his cell in the DeKalb county jail Saturday night and gave utterance to the foregoing statement while discussing the death of his erstwhile companion, J. Sam Boyce, who was slain by Officer Rowell during the robbery frustration.

"He was one tough bird—Boyce!" Cavender continued. "He got me into this jam—got me in this cell, so why should I feel sorry about him? He was half drunk and pulled a gun on me—that's how I come to be in there."

Prisoner's Story.

"Here's the way it was: Willie (Sewell) and I were going home at about 10 o'clock when we comes across Boyce sitting in the automobile. He asks me where I was going and I said 'home.' Finally he said he knew where we could pick up a couple of girls and so Willie and I hopped in.

"Boyce took us to a bootlegger's joint on Peachtree road and paid two dollars for a quart of corn. He left us there and came back after a while. 'C'mon, I know where we'll get the girls,' he said and we drove off."

"When he stopped in front of the drug store, I didn't know what he was going to do. Then he pulls a gun and says 'Crawl in that window.' I protested but he made me crawl in ahead of him. Cap'n Rowell was in almost as soon as we were and Boyce

Sam Boyce Killed, W. B. Cavender and Willie Sewell Captured in Burglary by Single Officer.

While one Atlanta youth's body awaited burial in a local morgue, slain by a bullet from a policeman's gun, and his two companions occupied a cell in the DeKalb county jail, charged with attempted robbery of the Barnham drug store in Brookhaven early Saturday morning, investigators were probing the activities of the "mill gang," of which the trio are said to have been members, in an effort to connect them with a score of robberies perpetrated in the neighborhood during the past three weeks.

The dead youth is J. Sam Boyce, 21, of 1327 Wilmot Park drive, who died from a wound inflicted by County Police Officer O. B. Rowell. The captured boys are W. B. Cavender, 20, of 159 Berean avenue, and Willie Sewell, 19, and crippled, of 110 Bedford place.

Boyce was killed and the other pair captured when Officer Rowell surprised Boyce and Cavender in the act of robbing the Barnham store, after the youths had smashed a show window with a boulder and climbed through. Entering after the pair, Officer Rowell chased them into the prescription room in the rear, killed Boyce with a shot through his chest, after Boyce had attempted to shoot him, cornered Cavender in a washroom and compelled him to surrender after an exchange of shots. The third accomplice, Sewell, a one-legged youth,

CLASH FORESEEN ON AMENDMENTS TO CITY CHARTER

Special Committee To Sponsor Proposal for School Needs, Opposing City-Manager Plan.

Rival charter amendment proposals probably will clash in city-wide referendums this spring, it was learned Saturday, when it became known that a special joint committee of the school board and the school committee of city council has practically completed a draft for school needs, which fail to coincide with those contained in the proposed city-manager charter for Atlanta.

It was predicted freely that a large majority of members of the school board and council will join in an effort to put over the plan of the joint committee as the best solution of the financial crisis of the school system.

The special committee will recommend that a special school taxing zone be established in Atlanta with a minimum of 8 mills and a maximum of 10; that the present school board be abolished and a new one consisting of six members created, to be elected from school districts consisting of two wards each; that a special school tax levy of 10 cents on the dollar be levied next year to put the schools on a living basis, and that another similar levy be made in 1928 to construct additional school buildings without recourse to another bond issue.

Fight Inevitable.

While these proposals were being formulated, members of the Atlanta League of Women Voters were preparing to submit to the people in a referendum this spring proposals to allocate 30 per cent of the city's gross revenue for school purposes; to create a new board of education consisting of nine members to be elected from the city at large, and to require the city purchasing agent to make all purchases for the school department.

It is inevitable that these opposing factions will fight it out in a referendum, according to political prognostications Saturday night.

Although the draft of the joint committee has not yet received the sanction of the school board, the school committee of city council nor council, it will be submitted to a joint committee from these bodies at a meeting to be held Thursday night. If it is approved, and indications Saturday were that it would be received favorably, machinery looking toward ratification of this plan will be put in motion within a few days. There may be some changes, but the plan in the main is expected to stand the test.

In adopting the plan of the committee taxes would be increased only 10 cents on the dollar, it was pointed out; schools would get about $350,000 additional revenue annually, and the

DECISION HAILED AS REMOVING LAST BARRIER TO WORK

While Appeal May Be Carried To Supreme Court Move Is Not Regarded as Probable.

MAIN FIGHT HINGED ON VIADUCT PLAN

Beginning of Great Improvement Program Expected To Start Soon, Mayor Declares.

Coincident with announcement that the United States circuit court of appeals in session at New Orleans has rendered a decision validating the $8,000,000 bond issue voted March 24, 1926, by Atlantans, it was learned that options for the proposed city hall site adjacent to Fulton county courthouse have been obtained.

Only one stretch of 50 feet on Central avenue is missing, according to an admission of J. Lawrence McCord, member of the bond commission, appointed to supervise administration of the bond funds.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale and other high city officials hailed the decision as a complete victory for the issue, and declared that steps to secure a joint conference with railroad officials, whose lines would be affected by construction of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts, will be taken immediately.

"I am glad that the legal incumbrance has been removed from the entire issue and the city now is free to begin administration of the bond money," the mayor said. "This will provide work for the city's unemployed and will give Atlanta the much needed improvements."

Allocation of Issue.

Frank Neely, president of the bond commission, was out of the city and could not be reached Saturday night for a statement.

Mr. McCord has been working in conjunction with Abe Greenfield in securing the options for the city hall site, and Dr. P. L. Moon, alderman from the second, will push the project in council.

The $8,000,000 bond issue was allocated as follows:

Schools, $3,500,000; sewers $2,000,000; city hall $1,000,000; viaducts $1,000,000; waterworks $500,000.

Practically all the money will be available by January 1, 1928, and that means, according to city officials, that it will be available under terms of the issue before it possibly could be administered.

The proposed new city hall would be a municipal building housing the city jail, recorders' courts, fire headquarters and other departments of the city government.

Decision of the New Orleans court upheld the decision of Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of the federal district court here, validating the issue.

Although the main attack was centered on the $1,000,000 contained in the fund for construction of Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts, all five items included in the issue were involved.

Appeal Forecast.

George C. Spence, attorney for Thomas B. Brady, of Los Angeles, complainant, announced that the case will be taken to the United States supreme court. Otherwise, he declined to comment on the decision before having seen the ruling of the New Orleans tribunal.

Announcement of the court of appeals decision was made by City Attorney James L. Mayson, who received a telegram from Edwin T. Merrick, New Orleans lawyer, who was associated with Mr. Mayson in the battle to uphold Judge Sibley's decision.

Bonds were validated in Judge John D. Humphries' division of Fulton superior court, and later were attacked in the federal district court.

It was stated that there is very little likelihood that the supreme

Friends of Scouts Spurred in Drive For $75,000 Goal

Final Appeals Made as Workers Rest Preparatory to Last Day of Campaign.

An invitation to all friends of Atlanta's boys to mail subscriptions to Boy Scout headquarters today toward the $75,000 fund to complete the Bert Adams Boy Scout camp was issued Saturday by the general campaign committee.

The invitation, with a request to use blanks to be clipped from Sunday's papers, was extended after an audit of subscriptions made up to date had disclosed that 80 per cent of the $55,000 raised through Saturday had come in amounts of $25 or more from a few hundred persons of sufficient means to send their own boys to private camps.

Out of the entire amount raised up to date, more than $55,000, gifts of $100 or more have accounted for $27,000 and gifts of $25 or more have accounted for $7,000 additional, leaving only $11,000, one-fifth of the fund,

Love, sweet love, will blaze in old hearts and young Monday. Love, sweet love, will be sung in paeans, poems, prose and psalmody and promises. Love, sweet love, in osculatory, documentary, testamentary, elemen-

U. S. INTERVENTION SEEN IN NICARAGUA

Town of Muy Muy Falls Into Rebel Hands and Attack Is Expected on Matagalpa.

BY GERALD MARTIN.

(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Managua, Nicaragua, February 12. Armed United States intervention in the Nicaraguan revolutionary trouble is possible within 48 hours, The Tribune correspondent is informed.

This would mean the stopping of further slaughter and property damage, which is putting Nicaragua in debt, and would also insure the protections of American and other foreign interests at Matagalpa, where the coffee planters are completing their crop hurriedly, expecting an attack at any moment. They have asked that United States marines be sent to protect them.

The town of Muy Muy has fallen to the rebels and General Moncada was expected to attack Matagalpa, which is only a few miles away, today.

A British subject filed a claim this afternoon for $10,000 for property damages at Chinandega, after which the Italian minister filed a claim for $15,000 for damage to Italian properties there. The British minister, Mr. Patterson, is anxious over the British colony at Leon. There is only one American at Leon. Thirty Britishers live there with their families, and London is reported to be demanding that the United States marines protect them from the liberal rebels.

Study the Purchaser's Directory in Today's Constitution

Nine out of ten people in Atlanta are desirous of buying something right now. The majority of them will study the advertisements in today's Constitution with a view to making the purchase tomorrow.

That demonstrates that they are wise, for today's Constitution is a veritable directory of where to buy and what to pay.

It doesn't matter what you want—you'll find it advertised in today's Constitution—perhaps in several advertisements. It is well to read them all and save the time of going from store to store to make a personal examination, for you can rely on the advertisements that appear in The Constitution.

PUBLIC BUILDING PROGRAM REVISED

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—Unless congress authorizes appropriation of another $100,000,000 for the public buildings program of the government, many cities will be stricken from the list of projects recommended by the treasury and postoffice departments on January 17.

With the session fast waning, Secretary Mellon transmitted to the capitol today a program for expenditure of the $100,000,000 already authorized, but with many projects, described as urgent, and including New York city, Philadelphia, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities, eliminated or curtailed.

Quick Revision Seen.

The reason for leaving them out of the new list, it was explained, was because they were in states having so many other and smaller projects. Mr. Mellon pointed out, however, that in the event congress authorizes a second appropriation, a bill for which has been passed by the house, data is in hand that would make it only a question of a day or two before estimates might be submitted for the cities eliminated.

"This allocation has been built up to dovetail into a proposed second $100,000,000," the report said. "The distribution among states had this in view also. If we should hold back this allocation, however, until a second $100,000,000 became a certainty, it might become too late in the session to get the appropriation through congress for the first year's work, and thus we would delay the whole program one year."

The report pointed out that $6,000,000 a year in rentals could be saved under the $200,000,000 program "and that the number of square feet of additional space that will be obtained from this building program would be, in our judgment, equivalent to much more than $6,000,000."

The allocation for the first year's work on the first $100,000,000 program has been determined upon and estimates for approximately $17,000,000 will be sent to congress by the budget bureau, probably Monday.

In allocating the first $100,000,000, the committee acting for the treasury and postoffice departments began with cities where congestion in government buildings was greatest. The belief was expressed that the spirit of the law did not intend the entire amount should be exhausted on old projects and the mandatory two new postoffices in each state, as set forth in the act. Consequently a few million dollars was devoted to new federal buildings in cities which had become sizeable but had never had a government-owned building.

278 Projects Included.

A total of 278 projects were included in the allocation of the first $100,000,000. They include 118 new buildings in cities now without federal buildings, 65 new buildings to replace old buildings or in addition to old buildings, 85 extensions, sevent buildings for marine hospitals and quarantine purposes, four extensions to customs houses and one immigration building.

By states the projects eliminated from the program for the time being and those added follow:

Alabama: Montgomery, $865,000 eliminated; Union Springs, $70,000, eliminated; Auburn, reduced from $90,000 to $45,000.

Arkansas: Conway building fund increased to $90,000.

Florida: Miami reduced from $2,235,000 to $1,850,000, Jacksonville, recommendation of $2,785,000 eliminated; West Palm Beach, $1,000,000 eliminated, and St. Petersburg, $250,000 eliminated. Recommendation for Tampa increased from $385,000 to $525,000. These projects were added: Daytona Beach, $250,000; Bradenton, $150,000.

Atlanta Loses in Revision.

Georgia. Recommendations for Atlanta $600,000 for additional facilities and Savannah $715,000 were eliminated. Canton was increased from $50,000 to $65,000 and Fort Valley was added for $60,000.

Louisiana: An extension, to cost $250,000 was eliminated. These improvements were added for New Orleans: Customs house, $200,000; marine hospital, $2,000,000, and quarantine station, increased from $30,000 to $430,000.

Maryland: Baltimore project for new building was increased from $2,000,000 to $2,250,000, while Cumberland's was reduced from $300,000 to $185,000.

Mississippi: Corinth increased from $50,000 to $750,000.

Asheville Also Cut.

North Carolina: Asheville reduced from $1,250,000 to $925,000 and Lumberton added for $75,000.

South Carolina: Spartanburg increased from $110,000 to $175,000 and Hartsville from $60,000 to $80,000 and recommendation for a public building at a place to be named, $60,000.

Tennessee: Johnson City, $110,000 for extension and Jackson, $70,000 for extension, both eliminated. Paris reduced from $70,000 to $65,000 and McMinnville added for $75,000.

Virginia: Norfolk station, $320,000, and Richmond extension and remodeling, $1,615,000 both eliminated. Roanoke, new building reduced from $1,000,000 to $825,000, and Bristol, increased from $65,000 to $105,000.

Missouri: Kansas City, new building, reduced $3,625,000 to $3,500,000; Sedalia, increased $170,170 to $225,000.

FINAL PLEA MADE FOR SCOUTS' CAMP

as the contribution of the great mass of Atlanta people who are neither rich nor poor.

True Spirit of Move.

"If the true spirit of the Boy Scout movement is to be expressed in the dedication of this wonderful camp to the boys of Atlanta, at least half of the money should come from the families which produce the vast majority of boys who are benefiting by the movement." W. C. Wardlaw, chairman of the campaign, said Saturday.

"We do not want any boy in Atlanta to feel next summer that he is enjoying the privileges of a camp which has been 'given' to him by a few hundred well-to-do people," Mr. Wardlaw declared. "We want every boy, whether he is of the 20 per cent of scouts who come from wealthy families, or the 40 per cent who come from families of average means or the 40 per cent who are classed as 'underprivileged,' to feel that it is his camp and that it has been given to him by all Atlanta, by his own father and older brothers and uncles and aunts and not by the fathers and brothers and uncles and aunts of a few of the boys.

Activities Restricted.

"On any other basis the camp cannot be a complete and perfect place to nurture the ideals of democracy and service upon which the Boy Scout movement is based," he asserted.

Mr. Wardlaw explained that it had been impossible for the small but enthusiastic group of workers to see all the people whose subscriptions are necessary to realize the true spirit of the camp and at the same time get the total amount of money needed for the waterworks, sewerage system, buildings and other equipment.

The number of workers has averaged less than 75 each day since the campaign began and in order to reach the quota of $75,000 by Monday night it has been necessary for them to restrict their activities largely to prospective givers from whom large subscriptions were expected.

Big Response Asked.

"This has placed us in a dilemma which can be solved only by the free will and unsolicited response of the thousands of friends of boyhood who have not yet been seen," Mr. Wardlaw said.

The campaign committee authorized the publication of a subscription blank in the three Atlanta Sunday papers. It is suggested that subscriptions of less than $10 be made with one payment attached to the blanks, subscriptions of $10 or more may be made payable in five installments during the next two and one-half years, beginning April 1. One-fifth of the amount is to be paid each six months.

Victory Not Doubted.

"The campaign committee has no fear that the campaign will fail to go over into a glorious victory at the final campaign meeting Monday night," Mr. Wardlaw said. "But when the roll of honor of Atlantans who have made the camp possible is prepared and placed where boys of today and tomorrow and generations to come may inspect it, we want every boy to recognize some name and know that at least one subscription was made for him, whether it were a subscription of $1 or $1,000, and to feel that the camp is his by every right."

Cooperation of Atlanta ministers in spreading the message of service and character-building rendered by the Boy Scouts was asked Saturday in letters dispatched by the campaign committee.

Church Nucleus of Move.

"The Boy Scout movement in Atlanta was initiated with the church as the nucleus for the first Boy Scout troops and that spiritual keynote has always dominated the Boy Scout movement in Atlanta, as in every other city in the 57 nations into which scouting has spread," Eugene Harrington, president of the scout council, said in announcing that the ministers had been invited to cooperate in calling attention to the campaign.

Workers are to continue in the field through Sunday and Monday, meeting at the chamber of commerce at 6 o'clock Monday night to make final reports of the campaign.

Land was purchased and the dam for the lake built on the site near Vinings, 12 miles north of Atlanta, by Bert Adams, former international Rotary president, and a group of other active leaders in boys' work. The fund of $75,000 is being sought to complete the camp for all the 1,600 boys who are now members of troops in Atlanta and for others who will be welcomed into the ranks from time to time.

court will certify the case to that tribunal, and that in event it does it is improbable that it will reverse the decision of the other two federal courts through which it has been passed favorably.

Atlanta attorneys are of the opinion that the decision of the circuit court will be a final adjudication and that no further steps will be taken to reverse decisions already rendered.

Brady sought to obtain an injunction to prevent sale of the bonds mainly on the ground that the city was issuing a bond issue to raise only $1,000,000 for viaduct purposes, and that this would defray only a part of the actual cost. His petition was not granted. He contended, further, that the Georgia laws require a sinking fund to take care of the entire cost of the object of the issue, and that the city has no right to require money for public improvements from other sources than a bond issue. He also was overruled in each of these contentions.

Battle in House.

In the house "heavyweight" battle, Tincher and Strong started after each other during heated debates on the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill.

Tincher, the heaviest man in the house, weighs more than 300 pounds, while Strong tips the scales close to 225.

According to witnesses, Tincher took exception to a remark which he charged Strong with making several days previously while sitting in the gallery near Mrs. Tincher.

"You are a dirty, little pup," witness quoted Tincher as remarking.

"You are a liar, you big, fat—" Strong shouted back.

Speaker Longworth intervened, but both members attempted to strike at each other even when held by the speaker, and Representatives Bailey, Missouri republican, and Hudstaph, Texas democrat.

TINCHER AND STRONG CLASH IN HOUSE LOBBY.

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—A near fist fight developed in the house lobby today between Representatives Tincher and Strong, of Kansas, over differences on the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill.

Each called the other a "liar." As they were preparing to come to blows, Speaker Longworth and Representative Hudspeth, of Texas, intervened. Such passes as were made all went wild.

CHICAGO OFFICIAL PLANNING TO BAR HOUSEBOAT FLEET

Chicago, February 12.—(AP)—A move to prevent the Chicago river resembling the Yangtze Kiang has been started by the city with the determination of the commissioners of public works to drive fleets of houseboats from the local stream.

Hundreds of river squatters, who have solved the cost of living by eliminating land taxes and rent, will be driven from the abodes, if the plan is successful, on the ground that they interfere with navigation.

Several years ago the widow of "Cap'n" George Wellington Streeter, who had many times with guns stood off police and maintained his squatter's rights to a valuable lake shore section of Chicago, only to lose in court, went to live in a houseboat. A few others lived in the same manner, but in the last two or three years the houseboat fleets have increased rapidly.

PART OF $51,000 MISSING ON LINER IS FOUND HIDDEN

San Francisco, February 12.—(AP)—Sixteen hundred dollars of the $51,000 reported missing from the specie tanks of the Panama mail liner Columbia, when she reached San Pedro from Salvador, have been recovered, it was announced when the steamer reached here today. Two arrests are expected.

The money was recovered by Los Angeles detectives who accompanied the ship north. It was in four separate hiding places in the crew quarters and elsewhere.

CLOTURE PLANNED TO PASS TWO BILLS

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—The drastic cloture rule limiting debate is to be resorted to by republican leaders if necessary to put through the conference reports on the McFadden branch banking and the radio control bills.

A petition for cloture on the banking measure was filed today with Vice President Dawes immediately after the senate had voted, 58 to 9, to make that bill the unfinished business of the senate.

A vote on the cloture motion will be taken not later than 1 p. m. Tuesday and the petition carries the names of more than the two-thirds majority of the senators needed to bring the seldom-used rule into force.

Agreement Proposed.

After the banking bill is disposed of a similar petition with respect to the radio measure will be filed unless an agreement fixing a time for a vote can be had. Such an agreement was proposed today, but was objected to by three senators.

Later in the day Senator La Follette, republican, Wisconsin, announced that he would object "to all unanimous consent agreements that may be proposed during the remainder of this session of congress."

"I shall also insist that all of the rules with regard to parliamentary procedure affecting the consideration of bills shall be carried out, including the first reading of each bill," he added.

La Follette's notice came just before the cloture petition on the banking bill was filed and after Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, had objected to a unanimous consent agreement to permit Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, to discuss the motion to take up the banking bill.

Wheeler Claims Agreement.

Under the rules that motion, having been made during the so-called morning hour, was not debatable but Wheeler claimed Senator Pepper, republican, Pennsylvania, in charge of the banking bill, had agreed to let him speak.

Had Wheeler been allowed to talk for an hour, as he had proposed yesterday, consideration of the banking bill motion would have been forced over until after 2 p. m., when it would have been open to a filibuster which insurgents on both sides of the chamber have planned against it.

La Follette's announcement raised the ire of Senator Robinson, the democratic leader, who told the senate he thought it was a good time to invoke the cloture rule, limiting each senator to one hour on each bill taken up.

Pittman, of Nevada; Blease, of South Carolina, and Norris, of Nebraska, objected to an agreement to vote next Tuesday on the radio bill.

Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, in charge of it, later told the senate that unless the measure becomes a law there will be more than 1,200 radio stations broadcasting July 1 with a result that listeners-in could tune in only on local stations because of confusion in the air.

Lincoln's Words Heard by World By Use of Radio

Springfield, Ill., February 12.—(AP)—The words of Lincoln, spoken almost as though he himself were here again speaking them, were heard over the radio tonight, the 118th anniversary of his birth, by thousands of listeners here, where he had his home and where his body now rests, and throughout Illinois, the state where he first gained political prominence.

Two of the famous Lincoln-Douglas debates were radiocast by Chicago stations, with speakers representing the president and his fiery opponent. They were the Ottawa debate and the Freeport debate, both of which stirred the nation in 1858. WGN broadcast the first, and WLS the other. In addition to the debates, parts of John Drinkwater's play, "Abraham Lincoln," were broadcast by WMAQ players, while others listened to the Gettysburg speech, broadcast from WGBS, New York.

Here today residents and visitors from all parts of the country walked the same paths Lincoln trod, made pilgrimages to his home, viewed the many intimate relics preserved here in memory of the civil war statesman, and his wife, and children.

Lincoln's tomb was draped and Boy Scouts and members of DeMolay paid tribute there, while crowds stood at hushed attention. Another ceremony was held at the state house, also a Lincoln shrine, because of his service here as a representative.

Tonight Major George H. Putnam, New York publisher, eulogized the emancipator in an address before the Lincoln Centennial association.

Pastors in Springfield, Chicago and churches throughout the state plan to devote their sermons tomorrow to the inspiration found in Lincoln's life.

In Chicago former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, speaking before the Covenant club, declared that "for not heeding the counsels of Lincoln this United States is today in more peril than at any other time since the war between the states."

GUTHRIE RESUMES RITUALISTIC DANCE SERVICE AT CHURCH

New York, February 12.—(AP)—Ritualistic dance services, interrupted two years ago after Bishop Manning attacked their propriety, are to be resumed tomorrow at St. Mark's in the Bouwerie.

Young women of the congregation are to present three tableaux in an attempt to show the "emotional reactions" presumed to be awaked by passages from the Acts of John, in which Jesus is shown dancing with his desciples. The rector, William Norman Guthrie, said he would explain the action in his sermon.

INTELLIGENT TALK FOR BABIES URGED BY DR. ALLEN COE

Spokane, Wash., February 12.—(AP)—Goo-goo baby chatter and ferocious fairy fiction should give way to philosophical conversation while training babies, for infants thrive on intelligent talk and being let alone, according to Dr. G. Allen Coe, of the Washington State college department of education.

The wolf that lunched off poor grandmother and the giant who wished to grind the bones of Jack of the Bean Stalk would be cast into the limbo, for Dr. Coe says that young America is fully as interested in information about airplanes, automobiles and submarines as he is in bedtime bugaboos.

"Don't talk baby talk to the child," he said, "talk to it like a philosopher. You get in return what you give the child."

Mother of Young Bandit Thought Him at Revival

:: MRS. CAVENDER SAYS BILL "NOT REAL BAD." ::

BY BEN COOPER.

William Cavender's mother wiped back the tears and smiled gamely. "Bill isn't a real bad boy," she said gently. "It's all such a shock and surprise to me—Lord knows, I didn't expect anything like this."

Standing at the door of her humble little home at 159 Berean avenue, with just such a drizzle falling through the dark night as when her son and Sam Boyce went, early Saturday morning to rob the Fernwood Pharmacy at Brookhaven, Mrs. N. J. Cavender expressed to a Constitution reporter the pent-up emotions of a mother whose beloved son is in prison charged with a serious crime.

"I didn't have any idea Bill was up to anything like that. If I had, he wouldn't have left this house Friday night," she said. "I thought he was at the revival—he's been going there so steady for the past weeks, you know, the revival over at Gastile and Tye streets."

To Stick by Son.

Mrs. Cavender has no intention of abandoning her son to the stern justice demanded by an inexorable law for burglary, without helping as much as she is able, she let it be known.

With a touch of regret in her voice that told of an ache she was trying to conceal, Mrs. Cavender admitted that her boy drank a bit at times. "But he wasn't a real drinker by any means," she defended. "He'd just take a drink with the boys once in a while— and he's never been in trouble with the police before.

"Read Jesse James stories? I guess not. You see, Bill doesn't read much. Not that he can't read, for he went to school all right, but then he just doesn't read much. He went to the old Boys' High until it burned."

At Home Friday.

"Bill was at home Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock when that crippled Sewell boy called for him," she said. "They stayed here for a while and laughed and carried on with the folks. After a while, Bill and the other boy went out, and I didn't see them again until I heard about it."

"Bill has been out of work," his mother went on. "He went to the country some time ago and got sick. Then he came back a short time ago and has been taking treatments at Grady hospital ever since. Out much at night? Not so awfully much. Bill mostly stayed around home—except when he went to meetings."

Expected Son's Help.

Bill Cavender's imprisonment will go rather hard on his widowed mother, as she was looking to him to help support the family when he regained his health.

In spite of her gameness in answering questions, those tears just would form on her bitten cheeks. A girl's voice sounded from the room just off the rear of the little hallway: "Mother, don't talk about it too much, or you'll get in that same nervous state you were this morning."

"I'm all right," she replied to her daughter.

But tears kept welling onto her cheeks, and her shoulders sagged a trifle as she stood, alone, framed in the lighted doorway of the stricken home.

OFFICIALS CONFIRM D'AUTREMONT CAPTURE

Portland, Ore., February 12.—(United News.)—The greatest manhunt in recent years was believed to be drawing to a close tonight, in the opinion of postal authorities here who today received official confirmation of a report that Hugh D'Autremont had been captured in Manila.

D'Autremont and his brothers, Ray and Roy, were sought in connection with the attempted robbery of a Southern Pacific train on October 11, 1923, near Siskiyou, Ore.—an isolated station near the Oregon-California line. Dynamite was used and the blast snuffed out the life of one man. Three others were shot down.

Unusual methods of hiding had been selected by D'Autremont, as he was found serving as a private in the 31st infantry while the government he was serving was placing a huge price on his head totaling several thousand dollars.

Postal authorities here were hopeful that Hugh D'Autremont would give them clues leading to the hiding place of the other two elusive brothers and thus end the hunt which has engaged the attention of hundreds of men.

PROBE IS ASKED OF COTTON SEED PURCHASING FIRMS

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—Investigation by the federal trade commission of activities of industries purchasing cotton seed for refining, crushing and otherwise processing was demanded today in a resolution by Representative McDuffie, democrat, Alabama. The report would be made to the next congress.

The resolution would have the commission ascertain whether companies engaged in this business constituted a monopoly in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act. It was referred to the house commerce committee for consideration.

"It appears that the price paid the producers of cotton seed throughout the south," McDuffie said in a statement, "is fixed by three or four giant companies owning and controlling the various small operators in southern states.

"I have introduced the resolution with a view of ascertaining whether these large corporations are operating in violation of the anti-trust laws. We may be able to help the cotton farmer by investigating these large interests engaged in buying and processing cotton seed."

MAY LINK BANDITS WITH ROBBERY CASES

was taken into custody in a waiting automobile nearby.

Refuting several previous reports regarding a "mysterious tip" over the telephone and other erroneous descriptions of the attempted robbery, Officer Rowell in a detailed account to The Constitution Saturday declared that he had maintained a vigil over the Barnham store for several weeks, that none of the youths were intoxicated and that it is his belief that Boyce, apparent ring-leader of the trio, was responsible for a number of robberies in DeKalb county during the past three weeks.

According to Officer Rowell, the automobile used by Boyce, Sewell and Cavender drove up to the vicinity of the drug store at 12:45 a. m. Two figures emerged and tried the doors of the drug store and the grocery store adjoining. Evidently finding the doors locked, the two youths reentered the machine and drove south on Peachtree road.

At 20 minutes before 2 o'clock, the car returned, Officer Rowell stated. Boyce alighted and walked to the show-window of the drug store. Placing his back to the window he shouted: "All right!" and one of the occupants of the car "raced" the engine. Simultaneously, Boyce crashed the window with a boulder, shouting meanwhile: "Keep it up!" The noise from the automobile, however, did not prevent Officer Rowell, who was watching from a house across the street, from hearing the crash of the glass on the pavement.

Follows Burglars.

Summoning "Jim" Woodall, manager of the grocery store and owner of the house from which he watched the robbers, Officer Rowell darted across the street and plunged through the aperture in the window less than a minute after Cavender and Boyce had entered. Woodall, armed with an automatic revolver, ran to the rear of the store and hid.

The noise of the officer's feet on the broken glass alarmed Boyce, who was opening a candy case. He bolted for the rear room, while Cavender rifling the cigar counter in the rear of the front room, dashed ahead of him. Officer Rowell said.

Thinking the men had opened the rear door and would escape, the policeman dashed at full speed into the prescription room, but drew up short when he was accosted by Boyce, menacing a shining pistol. Boyce, the officer said, had flattened himself against a near partition and aimed pointing his pistol at the officer, poised the trigger. The cartridge failed to explode and Officer Rowell shot Boyce falling to the floor.

Fire Three Times.

Cavender, apparently very much frightened, cowered over a washstand and despite the fact that the officer's back was partly turned towards him fired three bullets over the latter's head, one missile striking the ceiling. As Boyce fell, Cavender rushed into a small room where, upon Rowell's command, he dropped his gun and held up his hands. The mortally wounded Boyce attempted to escape but fell, dead, after taking a few steps.

Returning to the waiting automobile, Officer Rowell found Sewell in the rear seat of the machine, a quart of corn liquor by his side. The bottle was almost full, the officer said, and Sewell and Cavender gave little evidence of having been drunk.

Substantiating Cavender's latest statement, Officer Rowell said that the captured youth, shaking and in a state of collapse, blamed Boyce for the robbery immediately after he had thrown his gun to the floor. "Boyce made me do it—" he is reported to have gasped. "He made me take the gun and told me to do my stuff."

Previous Robberies.

Federal postoffice authorities investigated Saturday with a view toward instituting proceedings for attempted robbery of the postoffice, but halted activity when it was shown that the youths had made no attempt to enter the postoffice.

The Barnham drug store was robbed three times previously within the past ten months, Dr. S. P. Harkey, manager, said. In each instance the front window was smashed. This fact as evidence that a number of other robberies in the neighborhood were executed in similar manner led police to believe that Boyce, and probably Cavender, had staged the other store breaks.

Presence of $8.30 in pennies in the automobile with Sewell led police to believe the three youths robbed Turner's grocery store earlier Friday night. Thursday night the Hambruch store, a half mile north on Peachtree road, was entered in the same manner as was the Barnham store Saturday morning—a rock being used to smash the window and a racing automobile being parked nearby.

Cavender and Sewell will be given preliminary hearings Monday morning, it was stated. Neither prisoner had been in consultation with counsel late Saturday night. Cavender has not been visited by or in touch with his mother and three brothers, he said.

APPLY SAGE TEA TO DARKEN FADED HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients. It is known as Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur Compound and can be obtained at all drug stores for only 75 cents a bottle.

While gray faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—(adv.)

chool Systems in 9 Cities Compared To Plan in Atlanta Through Questionnaire Form

nswers Show Big Boards Unruly and Give Other Data of Costs and Elections.

Large boards of education are cumsome and the tendency is to reee the number of members, accordto answers of nine cities to a estionnaire sent by Mrs. J. H. ulineau, chairman of the citizenp committee of the Atlanta Parentacher association.

Methods of election in most cases o differed from the method used Atlanta, and for the most part re selected from special school dis-cts, answers showed.

The average cost per year per pupin those nine cities is at least 0 more for public school educational vantages than it is in Atlanta, while re are in most cases a maximum of seven members of the board of education.

Practically all these boards are completely divorced from the city government, and in at least two cases have special tax levying powers.

Costs Are Compared.

The lowest costs per pupil reported was at Philadelphia, cost $70, and at Ogden, Utah, where it was figured at $76 per year. It is $58 in Atlanta; Topeka, Kan., $77; Spokane, Wash., $85; Los Angeles, $92, and Richmond, $85.

Detroit gets $2,500,000 annually from Michigan state for operation of municipal schools and Richmond receives $250,000 from Virginia. All the cities receive state aid.

Free school books are furnished by all the cities and St. Louis furnishes in addition to these, all supplies.

Los Angeles is the only one of the cities that has a technological high school, but the tendency is to establish these. St. Louis at this time is planning one and other cities expect to have them. Most of the cities have technical courses in the high school.

Co-educational high schools predominated throughout answers, and almost every city had these, even where there were special technological schools for boys.

Religion was not taught in public schools in any instance, although the Bible was read in some. In most cases the teaching of any religion or doctrine was barred by state statutes.

So Clean Inside, No Fear of Perspiration Offense, However Over-Heated

Once a person realizes the wonderful properties in cascara, no other laxative in the market would ever be considered.

It's no trick to "clean out the bowels." Dozens of things will do that. But a little natural cascara purifies the system clear through. Cleanses even the pores of your skin. Renders perspiration as inoffensive as so much dew! The old-fashioned way was "salts." They get action, but they take the mucous membrane along with the waste matter! Mineral oils are gentler, but they leave the bowels with a film of poisons for the blood to carry off through the pores. But when you cascarize the system, you get rid of all the poisons by normal muscular action of the bowels.

If you have the habit of taking medicine for constipation; or even for auto-intoxication, stop it. For a candy cascaret is a delightful form in which to take cascara; children love them, and the taste tempts most grown-ups to have "more."

And what a comfort to know you are in that clean, wholesome condition that does away with any need of deodorants, even in warmest weather! Try a cascaret tonight—see how you feel next day, and for days after! With the skin fresh and fragrant. All druggists, 10c and 25c.

"ANYTHING that gets results, was all the thought I ever gave to laxatives. In those days my perspiration was so acid, it used to rot my clothes. Then a doctor tipped me off to those wonderful little sweeteners—

GAMBRELL IS NAMED LEGAL AID SOCIETY HEAD

Following a meeting at which the Atlanta Lawyers' club went on record as indorsing the work of the Atlanta Legal Aid society in curbing the activities of "loan sharks" and similar agencies, the Legal Aid society held its annual meeting Saturday, featured by a review of the past year's accomplishments and election of officers.

Officers elected to serve the society for the coming year are E. S. Gambrell, president; William G. Grant, secretary; Roy LeCraw, treasurer; John L. Tye, Jr., and Marion Smith, vice presidents, and J. L. R. Boyd, general counsel. The following members were elected to the board of directors: Harold Hirsch, Horace Russell, Grover Middlebrooks and Dr. W. E. Davis.

The Legal Aid society is supported by the Community Chest, furnishing free legal aid to Atlantans who cannot afford legal protection in matters of usurious loans and other forms of extortion, or lack the ability to deal with money sharpers.

During 1926 the society filed over 200 injunctions against "loan shark" agencies operating as salary buyers or loan indorsers, and asked the cancellation of their contracts when found to be illegal; obtained numerous indictments against such agencies while at the same time carrying on a publicity campaign against the offenders with a view both to education of possible victims and their employers.

The result, the report of the society sets forth, has been that dozens of "loan sharks" have ceased operation in Atlanta, while the remainder—about 60—have reduced their monthly rates of interest from 60 per cent to approximately 10 per cent. Wharton Wilson is chairman of the committee handling this phase of the society's work.

Domestic relations, industrial accidents and work among pauper and indigent prisoners were among other phases of the society's 1926 program.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY SEEKS DATA ON PAST

Organized effort toward the compilation and preservation of data and facts valuable in the history of Atlanta will begin with the first general meeting of the Atlanta Historical society at the Atlanta Woman's club on the evening of March 7.

Walter McElreath, president of the new organization, urges that all curators and members of the society be present, and that anyone interested in joining or aiding the body in any way notify Miss Ruth Blair, state historian, who has been elected secretary and treasurer. The society is particularly anxious to get old diaries or letters relating to the history of the city, also cuts and pictures of Atlanta and prominent Atlantans of former days.

GIDEONS SEEKING CHURCH SUPPORT THROUGH BIBLES

National directors of the Gideon club Christian Traveling Men's Association of America, at a recent meeting in Chicago adopted the suggestion of W. L. Hardin, of West End, Georgia trustee of the organization, that Bibles be mailed to ministers throughout the country in a move to gain their support to Gideon work, it was announced Saturday by J. L. McCord, Georgia treasurer of the Gideons.

The association was founded 27 years ago with the idea of promoting good fellowship among traveling men, and has since done much to refute the popular theory that a traveling salesman's stock in trade is his flask, deck of cards and risque jokes. In uniting Christian "men of the road" in a common bond of fellowship, the organization has placed 900,000 Bibles in hotel rooms throughout the country, and is now undertaking the task of supplying foreign hotels and prisons.

The Atlanta camp of the association meets each Saturday noon at the Wesley Memorial church.

SECRETARY OF WAR DESCRIBES INLAND WATERWAY WORK

St. Louis, Mo., February 12.—(AP)—Development of inland waterways and what it means particularly to the middle west in permanent farm relief was described here tonight by Dwight F. Davis, secretary of war, at the Lincoln day banquet of the young republicans of Missouri.

Mr. Davis related that the government is spending about $65,000,000 for maintenance and development of waterways and for flood control and is determined to help the farmer and also the consumer who will each benefit by cheap and accessible transportation facilities. Last year Mr. Davis explained, the farmers who shipped about 10,000,000 bushels of grain from St. Louis over the federal barge line added a profit of about four cents a bushel by virtue of the cheaper rates.

LETTER CARRIERS HELD ON CHARGE OF ROBBING MAIL

Two special delivery messengers of the Atlanta postoffice were arrested Saturday by postoffice inspectors on charges of theft of special delivery letters, according to announcement by Joe P. Johnston, inspector in charge.

The men held are: Nathaniel Jeffrey, who was arrested by Inspectors Frank Shumate and Clyde Fleming, and William A. Clark, who was arrested by Inspector Fleming.

Jeffrey is charged with theft of the test mail, postoffice inspectors believing the evidence to be conclusive. Contests of the test mail were recovered, it was said. Clark is charged with theft of a special delivery letter and forgery of the delivery receipt. Evidence is believed conclusive in his case also, and Clark will be given a preliminary hearing Monday before United States Commissioner L. S. Ledbetter.

Inspector Johnston announced also that Inspectors Reese and Ward Saturday caused the arrest in Tampa, Fla., of John T. Oliver, Tampa letter carrier, on charges of mail theft. Test mail was recovered and the evidence is complete against Oliver, it was stated.

DRINK WATER WHEN KIDNEYS HURT YOU

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.—(adv.)

Memories of the great revival conducted in Atlanta in 1917 by Billy Sunday, nationally renowned evangelist, during which thousands of Atlantans and Georgians were converted following the forceful sermons, will be brought back to citizens again Monday and Tuesday nights at the Baptist Tabernacle when Billy Sunday delivers two sermons.

Extensive preparations have been completed to welcome the famous evangelist on his arrival at the Terminal station at 7:40 o'clock Monday morning. Among the prominent Atlantans who will greet him as he steps from a train from Mobile, Ala., where he has been conducting a six weeks revival, will be: Governor Clifford Walker, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Outlaw, personal friends of the evangelist, Louie D. Newton, editor of The Christian Index, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Boland, W. Bayne Gibson, Walter Candler and others.

Mr. Sunday has received many invitations to speak in Stone Mountain, the federal prison, before the Kiwanis club and other civic organizations during his stay in the city.

He will speak to two groups of federal prisoners at 10:30 and 11:30 o'clock Monday morning at the penitentiary and Monday night will make his first appearance in a pulpit in Atlanta at the Tabernacle. Governor Walker and Mayor Ragsdale have agreed to deliver addresses of welcome to the famed evangelist and introduce him to his audience. On Tuesday night he will be introduced by Governor-elect L. G. Hardman. A choir of 100 voices directed by D. L. Spooner will be a feature of the services.

Tabernacle officials have been busily engaged for the past few weeks in completing arrangements for Mr. Sunday's visit to Atlanta and in preparing to take care of the huge crowds which are slated to hear the evangelist preach. Thousands are expected to be turned away at the services despite the fact that numerous chairs have been secured and changes have been made at the church to seat the congregations.

MIAMI SUICIDE LIST IS GROWING

Miami, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—Police today recorded two suicides, a man and a woman, in adding to a list of more than eight others who have taken their own lives in Miami and the adjacent section within the past few weeks.

George Alexander, 87, Washington, D. C., died at a local hospital early today from the effects of slashing his throat here February 2. While lying on the operating table, he carried on a written conversation with physicians, admitting the attempt to end his life.

"How long will I live?" Alexander wrote. When told the time was short, he scribbled, "That's fine, I will be with my twin brother soon."

Because she had been accused wrongfully of stealing a guest's watch, Mrs. Mary Merrick, 35, believed to be of Duluth, Minn., died early today from swallowing poison at a local hospital where she was employed as maid. A bottle of disinfectant, half full, was found at her bedside. Policeman J. F. Rider reported the woman ran to him on the street shortly after midnight and asked what action she could take to clear her name from the theft charge. He said he advised her to call police headquarters. A lette, with her signature, was found addressed to Jesse Merrick, Duluth, believed to be her husband, in which she recounted her recent hardships here.

COMMISSIONER LYON COMES HERE TUESDAY

Dr. Charles E. Lyon, the American trade commissioner to Great Britain, is scheduled to visit Atlanta February

DR. CHARLES E. LYON.

15-16, according to advices from the foreign service division of the United States department of commerce, to the Atlanta district office.

Dr. Lyon's visit is regarded as of outstanding interest to southern manufacturers and producers dealing with Great Britain and the continent, it was stated by Harry O. Mitchell, Atlanta district manager of the department. He will make his headquarters at Mr. Mitchell's office in the Federal building.

The trade commissioner comes to Atlanta following three years' residence in London as official commercial representative for the United States government. He has an exceptional grasp of the English situation, both from a financial and economic standpoint, and has specialized on financial matters and is particularly well equipped to discuss British financial conditions with business men and bankers, it is said.

Graduating from Johns Hopkins university, he took post-graduate work in modern languages and served as instructor at Princeton and Williams college and later as head of the department at Clark university. He spent several years in study in Europe and during the war served as chief censor and interpreter at a German war prison camp. He entered the service of the federal government in July, 1920, and was appointed assistant chief of the western European division, bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, in 1921.

A luncheon will be given in his honor by the Atlanta Foreign Trade club on Wednesday at the chamber of commerce.

Dr. Lyon will be available for conferences at the Atlatna district office during the two days he is here, it was announced.

LIME RATE REVISION RELIEF FOR BUILDERS

The state public service commission Saturday made public a revision of intrastate rates on lime in Georgia which will be far-reaching in its effect and will bring relief to the building industry, according to James A. Perry, chairman of the commission. The revision is a part of a general revision of all freight rates between points in Georgia being worked out by the commission.

In outlining the details of the revision of rates on lime the commission issued the following statement:

"At the present time the rates on lime are in a very chaotic condition, and for a long time there have been many discriminations existing, particularly against local or intermediate points, in favor of the larger cities, and the purpose of the general revision being made by the Georgia commission is to remove these discriminations and place all persons and localities on an equal footing. It was stated at the office of the commission that one of the principal producing points of lime in Georgia is located at Ladds, and the manufacturers at Ladds heretofore have been at a great disadvantage in meeting competition of their competitors in Alabama and Tennessee, but the new rates will place Ladds on a competitive basis with their competitors. It was also pointed out that Georgia is rich in lime deposits, and it is anticipated that with a fair adjustment of rates as is contemplated in the new schedule, the manufacturers of lime will be encouraged to develop these Georgia lime deposits.

"The rates prescribed by the Georgia commission provide for a carload minimum weight of 30,000 pounds, but the commission has also provided a lower rate where as much as 50,000 pounds is shipped. The following statement shows the present rates from Ladds, Ga., and the rates ordered by the Georgia commission, both for the 30,000-pound and 50,000-pound cars, and reflects the discrepancies and discriminations which have heretofore existed, but will be removed as a result of the Georgia commission's order."

Layer in Upper Air Bends Radio Waves Back to Earth

VERIFICATION OBTAINED BY SCIENTISTS

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—Existence of a layer in the upper air which bends radio waves back to earth has been verified, the Carnegie institute announced today, in experiments conducted by Dr. G. Briet and Dr. M. A. Tuve, research investigators of its department of terrestial magnetism.

Were it no for that "ceiling," it was explained, the radio waves would pass steadily outward into space, rendering long distance transmission impossible.

In a series of experiments during 1926, in cooperation with the naval research laboratory, the bureau of standards, and other agencies, the investigators found that a receiver at a given point, under favorable conditions, would record at least two pulses for every pulse sent out by the generating station. They proved that one comes by a direct horizontal path, while the other travels by way of the "ceiling," reaching the receiver as an "echo," or "reflection." As the latter path is the longer of the two the pulse traversing it arrives about one-thousandth of a second later.

By ingenious devices the investigators succeeded in recording photographically these pulses and in measuring the difference in time of arrival. This enabled them to compute the effective height of the "ceiling," which they found generally to be about one hundred miles above the earth, although it rose and fell within a range from 50 to 130 miles.

The experiments showed that variations in the height of this layer are often very sudden, and that probably it is at a greater height in fall than in summer and in the afternoon than in the morning.

They also revealed that changes in the layer account for many of the peculiarities of radio transmission. "Fading," for example, was found to be due in part to a change in intensity of reflection and not altogether to the interference of the ground and reflected waves. Again, this study showed that the quality of the reflex waves may be affected by the character of the reflecting surface, a bumpy or corrugated surface producing "multiple reflections," causing interference, confusion, and even "fading" when waves happened to neutralize one another.

If you expect to be rewarded for the favor you gave, you did not give it as a favor, but as an investment.

Fortune Is Seen For Miss Alice In 'Black Gold'

Muskogee, Okla., February 12.—(AP) A fortune in the "black gold" of Oklahoma may be resting in mother earth for Miss Alice Robertson, former congresswoman.

Feverish activity was everywhere in evidence at her farm, "Sawokla," at the edge of this city today as preparations were made to "drill in" a well that already has brought gas and is expected to produce oil.

With a chicken dinner under their belts, served by "Miss Alice," the drillers went to their work with a will today.

Hundreds of citizens of Muskogee crowded around the well, which is near the Soldiers' Memorial hospital, and two movie cameramen snapped scenes. Doctors and officers of the hospital, who hold stock in the company drilling the well, were in the crowd.

Charles N. Whaley, Muskogee newspapermen, who prompted the well, is seriously ill at his home. Messenger boys kept him informed of the progress of the drilling.

Arrangements have been practically completed whereby the gas from the well can be sold to the Soldiers' hospital on a direct line. The well is estimated at a 1,500,000-foot gasser now, and it is figured this would net the company a profit from $9,000 to $12,000 a year. Miss Robertson holds a one-eighth royalty.

CLASH PREDICTED ON CITY CHARTER

city government would receive $50,000 more for public improvements and operation of departments.

Board Responsible.

No tax over 8 mills for school purposes could be levied without the favorable vote of a majority of the voters, even if the limit were placed at 10 mills, according to the plan. The newly-created board, under the committee's plan, would be responsible and liable for its own acts, and the only connection it would have with city council would be to make a budget before January 15 each year, submit it to council for certification. If it were certified, the tax would be levied accordingly.

Horace Russell, member of the special joint committee from the school board, and W. W. Gaines, member from the board of education, will join in an effort to sell the plan to the joint committee at the meeting Thursday night.

In addition to Mr. Russell, J. Allen Couch, chairman of the school committee of city council, and Wylie Moore are members of the joint committee, while Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board, and W. D. Hoffman, chairman of the current expenditures committee of the board, are members from that body.

Confer With Mayson.

Mr. Russell and Mr. Gaines were named a special committee from the joint committee to confer with City Attorney James L. Mayson in preparing a proposed charter amendment to be submitted to the people in an effort to establish Atlanta's school system on a living basis.

If the joint committee Thursday night approves the paper, the several members will carry it to the respective bodies concerned and ask them to support it in the referendum. It appeared Saturday night that the main features will be preserved although there was some discussion as to whether it would be advisable to place a limit on the tax levying power. This was precipitated by the realization, officials said, that the school system might again outgrow the money-raising power of the new proposal and that another charter change would be necessary.

Mr. Mayson already has given the plan the legal okey it sought before presented to the joint committee, and it is ready to submit, it was said.

The newly established board would be free from any councilmanic entanglements to be divorced entirely from any responsibility to that body for its actions. Members would be held liable for over-expenditures, however, by the new plan, and would, therefore, transact the affairs of the department with that in mind, observers said.

The Georgia legislature will be asked to authorize the favored plan, which people will vote on at the polls.

LOVE NOTES MARK VALENTINE DAY

tary, fragmentary, supplementary and various other forms of amorosity will hold sway over the palpitating hearts of the populace as Valentines come and go in an endless stream of affectionate greeting.

It's the day of all days for lovers Also for fools who want to rush into matrimony where wise men fear to tread. Eke for shy and timorous maidens and bashful swains, faint of heart but firm in faith who fear to declare themselves other than through Valentines. Likewise it's a great day for vendors of cards with naked Cupids aiming golden arrows at big red hearts cooking over the flames of love's altar.

"I Love You" is the official anthem of St. Valentine. This is usually a big lie the rest of the year but it's 100 per cent true on Valentine's day.

It's a day when old men send foolish words to flappers. When old maids slyly slip sugary messages in envelopes addressed to eligible old widowers. When school kids send naughty notes to teacher and when college boys commit themselves in writing to what they'd never dare say in words.

St. Valentine's day. What a flood of memories it brings to the oldsters and what keen anticipation it brings to youthful hearts. The witching moment when a resounding thwack is heard at the front doors. A chorus of scurrying feet and half suppressed shrieks of mirth. And there on the door step, tied to a rock is a Valentine. A day when thoughts of love supplant thoughts of the room rent being due. When children talk of hearts instead of examination papers and when they write of kisses instead of the binomial theorem. A day when old folks remember tenderly those moments of bliss long gone instead of thinking about the rheumatism and unpaid installments. A day of laughter, freshness, youth, beauty and love, sweet love.

'Ray, 'ray, 'ray for St. Valentine.

YOUNG DRAMATISTS DECLARED NEEDED IN UNIVERSITIES

New Haven, Conn., February 12.—(AP)—If Barrie had tried to written "Peter Pan" in a college class room, "it would have been suppressed by the cut and dried teachers of drama because it did not follow the old ideas," Miss Irma Kraft, of the International Playhouse, of New York, said at the round table discussion of college dramatics at the conference on the drama at Yale university today.

"Or suppose Eugene O'Niell had written 'Desire Under the Elms' in a class room," she continued. "The killing of the baby would never have been allowed, and the drama would have lost one of its most significant plays in the last decade."

"The intense desire of the American universities to suppress originality is one of the best ways of preventing American drama from progressing," she said. "You cannot have old, cut and dried teachers in the dramatic chairs. You must have young, virile dramatists who can inspire originality, who can feel life and can express that life on the stage."

Haverty Store Managers Stage Big Banquet As Feature of Convention Program Here

Photograph above shows executives and branch managers of the Haverty Furniture company who assembled in Atlanta the past week. A banquet for managers was a feature of the social activities of the program. Reading from left to right they are: Seated, Fred T. Smith, B. T. Stanford, L. A. Witherspoon, D. B. Rustin, J. J. Haverty, S. B. Rustin, Clarence Haverty. Standing, first row, A. C. Branch, T. C. McGahee, Frank Thorpe, W. L. M. Austin, Rudolph Rustin, B. J. Covey, George M. Sanders, J. J. Haverty, Jr., John R. Haverty. Second row standing, M. B. Spencer, R. L. Heath, H. W. Tidwell, E. V. Markham, Robert Haverty, C. E. Russell, Walter Gregory.

A high light in the numerous features of the annual convention of managers of the Haverty Furniture company, in progress here from Monday through Thursday, was the managers' banquet Thursday night at the Atlanta Athletic club. In addition to the elaborate feast and musical features of wide variety by well-known local artists, there were brief talks by various guests.

During business sessions each day various phases of the furniture business were taken up and business conditions reviewed by speakers. Reports of sales methods, business routine and similar matters were heard, with an entertainment program interspersed to break the monotony of business.

The program Monday consisted of sightseeing tours for the visitors and visits to the local Haverty store, after which the stockholders' and directors' meetings were held.

J. J. Haverty, president of the Haverty company, and Clarence Haverty, vice president, were the principal speakers at a meeting Wednesday morning. At this meeting it was impressed on the managers that the ideal of the Haverty company is "faithful, efficient and courteous service."

Mr. Haverty traced the growth of the company since its beginning in 1885 from a one-story building on Hunter street to its present size of 14 stores. Stores in Fort Worth and Little Rock were added to the Haverty chain during 1926.

Managers at the convention were B. T. Stanford, Fred T. Smith, Robert Haverty, S. B. Rustin, L. A. Witherspoon, D. B. Rustin, J. J. Haverty, Jr., F. W. Haas, T. C. McGahee, R. L. Heath, B. J. 41 STUDENTS HELD IN HARVARD RIOT

Cambridge, Mass., February 12.—(AP)—The Cambridge police and Harvard students were counting the cost tonight, while the courts and university officials withheld decision, of a midnight vaudeville show which, for no reason at all, became a riot in Harvard square early today and sent seven to hospitals and 41 to court.

The casualties were not severe and had been reduced tonight to aching heads and bruised bodies. The police spoke of the melee, which called out all their night reserves, without vindictiveness, and lower bail than usual in such cases was permitted most of those arrested.

Under graduate opinion, however, was not quieted and blamed the police for precipitating what was originally a rough and noisy demonstration into serious combat.

The students say that it was at this point that Arthur E. French, Jr., of Winchester, president of the senior class, and the football player who saved the day for Harvard in the last game against Dartmouth, mounted a taxicab and tried to calm the students. They also say that he was unceremoniously arrested and that it was this, as much as anything, which turned the crowd from fun to serious opposition to the police.

All arrested pleaded not guilty to disturbing the peace before Judge Robert Walcott and at the request of Dean Chester N. Greenough, of Harvard, all cases were continued until February 18. A few defendants faced charges of assault on officers also. The university officials refused to comment on the affray until they concluded their investigation.

1 KILLED, 3 HURT AS AUTOMOBILE IS HIT BY TRAIN

Birmingham, Ala., February 12.—(AP)—One man was killed and three other persons were injured, two perhaps fatally late today when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Louisville and Nashville freight train at a street crossing here.

Mangled beneath the truck when the engine of the train ploughed into the car, the driver, L. D. Bartlette, 22, said to be of Cullman, Ala., was killed instantly. His wife and a stepdaughter, Margaret E. Watson, were taken to a local hospital in a dying condition. The fourth victim, Edmond Roper, Birmingham, also was removed to the hospital but his injuries were not considered dangerous.

UPSHAW CLOSES CAREER IN HOUSE

Washington, February 12.—(United News.)—Combining eulogy of Abraham Lincoln with a plea for continuance of the prohibition law, Representative Upshaw, Georgia, democrat dry leader, today sang his "swan song" in the house. Upshaw was defeated at the last primary elections and his term expires March 4.

With a whisky bottle clutched in one hand, the Georgian called upon government officials to set the example of prohibition by refusing to indulge in intoxicating liquors.

"Abraham Lincoln, born 118 years ago today, envisaged a dry nation three-quarters of a century ago," Upshaw declared.

"He was as good a democrat as he was a republican and a better American than he was either," the represenative stated.

Liquor purchased today through bootleg channels is not all that it seems, Upshaw charged, as he pointed to a cut bottom on the whisky bottle, through which, he said, the original contents had been withdrawn and inferior stuff inserted.

"Let the president, the vice president and every member of the cabinet and the popular speaker of the house openly and unitedly announced that they will not attend any function, social, fraternal, commercial or diplomatic, where intoxicating liquors are served," he proposed.

HandicapNips Agriculture, Says Dunlap

Jacksonville, Ill., February 12.—(United News.)—"Never before has agriculture been placed at such a disadvantage in comparison with industry, commerce and labor," declared Assistant Secretary of Agriculture R. W. Dunlap, before the Farmers' Grain Dealers' Association of Illinois here.

Discussing a solution, Dunlap avoided mention of the McNary-Haugen bill in congress. He urged decreased acreage, encouragement of cooperative marketing, despite malicious opposition by bankers in some sections, great yield per acre and better knowledge of markets.

Through collective bargaining organizations the farmers can prevent disastrous ups and downs in prices, Dunlap said.

WOMAN TO FACE MURDER CHARGE

Metter, Ga., February 12.—(AP)—Trial of Joe Holloway and Mrs. W. M. Davis, charged with the murder of Pat Suddeth and the shooting of Alex Larrissey here last year, will begin Tuesday, according to an announcement made today by the court.

Holloway has been tried before, the case ending in a mistrial. He will again go on trial for his life and Mrs. Davis is expected to face charges of murder for the first time.

The slaying has already resulted in the sentencing of M. B. Moseley for life imprisonment. A motion for a new trial will be made at this term by Moseley.

The Suddeth killing has been of widespread interest. Mrs. Davis claims to be the slayer of Suddeth, Alex Larrissey, the companion of Suddeth, testified Holloway and Moseley were their assailants. The shooting occurred at the home of Mrs. Davis at an early hour in the morning. Mrs. Davis declared she fired after Suddeth and Larrissey attempted to force their way into her home.

Holloway attempted to establish an alibi at his trial. Since his trial Larrissey, the chief state witness, died. This will make the prosecution of Mrs. Davis and Holloway difficult but Solicitor General A. S. Bradley stated this morning Larrissey's testimony as given at the last trial would be read to the court and the stenographer who transcribed the evidence will be sworn as a witness to confirm it, he said.

Mrs. Davis is still in jail, bond having been denied her.

Holloway is a member of a prominent family in this section. Since his first trial he has married the daughter of Mrs. Davis.

ALMOST GLAD PAL DIED, SAYS BANDIT

shoved a gun in my hand and said, 'Do your stuff!'"

Sewell Indignant.

Willie Sewell shifted on his bunk and peered out into the corridor. "What I'd like to know is how you've newspaper guys say I was holding the auto for a getaway when I've got only one leg," he drawled. "I was asleep the whole time and didn't even know there was a robbery until I heard a couple of shots. Then this Rowell comes up and wallops me a couple times and frisks me. But he didn't find anything on me."

He paused. Then, in a loud voice: "I'm going to land that bird Rowell on the chaingang—he can't hit a minor and get away with it."

"I just got back in Atlanta Thursday morning and I only got out of the St. Bernard hospital in Chicago three weeks ago. I was working as a switchman on the I. H. B. at 47th and Kenzie in Chicago when I fell on some ice and slipped between some cars. That's how I lost the leg. They cut the rest of it off in the hospital."

Didn't Know Boyce.

"I hardly knew this here Boyce and didn't know anything about him. I wasn't hunting money because I have already entered suit against the railroad company for $10,000 damages and that was what I was worried about. Rowell didn't have any business clouting me."

Meanwhile in Brookhaven, proud citizens were pointing out "Cap'n Rowell." And in the Barnham drug store a "Rowell fund" list showed more than $50 subscribed.

"I'm sorry for anybody that gets in trouble," Officer Rowell declared, as a crowd surrounded him. "But those lads didn't have any harder time than I had and they had no business cutting loose with guns."

Cavender Scared.

"I was an orphan in Charlotte, N. C., when I was 12 years old. I've had my ups and downs—in fact the only reason I'm a policeman is because my bad health made me give up a job I kept for 10 years with a laundry in Atlanta. I've got a wife and four children, and when Cavender and Boyce flashed their guns on me, I didn't have time to argue the point. I wouldn't have shot Boyce if he hadn't pulled the trigger of his gun. It didn't explode—that's the only reason I'm not at the morgue instead of him. Cavender was too scared to hit me—he stood three or four feet from me and his shots didn't come close."

"Doc" Harkey, manager of the drug store, added an eloquent footnote to the tragedy. "Funny part about it is, that if they'd have pulled off the robbery according to plans, they wouldn't have received a penny for their efforts," he said. "Since we've been robbed every week or so, we've removed all money from the place. Boyce gave up his life for five boxes of cigars—that's all they had when Officer Rowell entered the room."

And that's the evidence.

Depew "Anchored to Bible And Belief in God," He Says

"95 PER CENT OF PEOPLE ARE ON TERMS WITH LORD"

Savannah, Ga., February 12.—(AP)—Chauncey M. Depew, commenting today on Thomas A. Edison's views on immortality as expressed by the inventor yesterday in his 80th birthday interview, said, "I am more firmly anchored to the Bible than ever before and believe implicitly in its teachings and the God it portrays."

Mr. Edison said that "the word 'God' has no meaning for me," but that "I do believe that there is a supreme intelligence pervading the universe and at times I believe that when a man dies the swarms of bilions of highly organized entities which live in the cells, desert the body, go out into space, keep on and enter another and last cycle."

Mr. Depew, who stopped here while en route for a visit to St. Augustine, Fla., said that "95 per cent of the people are generally on terms with the Lord,' he stated, "and that percentage of any body of people can always be relied upon as being in the right.

"I have always felt a real dependence on God," Mr. Depew continued. "My idea of God is personal rather than force. Not a personality, such as we are, of course, but a glorified, divine and infinite heart, brain and spirit—all comprehending, all powerful, never failing.

"I think of God as being interested in mortals and mortal affairs. Christ was His earthly manifestation, Christ, who understood, lived and toiled and suffered upon earth as men and women do, Christ, who died as we must do before we live again. Christ is God's pledge of love and understanding.

Not Chance Taker.

"I don't believe much in chance. You have to make things come your way and they will come your way if you will follow the rules of moderation, not worrying, of diversifying your interests, of trusting God and loving your fellow beings."

The aged railroad magnate and former senator has no sympathy with those who declare the world is going to the general "bow wows." "When I look back 75 years to the time when I first started out, consider the conditions then and now, I can see only a wonderful advancement along all lines. People are better now than then. They are healthier, happier and get more out of life. They understand the Word of God more and live closer to Him generally."

If Mr. Depew has a hobby, it is "moderation." That and that alone has been responsible for his long life, in his opinion. "Have your interests varied, never worry and indulge only in moderation in any of them," he stated, "and you are assured of a long and happy life. My only word of caution would be that you must indulge in moderation."

Mr. Depew, accompanied by a party of friends, arrived at the Union station shortly after 10 o'clock this morning on the Havana Limited of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad.

'Aging' Machine, $150,000 Booze Taken in Raids

New York, February 12.—(AP)—An electric "aging" machine and more than $150,000 worth of liquor seized in raids on restaurants in the theatrical district, were held by federal prohibition agents today.

Shortly after an announcement by Major Chester P. Mills, prohibition administrator for the New York district, that New York and vicinity were wetter than all the rest of the country combined, 30 agents, working in five squads got busy.

Raiders used crowbars to shatter a heavy door of a restaurant in West 46th street last night. An "aging" machine, cutting and bottling apparatus and liquor, federal agents say, was found at the Wicker restaurant in West 52d street. An agent squeezed through a trap door on the roof and lead a raid on Perrone's restaurant in West 49th street.

Liquor was seized and arrests also were made in four small restaurants in West 46th, West Ninth streets and Lexington avenue.

Hog Calling Contest Staged at Bainbridge; J. P. Cato Wins Prize

Bainbridge, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—The Georgia Swine Growers' association meeting and hog calling contest held here Saturday under the auspices of the Decatur County Agricultural association, with C. S. Hodges, president, and D. E. Sawyer, county agent, in charge, drew hundreds of farmers and other visitors to Bainbridge for the day.

The association was called to order at the courthouse by W. D. Hasty, president. E. H. Griffin, of Bainbridge, made the address of welcome. Talks were made by Dr. M. P. Jarnigan, of the State College of Agriculture, Athens, and Dr. E. M. Nighbert, of the bureau of animal industry, Washington.

Oblivious of the crowd that blocked traffic at every corner, Decatur county farmers, men and women, called hogs in the hog calling contest at 2:30 o'clock from the courthouse steps, as seriously as if it were their business in life.

First prize, a roll of wire, was won by J. P. Cato; second prize went to Tom D. E. Brown, while Carl Borck won third.

Following the valuable information gained from the lectures by the speakers in the morning and a jolly good time in the afternoon, farmers returned to their homes not regretful over the day off from duties and leaving in their wake echoes of calls never heard before in Bainbridge.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

At the January meeting of the Urban League board, it was voted by the directors to house and equip a baby welfare station, which will be in charge of a trained public health nurse for promotional and demonstration purposes. Cooperation was given from the city health department and the United States health service to take charge of the nursing end of this program. Colored physicians have volunteered their services.

This station comes as a result of the study of negro mortality in Atlanta, which showed negro infant mortality more than twice as great as that of white infants. There are 19 stations being operated for service among the white population.

Nothing has been so shocking to the whole negro population of Atlanta as the information given through last Wednesday papers concerning the abolishing of six night schools. Anyone who has visited the negro night schools of Atlanta has been attracted by the ardent desire of these under-privileged people to get some education. More than 4,000 negroes, ranging in age from 14 to 60 have attended as earnestly and as regularly as they do their churches. It will be most difficult to make a readjustment which will compensate in any large degree for the loss entailed. Employers of negro labor will perhaps be affected more largely than any one group.

The already too large death rate among the negro may gradually advance because of lack of information which such schools offer. The sum of $30,000 is a mighty small amount for the community to withhold from these loyal citizens at such a cost.

The citizens of Atlanta will have an opportunity to hear the Fisk university quartette, and Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, new president of Fisk, at First Congregational church, Houston and Courtland streets, on Sunday, February 20, at 3 o'clock. The quartette, besides filling several concert engagements successfully this season is one of the most popular performers on Nashville radio programs, and comes to this city with the reputation of being one of the best musical clubs sponsored by Fisk in many years.

Dr. Jones, newly inaugurated president of the University, is making a tour in the interest of higher education for colored people and may be expected to outline his plans and dreams for the future of the institution he represents. Since assuming the duties of president in September Dr. Jones, has because of his splendid training, broad vision, deep consecration and energetic personality, already succeeded in planting in the student body and alumni a spirit of optimism and high hope for the future of the university.

NO AGREEMENT MADE FOR ABIE'S IRISH ROSE

New York, February 12.—(AP)—Anne Nichols, author and producer of "Abie's Irish Rose," announced today that no agreement has been signed to sell the motion picture rights of the play.

FightToCleanUp 'HoodedOutlaws' Planned at Lyons

Lyons, Ga., February 12.—(AP)—A vigorous attempt to find indictments and ultimately clean out what is described as a "nest of hooded outlaws" who hold forth from Claxton to Tarrytown, including sections of the Oconee and Atlantic court circuits, will be made at a special term of court to be convened Monday, February 21, it was announced today by Solicitor General A. S. Bradley.

For more than two years, Mr. Bradley says, acts of violence, brutal whippings and ruthless killings have been going on in this section. The activities of the hooded men have attracted comment from the national press, and, because of their apparent tightly woven organization it has been next to impossible to fix the responsibility upon any known individuals.

The whipping of Wimberly A. Brown, an attorney who assisted the solicitor in the prosecution of five men charged with the murder of Willie Wilson, who was killed by members of a hooded band that visited his home, brought the situation to a climax. Those five men were acquitted.

Mr. Brown was taken from the streets by a number of masked men, escorted to the woods and beaten unmercifully. Similar acts, in which the victims in some cases, were brought back to the city unconscious and dumped on the streets, had preceded this incident.

Judge R. N. Hardeman is aroused at the situation and has expressed his condemnation in no uncertain terms.

Governor Walker has offered a substantial reward for the arrest and conviction of guilty persons and the Ku Klux Klan has added to this amount through Nathan Bedford Forrest.

Mr. Bradley has been gathering evidence to present to the grand jury for several months. Because of an accident which occurred in which his wife was seriously injured, the solicitor has not had opportunity to work on the case for the past few weeks, but before the special term convenes, he expects to have his facts in such form as will bring about indictments.

The flogging of F. B. Gordon, of Charlotte, Ga., by a band of hooded men who took him from his automobile last Saturday night in Montgomery county, is closely connected with the Lyons lawlessness, Mr. Bradley believes. He declared it was probable that the same men who whipped Brown were implicated in the Gordon flogging.

Gordon was told, after the whipping, that he had expresesd too much interest in certain court cases.

Don't Keep on Coughing—Stop It!

—Metro Studio.

Mrs. W. P. Smith

Macon, Ga.—"I caught cold and developed a severe cough. It would be much worse at night. Some nights I would cough the whole night long—could not sleep nor get any rest, and would be all tired out when morning came. I grew thin, weak and nervous, and was in very poor health when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, but by the time I had taken four bottles I was entirely well of my bronchial trouble and cough, and the nervousness had disappeared. I grew well and strong, have never had another spell of the kind since."—Mrs. W. P. Smith, 114 Duncan Ave.

DAHLONEGA TO GIVE BULLARD BIG WELCOME

BY CAPTAIN R. C. HAMILTON.

Dahlonega, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—The little county seat of Lumpkin, once the scene of a great gold rush and the site of a government mint, is feverishly preparing for one of the greatest days in its history—the welcome home next Saturday of General Robert Lee Bullard, former commandant of cadets at the North

ASSOCIATED PRESS (UNDERWOOD)
GEN. R. L. BULLARD

Georgia Agricultural college and celebrated as commander of the second army of the American expeditionary forces in France.

There will be salutes of artillery, an escort of honor, reviews of the college battalion and a cadet ball on Saturday night in the famous old college building, and General Bullard will remain through Washington's birthday, the following Tuesday, as the guest of Dahlonega friends.

The old public square will be decorated for the occasion, numerous social events are planned and it is expected that many Atlanta folk and friends from other cities and towns will visit Dahlonega for the cadet ball and during the succeeding days of the celebration.

Commandant in 1895.

General Bullard, as a first lieutenant in the United States army, was commandant of the cadet battalion of the North Georgia Agricultural college in 1895 and citizens of Dahlonega and graduates of those days have watched his military career with pride. He has kept up contact with friends in Georgia and still is an active member of the Dahlonega lodge of Masons.

Other past commandants and distinguished military officers have been invited to attend and are expected to spend several days here. Among them are Colonel William R. Dashiell, who immediately preceded General Bullard as commandant and who is now in charge of military education in the Atlanta High schools; Colonel Ezekial J. Williams, who followed General Bullard as commandant and who is now senior instructor of the Georgia National guard; Colonel Frank W. Rowell, R. O. T. C. officer of the Fourth Corps area, and Major General Johnson Hagood, commanding the Fourth Corps area. This will be the last public appearance of General Hagood before he leaves to take command of the department of the Philippines.

Among the prominent civilians attending the cadet ball will be Governor and Mrs. Walker, Governor-elect and Mrs. Hardman; Chancellor and Mrs. Snelling, of the University of Georgia; Attorney General George M. Napier and Mrs. Napier; Benjamin S. Barker, executive vice president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Barker; Judge Richard B. Russell, of the Georgia supreme court, and Mrs. Russell; Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture-elect, and Mrs. Talmadge; C. E. Martin, president of the Georgia Bankers' association, and Mrs. Martin; Colonel and Mrs. H. H. Dean, of Gainesville; Mr. and Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright; Mr. and Mrs. Buford Boykin; Mr. and Mrs. Bond Almand; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Dunlay, of Gainesville; Mr. and Mrs. Price Charters, of Gainesville, and General Harvey Hannah, of Nashville, Tenn.

Cadet Inspection.

Colonel Frank W. Rowell, R. O. T. C. officer of the Fourth Corps area, will make his official inspection of the cadet battalion during General Bullard's visit. It is hoped that this will result in placing the North Georgia Agricultural college upon the list of "distinguished colleges" from a military viewpoint, after a board from the war department makes an inspection.

Distinguished colleges are permitted to name five per cent of their honor graduates and these graduates are authorized to compete against all entries for examination for commissions in the United States army without having to stand any educational test. They need only to pass the physical examination.

The North Georgia Agricultural college already is one of the eight "essentially military" colleges in the country and the only one of the eight not classed as "distinguished." Army authorities have expressed the opinion that the institution is nearing the point where this distinction is possible.

SOCIAL FUNCTIONS OF SCHOOLS CALLED SHAMEFUL ORGIES

Washington, February 11.—Charges that social functions advertised as being held under the auspices of certain universities here were developing into shameful orgies attended by boys and girls of tender years, were made before the universities and schools committee of the board of trade by "Happy" Walker, dance orchestra leader and member of the committee.

Walker told the committee that faculty supervision of the affairs would eliminate these conditions. "Unless this is done," he added, "the only possible outcome would be a complete cessation of these functions after they had reached 'the impossible stage' and as this would put an end to my own work, I don't want to see it happen."

Merrit, Robert Burson, former manager of an Atlanta agency; James Belhet, of the home office of the Missouri State company, and Joe M. Little.

COAL STRIKE PROBABLE, SAYS STANDARD HEAD

Strong possibilities of a coal strike in April, based on news of the unsatisfactory conditions in bituminous fields, are seen by those familiar with the real situation, according to T. H. Austin, of the Standard Oil company.

What such a strike would mean to the country is pointed out by Mr. Austin, who relates the situation which developed during the strike of 1922, when bituminous field domestic coal sold for $8.50 per ton, f. o. b. the mines and higher and that coal of the "run of the mine" kind brought $7.50 per ton and more.

These prices were quoted to show that around $250 per car could be saved by the buying of coal now. In addition to such a saving, the grade of coal obtainable now as compared to the grade which might be secured in a general strike was emphasized.

Mr. Austin points out, too, that in the coming two months of wintry weather Atlanta coal users probably will have need of much coal, as the section has been visited by cold waves annually during February and March for many, many years.

Speaking of the strike situation in 1922, Mr. Austin said:

"It was difficult to obtain good Kentucky or northern Tennessee coals at any price, as the northern market took those coals at very high prices, and this territory was compelled to use Alabama coals.

"Compared with those prices one would save at least $250 per car by buying now and be able to get good coal, as against the possibility of saving a few cents per ton by waiting, if there should be no strike.

"If one intends buying before the strike, we strongly advise doing so immediately, because as the time approaches, and the strike appears to be inevitable, there will probably be a big rush to buy coal, and advancing prices."

Blase Broadway Flocks To View Clean Production

An indication of the trend of the public mind toward cleanliness in theater productions came to Atlanta Saturday in the nature of a telegram from A. L. Erlanger, of New York, to Lewis Haase, manager of the Erlanger theater here, bringing the information that 26,648 persons saw "Trelawny of the Wells" last week.

Even blase and sensation hunting Broadway crowds gave tremendous impetus to the success of this Pinero comedy, playing at the New Amsterdam theater, and one of the snappiest and most colorful comedy features of the season. It is free of the salacious and the so-called sex attraction.

The telegram to Manager Haase, below, speaks for itself:

"The big cast production of Pinero's comedy, "Trelawny of the Wells," played at the New Amsterdam theater this week to 28,648 persons, the largest gross receipts ever played to in a week of eight performances anywhere, at the prices of $1 to $3.50, by a regularly organized company in a dramatic presentation. These high receipts are particularly noteworthy at this time, as positive proof of the large audiences even in New York city for a wholesome play of the highest type properly presented.

HAZARDS INCREASE FOR BOOTLEGGERS

Chicago, February 12.—(AP)—The business of bootlegging is going to be increasingly hazardous in the Great Lakes zone from now on, as a result of conferences of the administrators of the various districts in the zone which ended here today.

The meeting resulted in the perfecting of plans for closer cooperation between enforcement units throughout the zone, which will make a network of traps for prohibition violators hard to get through, Maurice Campbell, administrator of the zone, said.

Shown above are three reasons why the Eliott-Fisher accounting machine business in 1926 showed a tremendous increase over 1925 sales. Left to right, W. A. Tracy, A. E. Bradshaw, district manager, and R. M. Cash. Mr. Tracy and Mr. Cash are leaders of the sales force.

Demand for accounting machines through the southeast has been marked over the past 12 months, according to A. E. Bradshaw, district manager of the Elliott-Fisher company, in pointing out the increase in business in 1926 over the 12 months of 1925.

The Elliott-Fisher company maintains offices, a service center and general distributing service for this territory in Atlanta, with a capable group of men well versed in accounting machine values and service.

Mr. Bradshaw has been with the company six years, while W. A. Tracy and R. M. Cash, of the sales department, are specialists in their work.

Mr. Tracy, who has had special training and systematizing and organization work, recently joined the Atlanta organization, coming here from the north, saying he was sold on Atlanta as the place he wanted to make his future home.

Mr. Bradshaw says that the Elliott-Fisher company is the largest exclusive manufacturer of accounting machines in the world. This company has recently acquired the Sunstraud Adding Machine company, and with this acquisition the name has been changed to the General Office Equipment corporation, Elliott-Fisher division and Sunstrand division.

The year 1926, according to Bradshaw, was the largest year in point of sales that the company has ever had as a whole and also the largest for Atlanta. And the outlook for the present year is even more encouraging than last year.

Seventh Audience Rehearsal
:: THE CONDUCTOR AND HIS AUDIENCE :: For Big Symphony Concerts

BY H. KNOX SPAIN.

"Onlooker" and "listener" in place—on time—and silent—"rehearsal" for the thirty-fifth concert of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra is called, Leide presents: Overture "Egmont"; Hungarian Fantasia (for piano and orchestra): Kammonnoi-Ostrow; a group of piano numbers, etude, A-flat, waltz, F minor and En Courant; overture, "Ruy Blas."

Hugh Hodgson.

Soloist today is Hugh Hodgson. Born in Georgia just a few more than 30 years ago. Graduate of the University of Georgia. First studied the piano in his native state, beginning when he was a small lad. Afterwards going to Germany, where he spent five years under the watchful care of Madame Stepanoff. Mr. Hodgson has concertized for a number of years in the United States and stands among the foremost American composers. This is his third season with the Atlanta Symphony orchestra.

Ludwig van Beethoven.

Another important feature of the program is the playing of the overture, "Egmont," in commemoration of Beethoven's death one hundred years ago. The entire musical world is combining in presentations of this master-composer's works during this year. It was March 25, 1827, that Ludwig van Beethoven, the greatest personality in the history of music, passed away. It is Beethoven who represents the fullest maturity, in emotional scope, in formal construction, and in instrumental treatment, of the allied classic forms of the piano-sonata, piano-concerto, string-quartet and orchestral symphony. Beethoven's love of nature, his reverence of God, his belief in the brotherhood of man are all reflected in his music.

Leide gives the signal to his 67 men in the orchestra—the program begins:

1. Overture, "Egmont." Ludwig van Beethoven (1770-1827). Goethe's famous tragedy of "Egmont" inspired Beethoven to write the incidental music for the drama. It is said that "Egmont" is one of the earliest examples, in modern times, of a great composer drawing his inspiration directly from the words of a great poet. The music of "Egmont" consists of an overture, four entr'actes, two songs and three pieces of incidental music. The overture opens with an introduction which foreshadows the main incident of the opening allegro. The first subject seems to typify Egmont as a hero and also as a lover. The second subject seems to represent Clara, the brave sweetheart of Egmont and tells of her love for him. The working out of the subjects, the Free Fantasia, is followed by the regulation recapitulation and coda, which Beethoven called "The Symphony of Victory." Just a few measures before the "Victory" there is an abrupt cut off by the strings to represent the incident of the decapitation of the hero. The close seems "to burn with the enthusiasm of patriotism."

2. Hungarian Fantasia, for the piano and orchestra—Franz Liszt (1811-1886). The "Fantasia" in woven around well-known Gypsy themes with similar elements as used in the rhapsodies. One of the main motifs is reminiscent of the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody." Several movements comprise the fantasy, alternating slow and lively.

3. Kammonnoi-Ostrow—Anton Rubinstein (1829-1894). The title takes its name from the fashionable resort on the Kammennoi Island in the River Neva, where Rubinstein spent many vacation days. The first subject in its broad serenity suggests a moonlit garden on a summer evening, the second subject depicting the conversation of two lovers whose tender words are interrupted by the tolling of a bell in the chapel and the chanting of the monks at even-song.

4. (a). Etude, a-flat, opus 25, No. 1. Frederic Chopin (1810-1849); (b). Waltz, F minor, opus 70, No. 2, Frederic Chopin; (c). En Courant—Benjamin Godard (1849-1895).

This group is played by Mr. Hodgson. The etude is often referred to as the "Harp Etude." It is flowing in character with a sort of plaintive singing melody. The waltz consists of three exquisite themes; the first is like the nocturne, the second light and the third brilliant like the waltz. En Courant means running. It depicts restlessness that seems never to cease and surges on to dramatic close.

5. Overture, "Ruy Blas"—Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdry (1809-1847). George P. Upton says of the overture, "Ruy Blas," though written for an occasion and in great haste, it is one of the most beautiful of the Mendelssohn overtures." It begins rather slow and stately in character. The first theme is suggested by the strings. Both are repeated and then the principal theme is given out by the first violins and flutes accompanied by the other strings. A repetition of the slow opening leads to the second theme. After a few measures the theme is boldly given out by the clarinet, bassoons and 'cellos. A short episode follows and the second subject is also developed. The various themes appear in due order and a vigorous coda closes the overture. The next "rehearsal" will concern the last concert of the 1926-1927 series. The entire program will consist of request numbers.

SPEEDY RUM CRAFT CAPTURED BY CUTTER

San Pedro, Calif., February 12.—(United News)—The speedy rum craft "220-A," believed to have figured in a gun battle between federal agents and four liquor runners at Lu Guna beach Thursday was captured today by the coast guard cutter "259" after a spirited chase off San Clemente island.

According to reports received at the coast guard base here the "259" will bring the rum boat into this port with crew and officers.

Meager dispatches said that 90 burlap sacks, containing an unknown quantity of liquor, had been found on the beach at San Clemente. Whether the runner had unloaded the liquor, seeing capture was inevitable, could not be determined from the report made by Boatswain G. F. Stepanoff.

The "220-A," according to reports here, was chased by fast Eagle ships, following the alleged attempt of four men to land liquor at La Guna beach, where more than 50 state, county and federal officers were waiting for the party.

Epstein Seeking To Bar Testimony Of Peaches Friend

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., February 12. (AP)—Motion to strike from the record of the Browning separation trial the evidence given on behalf of Edward West Browning by James Pope Mixon, derogatory to Frances Heenan Browning's actions and character before her marriage to Browning was made today before Supreme Court Justice Seeger in Newburgh.

He reserved decision, after taking the affidavit of Henry Epstein, Mrs. Browning's counsel, and giving Browning's lawyers opportunity to file answering briefs.

At the same time, the court and Mr. Epstein cleared J. Gordon Flannery, Poughkeepsie attorney who assisted John E. Mack, chief of Browning's counsel in the recent trial, of any charges or suspicion of conspiracy in connection with Mixon's testimony.

Mixon, who was introduced at White Plains as a surprise witness for Browning, has made affidavit, Mr. Epstein hinted, declaring that his testimony about Mrs. Browning was untrue and that the Frances Heenan he referred to was not Mrs. Browning. Mixon testified to intimacy with Mrs. Browning before her marriage and to having received letters and telephone calls from her after she married Browning.

Before the close of the hearing, Browning's counsel intimated that they might consent to the striking from the record of Mixon's testimony.

Spring Is Here! Read the First
:: ALSO, HOW MANY TEETH HAS A FISH? ::
Fish Story of Season

BY HARRY POWELL.

Arlington, Ga., February 12.—J. E. Martin, of this city, one of the most enthusiastic devotees of the reel and rod has dispelled the gloom of the ground hog myth believers in this section in coming forward with a real sign of the advent of spring in the form of a "true fish story" with evidence to bear it out that surpasses any which has been told in the past by other local Izaak Walton followers. His experience with a "whopping" jack down on the creek this week is enough to cause any doubting ones to believe the Biblical story of the whale swallowing Jonah.

According to Martin's story, the jack—the biggest he has ever seen—started swallowing him alive and had actually swallowed his left hand and arm above the elbow when he managed to shake loose by slinging the big fellow back into the creek from the boat after a long chase and it was while extracting the wooden minow from the fish's mouth that it loosened suddenly and unexpectedly to Martin with his hand going down into the mouth of the fish. The fish clamped his mouth tightly on Martin's arm to just above the elbow.

With visions, perhaps, of ancient Jonah's experience Martin started a frantic slinging of his arm and succeeded in saving himself from that experience, but he slung the monster fish back into the creek and lost that part of the evidence of the story. However, he carries the marks of the fish's teeth on his arm all the way to the elbow.

Ex-Mayor B. C. Ray, of Arlington, accompanied Martin on this trip, and bears witness to the story.

French Anxious As Probe Begins Of Legion Honors

Paris, February 12.—(AP).—Many a French breast now adorned with a cross of the Legion of Honor will heave anxiously on Tuesday when Marcel Ruotte, a functionary of the ministry of commerce, goes on trial on charges of trafficking in influence and accepting money for obtaining the coveted red ribbons for eager candidates.

More than one of the politically influential in France also are fearful that their names will be mentioned as having exercised undue pressure on the legion chancellory or ministers to decorate persons whose claims to distinction are at least debatable.

There appears to be somewhat of an official disposition to minimize the importance of the Ruotte case, since it will be heard in a small courtroom instead of the large chamber where "causes celebres" usually are aired.

Meanwhile, never since the legion scandal during the Grevy regime, has France's national order and methods of admission been so much discussed and criticized as today in all walks of life.

Young doctors are particularly indignant that one of their number, who died because of his devotion to duty recently, was refused posthumous decoration while "numerous politicians, actresses and literary lights obtained it for the asking without the slightest risk of life." They point out that Napoleon founded the order for bravery in battle or similar exceptional service to the country.

Minister of Justice Barthou has already announced that he will propose much stricter regulations in granting the order.

It is interesting to note that Georges Clemenceau, France's wartime premier, is not even a simple chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

WHITE MOURNERS ATTEND FUNERAL OF NEGRO HERO

Little Rock, Ark., February 12.—(AP)—White folk of the old First First Methodist church congregation held funeral services here late today over the body of "Uncle Henry" Smith, the aged negro janitor, who lost his life to insure the safety of his family.

The Rev. K. D. Knickerbocker, pastor of the First church, preached the last sermon for "Uncle Henry" in the church auditorium and pastors of negro congregations joined the white minister in paying tribute to the black hero in comforting the old servant's family.

"Uncle Henry," who had served the church for many years went home Thursday night to find his home in flames. Rushing to save his wife and children he remained in the building until his loved ones had been carried to safety, but was overcome by smoke and died in the ruins.

OHIO SOLON DIES ON EVE OF FIFTH TERM IN CONGRESS

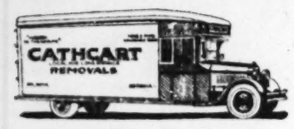

Cincinnati, Ohio, February 12.—(AP) Colonel A. E. B. Stephens, representative in congress from the second Ohio district, died today at his home in North Bend, Ohio, less than a month from the time when he would have taken the oath of office for his fifth term.

His last wish was to have lived long enough to receive the oath. Because of an illness which lasted several months, he made no campaign prior to his election in November by a substantial majority.

Colonel Stephens was 64 years old, and had lived in Ohio all his life. He received his title through commission in the Ohio national guard, of which he was an active member for years. An infection which refused to yield to treatment of several specialists caused his death.

The funeral will be held Tuesday, with burial at Cleves, Ohio.

Davison-Paxon's Huge New Store Nears Completion

Inspection Tour of Magnificent Building Reveals Veritable Palace for Treasures.

STRAUSS PIONEER FOUNDED STORE

Shoppers From Southern Homes, Thronging to Atlanta, Soon Will Crowd Through Doors.

BY PAUL STEVENSON

When the Ides of March roll around in the good year 1927 the city of Atlanta is going to witness the opening of a great institution of business, which will sparkle brilliantly in the commercial diadem and which will provide this city with a department store unexcelled in any city. It is the mighty store of the Davison-Paxon company, in affiliation with R. H. Macy and Company, Incorporated, of New York and a pre-opening tour of the structure Saturday by a group of newspaper men of Atlanta revealed the finishing stages of one of the country's foremost business enterprises.

Armies of workmen, toiling day and night, are bringing order out of chaos. The immense building is now being shaped up in the interior floors. The average layman soon will be able to get a faint grasp of its enormous size, its infinity of detail, its scientifically perfect arrangements for maximum service and its potential charm and beauty. Here, indeed, is a great distributing mercantile center whose volume of business will run into millions on top of millions every year.

Occupying fully one half of the old governor's mansion block on Peachtree street, at the corner of Ellis street, in the very heart of the downtown business section the gigantic store already has become a show place of Atlanta in its present state of incompletion. When finished, in the next few weeks, both inside and out, this surely will be a business structure which will be an object of pride to every citizen of Atlanta with civic welfare in his heart.

Six stories high on the Peachtree side, eight stories high on the back side, each floor containing 47,000 square feet of floor space, the new Davison-Paxon and R. H. Macy building is nearly three times as large as the present store occupied by the firm on Whitehall street. It is by far the largest department store building south of Philadelphia. It must be the tallest six story building in the world because the six stories tower to a point marked by the 12th story of the Henry Grady hotel, which abuts the building on the north.

Every Detail Planned.

Newspaper men who visited every floor of the new building in its present state and were shown every detail of the plan under which the store will be operated were amazed at its enormity. Not one inch of space has been wasted in the entire structure. Not one detail has been spared to make the building an institution which will serve for many years as a great retail shopping center for the entire south.

Completion of the building fulfills in some respects the life ambitions of three groups of business men. One is composed of members of the Straus family, owners of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., New York. A second group is composed of that part of the Candler interests headed by Asa G. Candler, Jr., and the third group is composed of Colonel Frederic J. Paxon and Beaumont Davison, who have served for years as leading merchants of Atlanta and who will continue in high executive posts with the affiliated company. Mr. Candler and associates provided the building. The stupendous task of erecting such a structure and carrying it out with such success required vast resources, keen foresight and accurate judgment of business conditions. The Candler group had these essentials and, with unbounded faith in Atlanta, worked

FATE OF SCHOOLS HINGES ON ACTION OF ADVISORY BODY

Citizens' Advisory Committee To Thresh Out Difficulties in Meeting Monday Afternoon.

Fate of the revised school budget for operation of Atlanta's 60-odd public schools in 1927 will be decided Monday afternoon at a meeting of the citizens advisory committee, appointed to direct expenditures of the board of education for the year. In addition to passing on the budget, the committee, according to authoritative reports Saturday, will demand that a complete audit of the school department for 1926 be made at once and be submitted at the earliest possible moment to the committee and to city council.

The school board was asked for the audit January 26, but so far no action towards supplying these figures has been taken, and members of the citizens advisory committee now are disposed to demand that the board accede to its request, it is said.

City council usually audits the schools' books beginning March 1, but no fund for this purpose has been set aside in the January finance sheet. B. Graham West, city comptroller, said Saturday. He declared that if the city was to stand the expense of the audit instead of the school department, that a special councilmanic resolution would be necessary. Council meets Monday week, and the next regular meeting of the school board is slated for March 8.

While speculation was rife Saturday as to the attitude the committee will take regarding the balancing of the school budget, and regarding the payment of $221,000 to employees of the school system for January salaries without consent of the committee, it was rumored that the committee will decline to sanction the budget, claiming that it was not balanced by slashing expenditures or salaries, but that it contemplates closing of the schools for a month between September 1 and January 1.

Members of the committee declined to commit themselves on the matter, stating that the entire budget will be considered at the meeting Monday afternoon and that any announcement prior to that time would be premature.

The citizens committee recommended among other things that the budget be balanced by eliminating free text books; recommended that if kindergartens were continued that a fee be charged until the finances of the city permitted restoration of these institutions as free; that the present scale of salaries be abolished; that Tech and Boys' High schools be consolidated; that certain grammar schools be consolidated; and that the present method of electing members of the board of education be revised and the present board abolished. The board cut $343,520.20 from the "B" budget adopted tentatively several weeks ago. The final revised budget calls for an outlay of $2,795,000 and balances with contemplated receipts.

THIRTY PERSONS ARE POISONED AT CHURCH SUPPER

Grafton, W. Va., February 12.—(AP) Thirty Grafton residents were under the care of doctors today, victims of ptomaine poison, contracted, it was believed, at a First Brethren church supper Thursday night. All the patients were reported out of danger. Church officials said they believe the poisoning was caused by chickens for the supper being cooked in tin pails which had contained lard.

AMERICAN FORCES REACH SHANGHAI

Will Not Be Landed Unless Trouble Forces Action — British Soldiers Arrive in Port.

Shanghai, February 12.—(United News.)—Foreign lives and property in the international settlement tonight were in the safe keeping of British troops and American marines, detachments of both having arrived here in response to the fear caused recently that China's civil war would overflow into the area occupied by foreigners.

The first British troops to be dispatched toward Shanghai when the situation in the Yantze valley became serious arrived today. And they were preceded by more than 24 hours by 300 American marines.

No amplification had been received today from Chekiang provinces, south of Shanghai, regarding a battle between Cantonese nationalists and troops of Marshal Sun Chunan-Fang, the Chinese defender of Shanghai, in which the Cantonese were reported to have been defeated.

The state department announced when the marines arrived at Shanghai that they would not be landed there unless trouble necessitated.

NORTHERN CHINESE CLASH WITH WU PEI-FU.

Pekin, February 12.—(AP)—Fighting has begun between the forces of the war lords of the north and the troops of Marshal Wu Pei-Fu, the central China ruler whose domination was considerably curtailed by the Cantonese last August when they thrust him northward from Hankow, on the Yangtse river.

The northern forces of the Pekin government advancing into Honan province to begin their announced campaign to hurl back the Cantonese into South China from their Yangtse strongholds, encountered the troops of Wu Pei-Fu in Honan province. Wu, occupying a position between the forces of the contending Pekin and nationalist (Cantonese) governments, had warned Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, general-in-chief of the Pekin armies, that their advance must be halted to prevent "misunderstanding" of their troops.

Due To Misunderstanding.

Headquarters of the northern war lords admitted today that there had been fighting between Chang Tso-Lin's army and that of Wu Pei-Fu in Honan, but said that the fighting was due to misunderstanding of subordinates.

Chang Tso-Lin's troops, it was added, disarmed certain of the Wu Pei-Fu troops who attempted to prevent the northerner's advance toward Chinchow in their southward drive.

BOOTLEG CACHE FOUND IN SHADOW OF WHITE HOUSE

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—In the very shadow of the home of the president, the hedge surrounding the white house, bold Washington bootleggers cached their gin.

This was revealed today by two policemen of the bootleg squad who said that after two years of persistent bounding of the liquor vendors, who were termed "the avenue and Fourteenth street gang," the cache has been abandoned.

The police discovered that the bootleggers concealed a supply of gin under the hedge and then would fill their pockets, meeting customers on the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street.

Cigarette Use Flatly Denied By Contralto

'Ridiculous!' Exclaims Madam Schumann-Heink Refuting Ad Statement.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink never smoked a cigarette in her life. And she wants the world to know that fact. Saturday, shortly after her arrival in Atlanta where she is to sing at the auditorium on Wednesday night, she informed interviewers that her attorney in New York is to sue the manufacturers of a certain brand of cigarettes because they broadcast an advertisement, in magazines and on billboards, quoting her as saying that she enjoyed smoking this particular brand of cigarette when her throat was tired from singing.

"Preposterous," she fumed, Saturday. "Of course, it isn't serious, because to all who know me, it is ridiculous. But the people who don't know me—some of them are believing the foolishness and are writing me letters about it that are, well, not so nice."

The famous contralto told the story of how the advertisement came into being.

Result of Kindly Act.

A young man, son of an old friend, called on her in New York. He said he was hard up, and if she would sign a little statement, he could get $50 or $100 for it. The statement she signed, she says, merely quoted her as recalling the popularity of the cigarette among the boys in the army, during the war days when she was singing her heart out to provide pleasure and comforts and cigarettes and lots of other things for "her soldier boys."

She says there was nothing about her smoking in the paper she signed. And it is, in fact, only necessary to look at Madame Schumann-Heink to know that here, at least, is one motherly soul left in the world who would sooner use profanity than smoke.

Strangers, she says, are too quick to believe slander. Friends are different. There is, for instance, the little Chicago manicurist who served her, who writes, enclosing a clipping of the advertisement, with the terse

CONCERT HONORS BEETHOVEN TODAY

Hugh Hodgson To Take Part in Concert Commemorating Centenary of "Great Master."

BY RALPH T. JONES.

The program for the concert this afternoon by the Atlanta Symphony association at Loew's Grand theater is unusually intrigueing in advance contemplation. It should prove a highlight of the current season.

To begin with, there is Hugh Hodgson as the guest artist. Whenever Hugh Hudgson is announced to play the piano, let me be there to hear. For there are few living pianists more delightful to listen to than he, and few artists of any instrument more authoritative in interpretation.

Hugh is scheduled to play today, with the orchestra, Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasia." Personally, this ranks as the best thing Franz Liszt ever composed and the opportunity to hear it interpreted by Hugh Hodgson, with Conductor Enrico Liede and his 70 musicians sharing the inspiration, is too good to miss.

Then again, the opening number on the program has a large measure of special interest. It is the local orchestra's tribute to Ludwig Beethoven, whose centenary is celebrated all over the world this year. Beethover himself said that his "Egmont" overture was the best thing he wrote for orchestral interpretation and it is this number that Mr. Liede selected for today.

The first half of the program will conclude with Rubinstein's "Kammannoi-Ostrow."

After the intermission Hugh Hodgson will give a group of three numbers at the piano, consisting of Chopin's Etude in A-Flat and his waltz in F-Minor, and Godard's "En Courant."

The orchestra will close the program with the Ruy Blas overture by Mendelssohn.

As usual, the concert will begin promptly at 3:30 o'clock. Doors will open at 2:30 o'clock and the entire gallery will be free to early comers. The remainder of the house is reserved for ticket holders. No reserved section admissions may be accepted today because of the laws on Sunday observance.

German Castle for Kaiser Is Demanded by "Empress"

:: HERMINE HAS EYE TO OWN FUTURE ::

Berlin, February 12.—(AP)—"Empress" Hermine, wife of the former kaiser, is credited in former Potsdam court circles with having been the chief motive power behind William's insistence that he be given Homburg castle, near Nauheim, as a residence for himself and wife in case they return to Germany.

Hermine, according to these circles, realises that the kaiser never may return. In demanding Homburg, they say, she had an eye to her own future, as the castle would be an ideal place to spend her declining years.

Her anxiety about some permanent home is reported to have been accentuated by difficulties with members of the Schoenaich-Carolath family, who insist that she no longer has the right to manage her late first husband's extensive Silesian estates. Under patriarchial laws of the blue-blooded families, the widow loses such rights after remarriage into another family.

Even should Hermine succeed in retaining her hold on her first husband's estates for the present, she will be compelled to turn over the reins to her eldest son, Hans George, in November, when he reaches 21.

The Potsdam courtiers never forgave Hermine for marrying the exkaiser, and recently were affronted anew by William's dismissal of Herr von Berg as the Hohenzollern legal representative, supposedly at her suggestion. They also resent the spell she and her 8-year-old daughter, Henritte—nicknamed "the general" by William—seem to cast over the former.

When, a year ago, Hermine tried to give a reception to the former courtiers they snubbed her, and this slight is reported to have increased her determination to live away from Berlin after the kaiser should have passed away. Homburg seems the logical refuge.

Buckingham Palace Agog; Little Elizabeth Cuts Tooth

AFFAIRS OF STATE TAKE SECOND PLACE

London, February 12.—(AP).—The king was in the parlor when he heard that his tiny guest—the Princess Elizabeth, whose parents, the Duke and Duchess of York, are now on a voyage to the Antipodes—had cut her first tooth.

The king, as even kings will over so important a family event, forget affairs of state momentarily and became nearly as excited as he did on the night of last April 21 when he was aroused from his slumber at 3 a. m., at Windsor Castle, to learn that his first granddaughter had been born.

King George, so the story goes, immediately sent attendants scurrying about Buckingham Palace to inform the queen of the tooth's arrival. The queen pretended surprise so that the king would think he had learned the news first, but her ladies in waiting say that she knew all about the tooth days ago.

The king and queen then sat down together and framed a wireless message to the Duke and Duchess of York aboard the Renown to tell of the great event.

Queen Mary sees Princess Elizabeth two or three times daily now that the princess is in her care during her parents' absence. King George also usually has a little visit immediately after breakfast when she is brought to him. If he is in the humor, as he usually is, he permits the baby to fondle the royal beard, and if the little princess is in good humor—as is now always the case—the king leans back in his chair and radiates in the baby's smiles.

The princess, who has been the guest of her grandparents since February fifth, bears the distinction of being the first and only palace guest who ever arrived asleep, coming in an automobile in the arms of nurse Knight.

The baby has a six acre palace garden, overlooked by the American embassy, all to herself and her nurse, for airings. The princess is a most important personage in every sense of the word because, as matters stand, she is in a direct line of succession to the throne. That succession primarily is in the male line, but so long as the Prince of Wales is unmarried and the Duke of York has no son, great possibilities may be in store for the little miss.

FIVE POWER PARLEY ON NAVAL BUILDING ASSURED AT GENEVA

OPERA GUARANTEE FUND PLEDGE SEEN IN RECORD TIME

Interest in Approaching Season Greatest in Many Years, H. M. Atkinson, New Leader, Believes.

With the opening date of the seat sale rapidly approaching, H. M. Atkinson, newly-elected president of the Music Festival Association of Atlanta, expressed the opinion Saturday that the fund necessary to guarantee the appearance here of the Metropolitan Grand Opera company, on April 25 to 30, inclusive, will be pledged within a short time.

"I believe that everyone interested in the annual season of Metropolitan opera in Atlanta now understands thoroughly the provisions of this fund," said Mr. Atkinson. "Persons are not 'invited' to participate, but the privilege and distinction of being among the guarantors of the event is accorded to everyone, not only in Atlanta but throughout the south, wherever lovers of good music may be found. Especially this season do we want newcomers in the city to feel that the privilege is open to them.

"The minimum of the individual guarantee is $200 and, as in former years, all guarantors will have the privilege of purchasing opera seats in advance of the opening of the public seat sale.

No Invitation Given.

"It is impossible for the members of the board of directors to extend a personal invitation to the large number of guarantors and no other invitation will be made to the public save through the press. Subscriptions may be sent to Charles Howard Candler, treasurer, Music Festival Association of Atlanta, 84 North Broad street.

"The unusual diversity and brilliance of the opera selections this season and the addition of a new opera to the number hitherto given, have caused an instant interest in the 1927 program, which warrants the anticipation of a week of exceptional success both artistically and financially, as was the case last season."

The new opera, "Turandot," with a new star, Edward Johnson, is expected to prove the sensation of the week, which will open with Verdi's immortal "La Traviata," and include "L'Amore dei Tre Re," "Gianni Schicchi," "Mignon," "Lohengrin," "La Forza del Destino," "Romeo et Juliette" and "Madam Butterfly."

Great Stars Coming.

All of the stars who in past years have made Atlanta the center of attraction for music lovers in the south during opera week, will be here this year, Galli-Curci, Gigli, DeLuca, Rosa Ponselle, Martinelli, Louise Hunter, Florence Easton, Bori, Marion Talley, Lawrence Tibbett, Basiola and Scotti. And to this list will be added several new singers who will make their southern debuts this season.

Orders are now being received at the offices of the association, 84 North Broad street, from out-of-town patrons for single and individual seats. All orders will be filled in the time order of their receipt and a record kept of their identity. Announcement of the opening of the seat sale to the general public will be made at an early date.

HOUSE FARM BLOC TO FIGHT CHANGES

Senators Harris and George See Disaster For South in McNary-Haugen Relief Bill.

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—Convinced that a filibuster faces the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill if it is sent back to the senate, a rigorous program was agreed to by house farm leaders today in an effort to put through unchanged the measure passed yesterday by the senate.

If the bill is passed by the house without alteration it would go to President Coolidge immediately but if changed it must go to conference and to the senate for final approval, and there, its friends fear, a filibuster is certain to develop.

Will Oppose Changes.

After a conference of the bill's supporters Representative Dickinson, Republican, Iowa, declared every effort to amend the senate bill would be vigorously opposed because it was felt the change of "so little as a comma means no farm relief this session."

The first step to carry out this plan

Ghoul Blamed For Mystery Of 4 Skulls

Negro Convict Held Responsible Convicted of Grave Robbery.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, February 12.—Obsessed with a ghoulish mania for digging up long buried bodies of women, James H. Coyner, 35, a tall, hulking negro convict in the Indiana state penitentiary, is believed responsible for the four women's skulls discovered in a trunk in a residence at Royal Oak, Mich., on Friday.

Coyner, who formerly lived in the residence, was located today in the penitentiary where he is serving a sentence of from three to ten years for a grave robbery in Hammond, Ind.

When he was arrested, Coyner told the Hammond police he was wanted in Detroit for murder. A checkup with the Detroit authorities developed no charge against him, but with the finding of the skulls there, one of which is said to have been matted with hair and blood, attention was directed toward a murder theory.

On October 1, 1926, it was developed at Hammond, Coyner dug up the body of a white woman from a grave in Oak Hill cemetery, in which it had laid for over ten years.

He took the bones into the basement of an abandoned house nearby. The following day the bones were found by boys playing about the house and the police were notified.

A cordon of officers was set in the basement and about the house, and on the third day Coyner walked in and was arrested. He confessed to a strange craving for possession of skulls and bones. He was given a prison sentence.

At the penitentiary it was learned that Coyner has been under close observation for his sanity. Warden Daly believes that the skulls found in Michigan were taken from their graves by Coyner, but he does not feel that the prisoner committed any murders.

Police have not yet solved the mystery raised with the discovery of a list of names of prominent society women of Pittsburgh and Detroit in the same trunk with the skulls.

DICTATOR SEEN FOR BROADWAY

Theater Producers May Ask Alexander Moore, Former Ambassador to Spain, To Take Post.

BY FRANK DOLAN.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, February 12.—With the grip of censorship tightening about the stage, Broadway producers are groping for a strong man to lead them out of the woods.

Alexander P. Moore, former ambassador to Spain, today was mentioned in theatrical circles as a candidate for czar of the footlights.

The idea of taking unto themselves a ruler, such as Hays in the movies and Landis in baseball, was forced on theatrical producers by Acting Mayor McKee's announcement that police possess full authority to stop any performance which they consider objectionable.

Has Been Approached.

Moore admitted he had been approached but said he had given no serious thought to the matter.

He seemed interested, however, and willing to step into the job if producers feel he can solve their problems.

"What the theater needs," Moore

JAPAN WELCOMES PROPOSAL OF U. S. FOR ARMS' MEET

Will Accept Without Reservation. France Is Formulating Acceptance in Principle.

BRITAIN TO MAKE FAVORABLE REPLY

Holding of Conference Does Not Mean Powers Will Agree To Cuts in Naval Program.

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—A five-power negotiation at Geneva for limiting construction of auxiliary naval craft is regarded here as virtually assured.

Japan will accept the American invitation for such a conference without reservation. France is formulating an acceptance in principle coupled with "very serious reserves." British acceptance is clearly foreshadowed, and Italy alone is unheard from in any definite way. Officials see little reason to doubt that she, too, will concur in the proposals made by President Coolidge.

Acceptance of the proposal to negotiate, however, by no means carries with it certainty that a five-power treaty to limit cruisers, destroyers and submarines will result. International problems of extreme difficulty remain to be overcome.

Plan of Japanese.

Whether President Coolidge, in the event of failure of the five-power plan at Geneva, would revert to the informal Japanese suggestion for a three-power limitation on cruiser tonnage as between Great Britain, the United States and Japan, no official would predict. It was said flatly today, however, that the five-power plan was the only proposal now under consideration, and that no decision as to the future could be made except in the light of developments at Geneva.

The exact terms in which any of the four governments communicate their acceptances of the American proposals may prove of great significance. No official word on that subject has yet reached the state department.

The house foreign affairs committee approved today the administration request for $75,000 to pay expenses of continued American cooperation with the Geneva disarmament conference. Should the naval negotiation plan be accepted by the naval powers in time, it appears probable that additional appropriations will be asked because enlarged naval and technical staffs will be necessary.

Plan Is Abandoned.

A movement developed in the committee to attach to the legislation a clause designed to place the American auxiliary ship limitation project on the agenda being formulated by the preparatory conference for the prospective general disarmament conference contemplated by the League of Nations. But the plan was abandoned.

A letter from Secretary Kellogg presented by Chairman Porter of the committee emphasized the administration's desire to continue complete cooperation with the work at Geneva. No reference was made to the new American plan for simultaneous negotiation of additional naval limitation agreements. Mr. Kellogg did point out, however, that prolonged discussions of the military committees at Geneva had brought into sharp re-

Theaters Join In Benefit For Tallulah School Fund

:: MAMMOTH SHOW SPECTACLE SET FOR MARCH 11 ::

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Atlanta amusement lovers will have one opportunity this season to see $10 worth of show for $1 when a monster special midnight performance is given at 11 o'clock Friday night, March 11, at the city auditorium, it was disclosed in plans announced Saturday by theater managers of Atlanta who will stage the big show for the benefit of the Tallulah Falls institute.

At a conference of managers Saturday preliminary details of the huge show were made public and reveal that this special attraction will include more good things theatrically than could be crowded on any three programs of regular theaters. Each act selected will be the highest ranking turn in its particular class and the show will be about the best thing of its kind offered here in years.

With managers in charge of the program, they will have the 100 per cent support of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the Motion Picture Machine Operators, which will assure the production of perfect staging, perfect lighting effects, a perfect presentation of the motion picture phases of the show and the enthusiastic cooperation of some 150 talented musicians in the biggest orchestra ever playing together here at one time.

From now until the hour of the performance special committees of managers will be at work to give Atlanta a show much like the annual "Gambol" of the Lambs club in New York, and like the annual benefits for various theatrical organizations in that city. Actors on vaudeville bills, in the special productions which are offered in the motion picture houses that week and several notable stars of the stage who are scheduled for the Atlanta legitimate theater that week, will give the Atlanta people some spicy and snappy bits of entertainment which are not found on the usual programs and which will be original creations of the actors themselves.

People who have witnessed the annual "Gambols" know what a wonderful show actors can offer when given free rein to use their talents in their own way and local managers have been assured that visiting performers will work with them in perfect accord in giving Atlanta something entirely different in the way of a

WILKINS LEAVES ON ARCTIC TRIP

Seattle, Wash., February 12.—(AP) To delve for the second time into the mystery of the "Arctic blind spot," between Alaska and the North Pole, Captain George H. Wilkins and a little band of adventurers sailed from Seattle tonight.

The first part of their northward journey will be by boat to Seward, there they will take the Alaska government railroad to Fairbanks. From Fairbanks Wilkins plans to fly to Point Barrow, the northernmost tip of the American continent.

Point Barrow will be the base of the expedition from which Wilkins and Carl B. Eielson, his sourdough aviator, plan to launch out over the Arctic unknown.

GREAT NEW STORE NEAR COMPLETION

with untiring zeal to provide this great structure for this great business enterprise.

The present Strauss group, Jesse Isidor Strauss, Percy S. Strauss and Herbert N. Strauss, who have controlled Macy's in New York since 1914, are sons of Isidor Strauss, pioneer Georgia business man. He received his early business training in this state and laid the foundation of his future mercantile success while in business in Georgia. The story of the remarkable achievements in business of the Strauss family will be told later in this article.

Colonel Frederic J. Paxon and Beaumont Davison have been in business so long in Atlanta that their names have become household words. On top of their business service they have joined actively in every campaign and every movement for the good of Atlanta that has been waged here in the last third of a century and in all these movements and campaigns both have been leaders. They were active in working out plans for the new affiliated enterprise and both will fill important posts with the affiliated company.

Mr. Kline Organizes.

Much of the detail of the planning of the immense new store was conceived and worked out by Raymond A. Kline, vice president of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., and representative in Atlanta for that group. Head of the new store here, he has been busy for nearly two years in organizing the forces which will have charge of the immense affiliated store.

Members of the party of newspapermen who visited the store Saturday as the guest of Mr. Kline began their tour of the great building by catching a freight elevator and riding to the very top. They followed the course taken by a bale of goods arriving at the store. The unopened package is sent to the top of the building and the contents then are carried down to all the various departments beneath. The visitors were shown how the system of the store works by beginning at the top floor, the reserve stock room.

In the vast reserve stock room on the top floor all goods are received, opened, marked, prepared for exhibition and are sent down an intricate system of chutes to the proper departments in the store. The top floor, in addition to serving as the huge reserve stock department, also will house a complete emergency hospital, quarters for physicians and nurses, a complete cafeteria for employees smoking and rest rooms for employees and a library. The floor also will contain a great restaurant for the general public equipped with its own large kitchens, ice plants, refrigerating plants and all improved kitchen machinery.

Virtually the whole fifth floor will be occupied by the furniture department and general offices with a great furniture warehouse connected directly with the display rooms. Running parallel with the main floor on the rear side of each floor will be long corridors 25 feet wide, one on each floor, which will be used as work rooms to serve the particular lines of goods sold on that floor. On the fifth floor, for instance, the furniture work rooms will occupy this long corridor. In it workmen will be ready to make all kinds of repairs and alterations which may be needed.

Directly underneath the furniture department of the fifth floor will be associated lines on the fourth floor. All lines associated with the furniture business, such as draperies, upholstery, china and glassware, electrical goods, gift shop and interior decorating department, will be located on the fourth floor, thus making the fourth and fifth floor complete house furnishing stores, which will carry as large and varied lines as the largest stores handling such goods exclusively.

Dresses to Hold Center.

On the third and second floors will be located departments for women's ready-to-wear goods. Fixtures of the latest modern type are being installed on the third floor for the immense line of dresses, gowns and frocks which will be carried by the new store. It is planned to keep on display here at all times one of the greatest collections of women's dresses carried in any store in the country. The department in many respects will be the largest women's dress department in the entire country. The millinery department will adjoin the dress department in a special room prepared for it on the north end of the third floor and this department will be as complete as the dress department.

The second floor will house the vast shoe department as well as the men's clothing department. Fabrics of all kinds, including silks, will be displayed on this floor. A woman's hair dressing parlor also will be one of this floor's features. The merchandise offices will be located on the mezzanine floor and from this floor a person can get the best view of the vastness and immense proportions of the multi-columned first floor.

As impressive as a view of some ancient cathedral or some huge architectural masterpiece of Europe is the view of the first floor. Columns 30 feet high rise in regular rows on this floor. A series of eight tall Moorish arches rise above the eight passenger elevator doors located on the back side of the first floor. Two immense portals open to the street, while large Venetian blinds regulate the lighting effects. Fixtures will be built in specially to conform to the floor plan of the store.

On the first floor will be the innumerable general lines carried by a department store of this character as well as the special departments for jewelry, hosiery, gloves, silk underwear, toilet goods, notions, leather goods, the book department, stationery and allied lines.

Husbands Are Remembered.

The special department for men's wear will be located on the first and second floors. A special entrance will be provided to this department on the Ellis street side and a special elevator will carry customers to the second floor of the department. This will make it possible for a man to enter the great store, make his purchases and not be forced to travel through a large portion of the main store itself.

Credit departments connected by pneumatic tubes with all parts of the store will be located on the mezzanine floor on the back side of the building. Each floor is equipped with its own department for wrapping bundles and handling cash. Aisles on the main floor will be 16 feet wide, affording ample space for large crowds of shoppers. Eight passenger elevators will handle people in the general store, one passenger elevator in the men's department, four freight elevators and two elevators for employees use only will complete the battery of elevators to be used in the huge building.

In the basement will be a special bargain department, with entrances from the Peachtree and Ellis street sides. This will be one of the largest floors in the entire building and will be used exclusively for bargains with the exception of space allotted for employees locker rooms, lounge rooms and rest rooms.

More than 700 people will be employed in the store and this number will be increased to 1,000 during busy seasons. Special arrangements have been completed for the provision of conveniences for employees. They will have private lockers, will be provided with library, emergency hospital service, will have a special cafeteria, the private elevators and will be given many other comforts not usually provided in department stores.

All goods enter the store through one channel. They are carried to the top of the building, distributed to all departments through chutes and leave the store through a special delivery department in one continuing stream. The building is absolutely fireproof construction and as an extra safeguard a gigantic automatic sprinkling system is provided. The five tanks for this system are as large as the gasoline tanks used in big wholesale gasoline distributing plants of Atlanta. The tanks are located in a special room on the roof adjoining the room allotted to the elevator machinery.

The great store of Davison-Paxon company, affiliated with R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., will be thrown open to the public during the middle of March. The exact date cannot be fixed now as it will require some weeks for latest mode stocks to be installed after the building is finished by the contractors.

Atlanta was selected by the Strauss brothers as a point for the location of an affiliated branch of R. H. Macy and company for both business and sentimental reasons. The Strauss brothers have unlimited confidence in the future of Atlanta and also have long cherished a desire to own a store in Georgia where Lazarus and Isidor Strauss began their business careers more than two-score years ago.

This story of Macy's and of this affiliation and of this new store, is one of those epics of American commercial history so common in the annals of our nation's business, the story of a small beginning, of a determined purpose, of high ideals and of steady growth and success.

Lazarus Straus was a man of vision but he could hardly realize that from this modest early struggle could come such tremendous growth and success in just three generations, even though that early beginning was founded on the basic principles of honest dealing, truthful advertising and great feeling that the merchant had an obligation to his customers and to the community, to distribute only worthy merchandise at the lowest prices compatible with the merchandise sold and the service rendered.

Success Deserved.

Such faith in the principles that he believed to be right and in the possibilities of America, surely deserved success.

He came to America from the European continent at a time when there were political disturbances and many people disappointed with living conditions there, resolved to begin life over again in America. It was a period which gave America some of the most eminent men, scholars, scientists, manufacturers, founders of important enterprises, and Lazarus Straus was a splendid type of the early pioneer who started enterprises at that time, many of which are among the greatest in the country today.

He chose the south as the field of his first efforts in America. He was not wealthy but he had brought with him enough capital to make a start in Talbotton.

In those days, as now, Talbotton was a conservative, aristocratic southern town. Recent talks with some of the older citizens there brought back to their memories their fathers' stories of the quiet, industrious storekeeper who conducted his business upon principles by no means common at that time.

"Mr. Straus," they said, "was a man of exceptional education with good business sense and possessed very high ideals. He believed profoundly in fair dealing; in the ethics of business. He won friends. The poor carried their trade to his store because they received good value. The well-to-do townspeople not only dealt with him but welcomed him into their midst, after they had learned to know him, because of his high character. He was not looked upon as an outsider but as a citizen of Talbotton. As there was no temple of his faith in Talbotton, his children attended a Protestant Sunday school and were friends of all the young people. They were fine boys and Talbotton has watched with pride their rise to world-wide fame."

The little store prospered, and as it expanded, Lazarus Straus sought a larger opportunity for his sons. The family moved to Columbus, Ga., where another larger business was established.. This, too, prospered. Later on, Lazarus Straus and his sons moved to New York, a greater field of opportunity, where they entered upon a new era.

Retail Work Calls.

The first business venture there was the crockery and glassware importing business of L. Straus & Sons, established in 1866. This enterprise flourished, but the sons who were growing up were fascinated by the promises of retail merchandising, with which they were first brought in contact by managing china and glassmade departments in a number of different stores.

Their interest in such departments in the Macy store brought them in contact with Captain R. H. Macy, an old retired sea captain who had entered the retail business, and who then had a store that was located at the corner of Sixth Avenue and Fourteenth street, New York city.

Isidor Straus, one of the brothers and the father of the present heads of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., became a partner in the department store of R. H Macy & Co. in 1888 when it was a very small store, doing only a few million dollars worth of business and the subsequent growth and development to their present volume of seventy-five million dollars in their mammoth store at Thirty-fourth and Broadway, New York, which employs almost 10,000 people, is the result of the resourcefulness and initiative of this remarkable family.

As the older citizens of Talbotton esteemed the elder Straus, so have the sons revered and honored the name of Macy's. The store conducted by the retired sea captain would be thought old-fashioned now, but it was really ahead of the time then, because it practiced none of the "tricks of the trade" so prevalent in that period when so many stores had for their motto "Let the Buyers Beware." This rugged old sea captain had a reputation for honest goods, honest measure and fair dealing.

Just as the Straus brothers have carefully kept every relic or memento of Captain Macy, so have they kept alive his spirit of meeting the customer as a friend and doing everything possible to keep his friendship. Macy's has changed in many particulars—but never in that!

It was a remarkable coincidence that these two pioneers, one starting in Haverhill, Mass., and the other in Talbotton, Ga., one in the north and one in the south, both founding their business future on the principles of intelligent and fair dealing, should be joined in one enterprise in New York, which union resulted in the most remarkable growth in a given number of years enjoyed by any store in America.

Brothers Honored.

Countless honors have come to the brothers who once played in the little Georgia town and attended Georgia schools. Nathan, so widely known as a merchant and philanthropist who gave New York its free milk for the city's poor children; who built up a system of free lodging houses and who is now retired from active business, is devoting himself almost entirely to helping others. Oscar became a lawyer, a writer, secretary of commerce and labor under President Roosevelt, ambassador to Turkey. Isidor, father of the three sons, now active in Macy's, devoted himself more particularly to the field of commerce and retail distribution and after a long and successful life, passed on to his reward, leaving to his family a heritage of accomplishments and personal qualities which might well be envied by anyone. These sons, Jesse Isidor Straus, Percy S. Straus and Herbert N. Straus, who have been in control of Macy's since 1914 following the training of their respected father and grandfather, have made even greater strides and greater success.

Thus, it is a truly American story where each succeeding generation profits by the experience of the previous one, inheriting certain qualities of mind and of experience which makes each generation increasingly successful. This is really the story of American business.

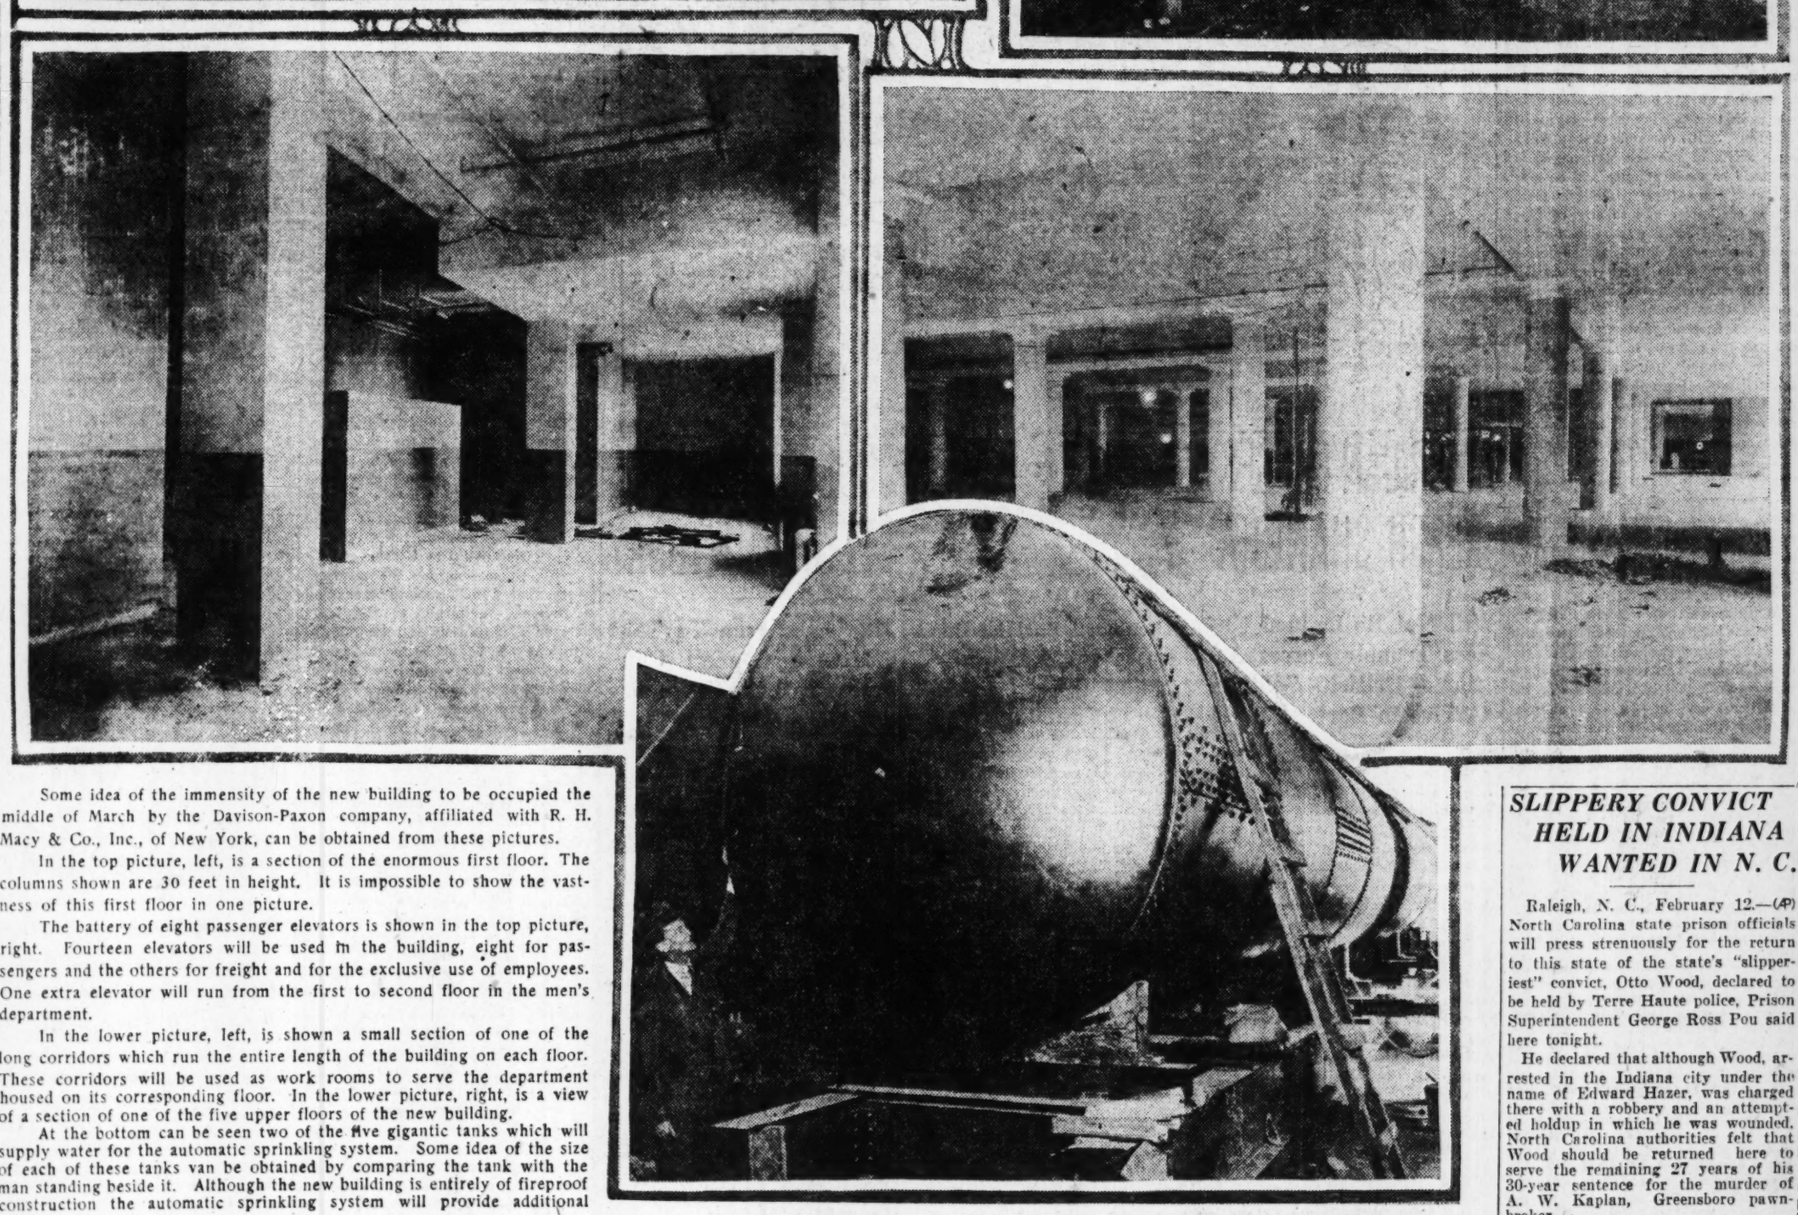

As Macy's in New York is known throughout the country, so will the new Davison-Paxon store, affiliated with Macy's, become famous throughout the southeast. It has behind it the prestige, the background, the tremendous buying power of R. H. Macy and Company, Incorporated, and the splendid record of having occupied, for many years a prominent position among the leading department stores of Georgia.

The south is undoubtedly on the eve of a great development that will bring a degree of activity, prosperity and growth to the state of Georgia, which has not been heretofore enjoyed, and the erection of this great store and the increasing desire of great merchants, financiers and other big business men, to invest their capital and become active in the business affairs of the south, are a definite step toward greater growth, achievement and prosperity.

Pictures of Gigantic New Davison-Paxon Store Building

Some idea of the immensity of the new building to be occupied the middle of March by the Davison-Paxon company, affiliated with R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., of New York, can be obtained from these pictures.

In the top picture, left, is a section of the enormous first floor. The columns shown are 30 feet in height. It is impossible to show the vastness of this first floor in one picture.

The battery of eight passenger elevators is shown in the top picture, right. Fourteen elevators will be used in the building, eight for passengers and the others for freight and for the exclusive use of employees. One extra elevator will run from the first to second floor in the men's department.

In the lower picture, left, is shown a small section of one of the long corridors which run the entire length of the building on each floor. These corridors will be used as work rooms to serve the department housed on its corresponding floor. In the lower picture, right, is a view of a section of one of the five upper floors of the new building.

At the bottom can be seen two of the five gigantic tanks which will supply water for the automatic sprinkling system. Some idea of the size of each of these tanks van be obtained by comparing the tank with the man standing beside it. Although the new building is entirely of fireproof construction the automatic sprinkling system will provide additional safety.

WILBUR WARNS OF 'RED' MENACE

New York, February 12.—(AP)—America is now enjoying peace and prosperity, but abroad there is "a new peril declaring spiritual warfare and ready to declare material warfare upon the people of this nation," Secretary of the Navy Wilbur asserted tonight.

"Where our children are willing to listen," he said in an address at the Lincoln day dinner of the National Republican club, "they are taught the ways of the third internationale.

"We find its hand clutching at the heart of our sister republic on the south. We find it stirring up trouble in Asia, in China, in Nicaragua. This government by the people, it is said, has become imperialistic.

"Knowing ourselves as we do, knowing our form of government as we do and the purpose of its people, we are inclined to take lightly this new form of attack which seeks to destroy the foundations of this government, namely the home and sense of religious obligations. It would destroy home and government and God.

"In the face of this insidious propaganda within our own territory and in other nations, it behooves us to be vigilant, in the training of the young and in answering the misstatements and misrepresentations put forth to destroy this government.

"We owe it to ourselves to be strong, to maintain an adequate army and navy. Yes, we owe it to others to be strong in order that if there is to be a world revolution, we may, by our example, if not by our army and navy, assist weaker nations to maintain free government."

Woman Rescued After Being Tied To Bed 3 Days

Bridgewater, S. R., February 12.—After being tied to her bed for three days while members of a religious cult made weird gestures and shouts to "extract the devil" from her body Mrs. H. Wollman was rescued today.

When found by a committee of business men she was in a state of hypnotism and Dr. G. H. Glauser said she had been without food for five days.

The woman was considerably weakened by the ordeal, but Dr. Glauser said she would recover.

The religious cult is made up of farmers living outside Bridgewater. They are believed to have called at Mrs. Wollman's home early this week and started their vigil against "the devil." They were fanatical in their shouting when the business men arrived at the Wollman home and had to be forced from the house.

SOUTH DAKOTA CAPITAL PENALTY BILL IS VETOED

Pierre, S. D., February 12.—(AP)—Asserting that it "violated one of the great commandments," Governor Bulow today vetoed the capital punishment bill recently passed by the South Dakota legislature.

"I return herewith," he said in his message to the house, "the capital punishment bill unapproved by me for the reason that it violates the tenets of one of the great commandments upon which our civilization is founded.

"'Thou shalt not kill' should govern the authority of organized society as well as the individual of society. Six thousand years of civilization has reached a higher plane than the approval of legalized murder."

The state legislature of 1915 repealed the death penalty under law in South Dakota, after it had been in force for 53 years.

SLIPPERY CONVICT HELD IN INDIANA WANTED IN N. C.

Raleigh, N. C., February 12.—(AP) North Carolina state prison officials will press strenuously for the return to this state of the state's "slipperiest" convict, Otto Wood, declared to be held by Terre Haute police, Prison Superintendent George Ross Pou said here tonight.

He declared that although Wood, arrested in the Indiana city under the name of Edward Hazer, was charged there with a robbery and an attempted holdup in which he was wounded, North Carolina authorities felt that Wood should be returned here to serve the remaining 27 years of his 30-year sentence for the murder of A. W. Kaplan, Greensboro pawnbroker.

The question of how quickly the state will act lies with Governor Angus W. McLean, Mr. Pou said. The governor today was in Washington conferring with Governor Austin Peay, of Tennessee, and Dr. Hubert Work, secretary of the interior.

ROUNTREE TO ASK COOLIDGE TO COME TO ROADS MEETING

Birmingham, Ala., February 12.—(Special.)—J. A. Rountree, director general of the United States Good Roads association and Bankhead National Highway association, left Birmingham Saturday morning en route to Washington where he goes for the purpose of joining a committee of 27 prominent men from 18 states who will call on President Coolidge Monday morning to invite him and Mrs. Coolidge to attend the fifteenth annual convention of the United States Good Roads association and the eleventh annual convention of the Bankhead National Highway association and United States Good Roads show to be held in Savannah, June 6-11.

The final proof of the merit of any baking powder rests entirely in the quality of the bakings it produces.

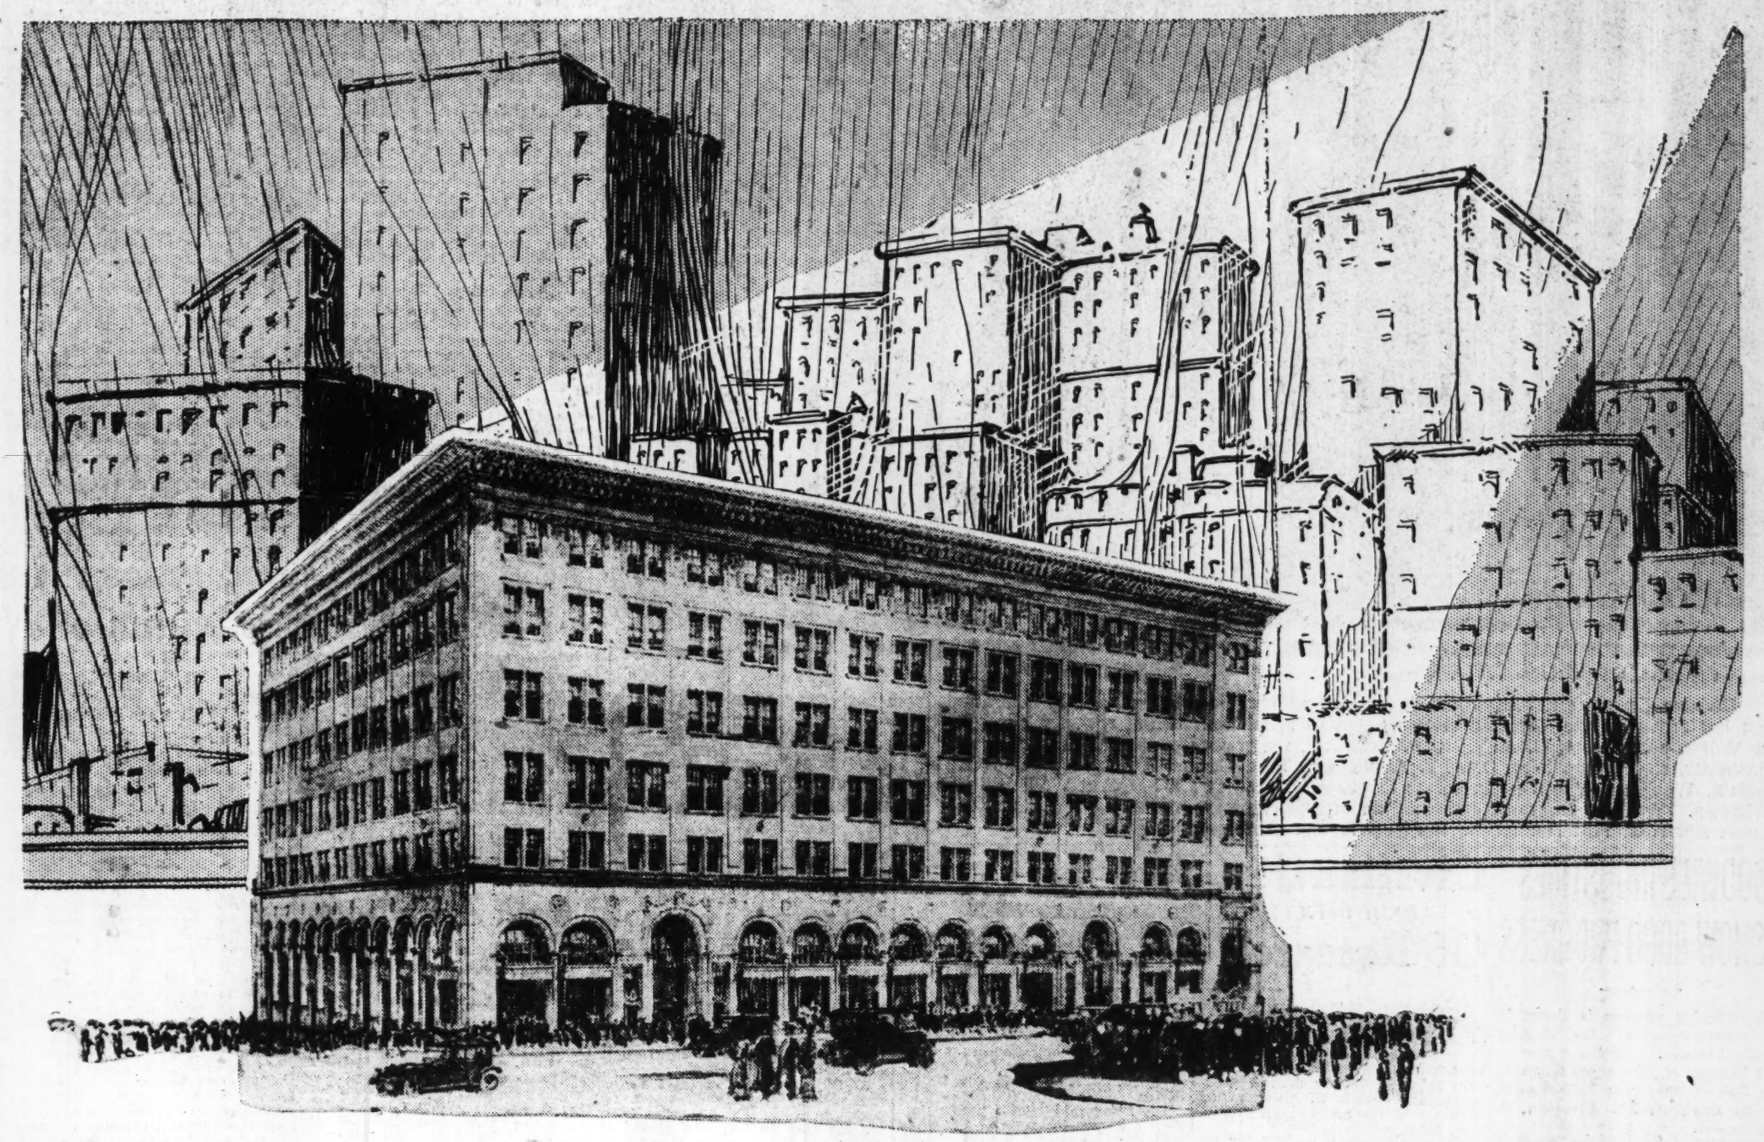

Don't be deceived—inferior baking powder cannot produce good foods. They may raise a baking. It may appear tempting, but it really lacks quality, flavor and nutritional value.

Calumet is double acting. It possesses two leavening units—one begins to work when the dough is mixed, the other waits for the heat of the oven, then both units work together.

LOCATION

WHOEVER heard of an ice plant at the North Pole or a furnace factory in the Tropics? The like of such are absurdities,—the simple reason being that the location of an enterprise determines to a large extent the measure of success and progress that lies in its wake. Whatever the business may be, sound forethought in choosing the location best adapted to the individual requirements of the concern presages a happy future.

In making a survey of the Atlanta territory, preparatory to the building of their magnificent new store, the Davison-Paxon Company, affiliated with R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., one of the world's largest retail organizations, summoned the knowledge and experience of that great organization in deciding in favor of our proposal of the Peachtree and Ellis Street location.

The combination of this huge retail organization with the other outstanding enterprises which have established themselves within a radius of this locality offer a concentrated service to the entire population of the city.

A highly desirable location within the heart of this new retail area will assure others the advantages of a solid foundation in what will unquestionably prove the most popular shopping district of Atlanta.

TWO SHOALS BIDS ARE TURNED DOWN

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—The house military subcommittee decided today in executive session that it could not recommend in their present form bids either of the American Cyanamid company or of the Farmers' Federated Fertilizer corporation for fertilizer production and power development at the Muscle Shoals.

It decided to meet again Tuesday to report its recommendations to the full committee, but at the same time left the door open to consider any revision that either of the companies might desire to make in their offers.

While the committee was in session W. B. Bell, president of the Cyanamid company, authorized the statement that his company had not withdrawn its offer, did not propose to do so, nor indicated to the committee any desire that a vote on the bid be carried over to the next congress. This statement came as a surprise at the capitol and ran counter to impressions received yesterday by a number of committee members.

Meanwhile, Representative Madden, republican, Illinois, sponsor of the Cyanamid bid, issued a statement forecasting the carrying over of Muscle Shoals legislation until next session. He said members of the military committee, he understood, favored the Cyanamid offer, but that additional study was needed on some of its details.

He also predicted that congress might take some action "to hasten the detailed surveys and preparation of preliminary plans for government construction of Cove Creek dam" on the headwaters of the Tennessee river.

O. G. Thurlow, president of the Muscle Shoals Fertilizer company, also issued a statement saying that he considered a recent commerce report on the Haber method for nitrogen production significant in consideration of the shoals questions, while Representative Reece, republican, Tennessee, announced he favored Madden's suggestion that the government hasten with the construction of the Cove Creek dam.

GREATEST YEAR FOR AUTOS SEEN

BY ALFRED P. RECK.

Washington, February 12.—(United News.) — America stands on the threshold of its greatest automobile year, both in production and motoring, two of its best authorities, H. O. Smith, chief of the automotive division of the department of commerce, and Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile association, told the United News today.

Constantly increasing numbers of machines are expected to fill the spring roads in a never-ending stream from the east coast to the west. Nearly 4,000,000 new pleasure cars will make their appearance in 1927 to add to the 20,000,000 already in use.

America, with 81 per cent of the world's automobiles operating within her borders, has a machine for every five persons.

Saturation "Mirage."

Yet Smith declares that the "saturation point" for automobiles is a mirage which grows more and more remote as the number of cars in use advance into an amazing figure of millions.

Approximately $700,000,000 will be expended for gasoline to operate pleasure cars in 1927, department of commerce experts estimate. Henry lists four major factors which will be instrumental in shattering all previous records in the automotive industry:

1. Cars are vastly improved in design, efficiency and safety.
2. The range of the automobile is widened.
3. National prosperity makes it possible for additional hundreds of thousands to become car owners.
4. Car operation and service have been simplified by the manufacturer.

20 Million in Year.

Figures listed by the national automobile chamber of commerce show approximately 20,0000,000 cars registered in the United States in 1926.

Production of pleasure cars in 1926 totaled 3,950,000 and is expected to pass the 4,000,000 mark in 1927. In 1925 the total stood at 3,839,000.

According to the chamber figures world registration of pleasure cars in 1926 totaled 27,500,000.

Adequate Zoning Provisions Will Be Urged at Meeting Of Planning Board Monday

Charter Changes Among Series of Recommendations Expected To Be Made by Engineer.

Adequate zoning provisions for the city of Atlanta will be the chief feature of a series of recommendations Monday of R. W. Torras, engineer and secretary of the city planning commission, at the first meeting of that body in 1927, it became known Saturday.

Mr. Torras at this season will outline plans of the department for the coming year and will make recommendations concerning important changes in the city charter which will permit zoning, control of newly opened subdivisions and outlining street widening and extensions.

It is expected that the commission will adopt in the main Mr. Torras' suggestions in these matters and will back to the limit the proposal of Councilman John A. White, of the fourth, to ask the state legislature to so amend the state constitution that zoning laws passed in 1921 by the city, may be made effective. Mr. White's paper has been referred to the charter revision committee of city council, which is headed by Dr. C. J. Vaughan, also councilman from the fourth.

Urges Viaducts Program.

Among other things, Mr. Torras recommends that the city begin as soon as possible, construction of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts, plans of which were given decided impetus Saturday by a decision of the United States circuit court of appeals sustaining the federal district court here.

Widening of Whitehall street from the intersection of Forsyth westward, in order to facilitate the flow of traffic through the newly opened Madison avenue extension, which since has been named Spring street, is a prime necessity, according to Mr. Torras.

Strict adherence to building lines in residential districts must be maintained, in the opinion of Mr. Torras, who stated that several widening projects which ought to be pushed have been held up on account of disregard for lines which council established.

Other Features Seen.

Double decked streets, elevated sidewalks, grade separations, regrading of areas and streets, automobile routing and other necessary improvements to speed up traffic are in the offing and should be considered in planning for Atlanta as the metropolis of the south, the report shows.

Parks on the outskirts of the city should be given support of Atlantans and establishment of others outside the city encouraged, Mr. Torras' report will say.

Members of the commission this year are: Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Charles A. Wickersham, vice president of the 1926 commission; Frank Pittman, Clarence Bell, Mrs. J. P. Billups, J. H. Ewing and J. Houstoun Johnson, only new member, who succeeded Jesse Armistead, resigned.

Officers will be named at the session Monday.

Amundsen Relates Graphic Details of North Pole Trip

BY E. RUBIN.

Captain Roald Amundsen, famous explorer of arctic and antarctic regions of the globe, Saturday night thoroughly entertained the large student body of Agnes Scott college and others who gathered to hear the adventurer describe his flight across the north pole and into the "inaccessible area" in the Norge dirigible.

"For 400 years this arctic region has been explored," Captain Amundsen said as he referred to an area encircling the north pole on one of the remarkable sets of colored slides with which his lecture was illustrated. "But this great section between the pole and Alaska remained a mystery long after the pole itself had been reached. In 1909 the idea first came to me to explore this region by airplane. I made five attempts before finally succeeding, in 1909, 1914, 1922, 1924 and 1925. Then came success in 1926.

"The expedition planned in 1922 broke down before we could buy a plane. It was then that I conceived the notion of lecturing and writing for the papers to secure the means to make another try at the great unknown area. While engaged in this work I figured that it would be 110 years old before I had sufficient capital at the rate I was going. Then I met Lincoln Ellsworth, the American who was eager to penetrate the inaccessible region. He gave his assistance to finance an expedition in which we were to use three plans. We secured two, but never could obtain the third.

"Our first attempt to land in the desert of ice resulted in our plane being frozen into snow and ice. We worked incessantly to loosen it and realized the region could never be conquered by aeroplanes, because it is too risky to fly where there is no landing place for the plane.

"Our next step was to obtain an airship, which the Italian government readily put at our disposal with the proviso that we carry six Italians in the crew. Then came the building of the N-1, the test, the christening of the airship as the Norge, and finally the sailing from fields just outside of Rome in April, 1926. The expedition was just begun."

Here the veteran explorer entered into a detailed account of the flight from Rome across the north pole to Alaska. His lecture, which was completely illustrated by slides, was followed by motion pictures of the entire voyage.

Graphic descriptions of the voyage, the uncertainty, the long, anxious moments, were related by Captain Amundsen in a most interesting manner. His thorough knowledge of arctic regions and his adventures in other sections have given him a wonderful grasp and his ability to impress an audience is uncanny.

Scores Added To Mayflower Prestige List

BY WILLIAM H. MAGEE, JR.

Boston, February 11.—To the thousands who already claim descent from Mayflower passengers, new thousands may now be added.

Because the purser of that well-known ocean-going taxi neglected to register the name of a physician, the coming months are apt to witness scores of applicants for Mayflower-descendant prestige.

This was revealed by Colonel Charles E. Banks, retired army officer, when he addressed the Massachusetts Historical society here Friday.

The unknown passenger, who little knew that three hundred years later his name would bring about a new edition of many a city's blue book, was Dr. Giles Heale, one-time practitioner in Drury lane, London, according to the colonel. He offered documentary evidence to establish the fact.

Colonel Banks, who has spent years in historical research, presented to the society a photograph of the will of one William Mullins, made on his death bed in Plymouth, Mass., during February, 1621. The will was drawn up in the presence of John Carver, first governor of Plymouth colony; Christopher Joanes, captain of the Mayflower, and Dr. Heale.

Owing to omission of Dr. Heale's name in the account of the voyage by Bradford, this rather important individual has been unknown for three centuries, said the colonel.

That the doctor's name was not revealed before this, Colonel Banks said, might also have been due to the very severe winter which greeted docking of the Mayflower, and the attendant epidemic which ravished the pioneers. Heale, however, later returned to England.

GOODWILL INDUSTRIES SHOW GOOD PROGRESS

Encouraging progress is shown in the annual report of the Atlanta Goodwill industries, read at a meeting and banquet of that organization at the Daffodil tea room Friday night by its president, Dr. Benjamin O. Holtzendorf.

The Atlanta Goodwill industries is a charitable organization under the supervision of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, whose aim is the material, spiritual and social uplift of the needy, attained by the sale of products made from cast-off material contributed to the body.

Officers elected for 1927 include Dr. Benjamin O. Holtzendorf, reelected president; Rev. Marvin Williams, vice president; Otis Cook, treasurer; Miss Aurelia Taylor, recording secretary; Miss Reathea Heedon, corresponding secretary; Rev. W. J. DeBardeleben, chaplain, and Miss Maybelle Jones, publicity secretary.

Civilization Seen as Doom

:: HIGH OFFICIALS HEAR UNIQUE PROPHECY ::

Of Research by Scientists

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—Scientists already are within 50 years of the day when their laboratories may be closed by the encroachments of civilization upon the areas which have thus far yielded their natural specimens, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, acting secretary of the Smithsonian institution, believes.

The prophecy was made today before an audience unique in the history of science—a gathering of high government officials, scholars, educators and civic leaders assembled in the first meeting since 1878 of the governing establishment of the institution.

In the audience, or at round tables devoted to the discussion of the future program of the historic citadel of American research, were President Coolidge, Vice President Dawes, Chief Justice Taft, several cabinet members, senators and representatives and scores of leaders in science, civic enterprise, industry and finance.

From the speakers came repeated emphasis upon the necessity for broadening of the institution to keep it abreast of its opportunities as the great coordinating factor and dynamo of scientific research in the United States.

Dr. Abbot said "at the present moment the encroachments of the white man are obliterating forever the remains of Indian civilization in America. The next few years offer the last opportunities to learn the story of America's native tribes.

"The same is true of the animal and plant life of the world, because of the encroachments of agriculture and other activities, hundreds of thousands of specimens have disappeared . . . more must disappear.

"The next 50 years will offer the last opportunity to secure many forms of nature, to preserve for the information and study of future generations."

Army Deserters, Both Atlantans, Quickly Caught

New York, February 12.—(Special.) Two privates of the sixteenth infantry, U. S. A., recently court-martialed and sentenced to hard labor for regulation violations, assaulted their lone guard, Private William Dufendorter, today, while breaking rocks in the southeast end of the reservation at Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island, seized his gun, flung it into the bay and made their way along the beach to Oakwood, several miles off.

There, while a general alarm was being broadcast and soldiers and detectives were preparing to start the man hunt, two detectives returning from a funeral happened to recognize the blue uniforms of the prisoners and arrested them.

They are Maynard Beagle, 21, and Joseph E. Vanco, 21. Both are from Atlanta. Beagle was sentenced recently to serve three years and Vanco to serve one. They were to have been taken to Governor's island Monday.

The authorities have not found out which one struck the sentry, but it was said both would face sentences of thirty years.

Detectives Ackerman and Boylan, of the New Dorp station, were returning in an automobile from the funeral of a comrade when they saw two prisoners passing the Elks club house in Oakwood, about an hour after their escape. The men made no resistance and were taken back to the post in the detectives' car.

They then told the authorities they had about $50 between them and had planned to go to Perthamboy, get civilian clothes and make their way to Georgia.

PSYCHIATRIST TO TALK TO GIRL SCOUT LEADERS

Dr. Newdigate Moreland Owensby, Atlanta neuro-psychiatrist, will lecture before the leaders' association of the local Girl Scout organization on "The Guidance of the Adolescent Girl" at a meeting Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the chamber of commerce.

Dr. Owensby will treat of the relation of mental and physical adjustments made during adolescence, and will discuss the scientific manner in which parents, teachers and leaders in girls' organizations must meet this situation, it was announced.

Dr. Owensby is author of numerous treatises and magazine articles dealing with mental disorders and psychology of mental adjustments. According to the current edition of "Who's Who" he was formerly psychiatrist-in-chief at the Bayview asylum Baltimore, was assistant professor and clinic demonstrator in neurology at Johns Hopkins, lecturer at the University of Maryland and professor at the University of Baltimore.

He did post-graduate work in London and his polyclinic work in Edinburgh, Berlin, Vienna, Munich and Paris. He served as major during the world war. He is a fellow in the American Psychiatrical association and a member of the Societe de Medicine Mentale de Belgique.

After Dr. Owensby's talk a 15-minute memorial service will be held in memory of the late Mrs. Juliette Lowe, of Savannah, Ga., who was the founder of the Girl Scout movement in America. Mrs. Lowe died at Savannah on January 17. Mrs. Joseph Lamar, a member of the Atlanta Girl Scout council, who has been a close personal friend of Mrs. Lowe during her entire life, will conduct the services.

Woman Is Robbed Of $4 in Series Of Week-End Thefts

Mrs. Evie Spriggs Lawler, of 328 East Fourteenth street, was covered by a quilt and revolver simultaneously by a daylight burglar after he entered her apartment Saturday morning, and robbed of $3 or $4. Several diamond rings and other jewelry were overlooked by the thief.

Yeggs worked the combination of the safe in Milan's garage, 124 Piedmont avenue, late Friday night, but were unrewarded for their trouble, according to police reports.

Three armed negroes held up several negro clerks and officials of the American Life Insurance company late Friday afternoon, and escaped in an automobile with an undetermined amount of loot, reports say.

Other robberies reported were loss of a pound cake and 20 pennies in cash from a Rogers store at 480 Edgewood avenue; a quantity of clothing taken from the Big Four pressing shop; a purse snatched from Miss Martha Thomas on Ponce de Leon avenue; $12 in cash stolen from the residence of N. Sikes at 302 Linden street; and two electric drills and a quantity of inner tubes taken by burglars who broke into the shop of H. A. Whitmire at 301 Hayden street. M. W. Driver, of Humbolt, Tenn., reported that he was "flim-flammed" out of $15 in a matching game near the Terminal station Friday night.

4 VACANCIES EXIST IN LEGISLATURE; 3 DIE; 1 RESIGNS

News of the recent death of G. B. Tippins, representative in the legislature from Appling county, was received Saturday by Governor Clifford Walker. The death of Mr. Tippins makes four vacancies in the lower house of the general assembly which will be filled in special elections to be called by ordinaries of the counties in which vacancies occurred.

Two other vacancies were caused by deaths of Dr. J. M. Spence, representative from Mitchell county, and Dr. C. L. Ketchum, representative from Lee county. The fourth vacancy was caused when Representative R. L. Polk, of Ware county, resigned.

The death of Mr. Tippins brought out the odd fact that there were two members of the house of almost the same name, one being G. B. Tippins, of Appling county, and the other, B. G. Tippins, of Evans county.

INDIANA PASSES BILL TO PROTECT THEATER OWNERS

Indianapolis, Ind., February 12.—(AP) A bill providing that it shall be unlawful for any corporation to compel a motion picture theater owner to lease more films than he wants was introduced in the house of the Indiana legislature today. The bill is sponsored by the motion picture theater owners of Indiana. Frank J. Rembush, of Shelbyville, president of the Theater Owners' association, said: "The little owner cannot live with this gigantic and unbearable monopoly set up through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., squeezing him to death at every turn."

Rembush said the theater owners were compelled to lease a certain number of films or suffer the loss of their entire supply. They are also forced to forego the right of legal protest, he said.

PARISHIONERS SUE CATHOLIC BISHOP OVER USE OF FUNDS

Providence, R. I., February 12.—(AP)—A controversy between Bishop William A. Hickey, of the Providence diocese, and French American members of Catholic churches in Rhode Island, over the use of funds from the church treasuries for the building of schools outside their parishes reached the state courts today.

Ten suits in equity seeking an accounting were filed in the superior court. The petitioners, a number of French American residents of the state named as respondents, Bishop Hickey, Monsigneur Peter E. Blessing, vicar general of the diocese, and the corporations of five churches in Woonsocket, three in Pawtucket and one each in Central Falls and Manville.

The declarations charge that funds were unlawfully taken from the treasuries of these churches and used for the building of schools outside the parishes in which the money was collected, as well as for the support of the Providence Visitor, weekly official organ of the Catholic church in the state, and the national Catholic welfare board.

PROGRESS MADE IN GREAT SMOKY FOREST RESERVE

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—The project for a national park in the Great Smoky mountain area of North Carolina and Tennessee moved forward today at conferences between governors of North Carolina and Tennessee, Secretary Work, of the interior department, members of the state conservation commissions and officials of the national park service.

Following a two-hour conference with Secretary Work and other interior department officials, the two state governors and members of the state conservation commissions went into a conference among themselves to decide on the amounts of money to be spent by the two states to acquire the 428,000 acres necessary to acquire before the area can be accepted as a national park.

Secretary Work promised the governors a survey of the 704,000-acre area lying half in North Carolina and half in Tennessee will be made during the coming spring and summer to outline roughly the areas acceptable to the interior department for national park services.

Governor A. W. McLean, of North Carolina, and Governor Austin Peay were told that 150,000 acres of the 704,000-acre area available must be secured by the states as a pledge and that securing of half of the balance will insure establishment of a park of at least 428,000 acres.

HIT BY STREET CAR, MAN BADLY INJURED

J. B. James, 27, of 527 Highland avenue, was taken to Grady hospital late Saturday night, believed to have a fractured skull, after being knocked down by a street car at Fort McPherson, according to hospital attaches. Details of how Mr. James was injured were not given hospital attaches and police have no record of the mishap.

Mrs. E. J. Swain, 33, of 144 Walker street, was treated at Grady hospital, Saturday night, for severe burns about the back and head she received when her clothing ignited before an open grate in the home, hospital attaches were told.

HEARTS TOUCHED BY COMING DEATHS OF WILD HORSES

Cheyenne, Wyo., February 12.—(AP)—The hearts, and in instances the shrewdness, of citizens of the east and middle west have been touched by the news that Wyoming is soon to drive thousands of wild horses from the range.

One man, with the idea that these cayuses are Shetland ponies, wrote that he would take a carload or more. A farmer of the corn belt pictured them as sturdy plow horses and decided he would well pay the market price of $2 a head, f. o. b. points.

Many of the "broom tails" are little larger than Shetland ponies, but they are bred to the open range and have an in-born fear of man. They would make dangerous playmates for children.

Harlie Scholie of Athol, Mo., who said he is red-haired and seven, sent Governor Frank C. Emerson a letter by special delivery. "Mama read in a Kansas City paper that you are going to kill all the wild horses there," he said. "Wonder if you would spare the life of one of the little colts and send it to me? That would make me the happiest boy in Missouri."

Governor Emerson was highly pleased by the boy's interest, and said in his reply that economy was the chief factor involved in the disposition of the wild horses.

"It would hardly be possible for me to send you a little colt, as you request," he said, "for it is a long way from Wyoming to Missouri, and it would cost as much to send a pony there as for you to buy one at home."

GARBAGE HISTORIANS ATTACKED BY BECK

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—Eulogizing George Washington, James M. Beck, former solicitor general of the United States, last night assailed "Garbage Historians," who have attacked the morals of the first president and those of his mother. He spoke before the Wakefield National Memorial association at a meeting designed to arouse interest in plans to reconstruct Washington's home and birthplace at Wakefield, Va.

Major General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, declared "we have received from Washington concepts, ideals and institutions which are worth preservation at any cost, even the cost of our lives, if that cost be required."

THOMASVILLE STARTS PLANS FOR ROSE SHOW

Thomasville, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Thomasville is already thinking of its annual rose show to be held this spring and at a meeting of the Garden club yesterday afternoon plans were discussed in regard to it. The only difficulty in the way now is to find a place large enough for the display.

Last year the show was held in the tobacco warehouse, but there is talk of putting up a special building arranged so that it will be exactly suited to the purpose. Wherever it is held, however, it is planned to make it the biggest and best of any heretofore held here.

At the meeting of the Rotary club this week President Merry appointed a committee to cooperate in staging the rose show, this committee consisting of Fred Loveless, John Watt, Joe Flowers, Clyde Neel and Frank Eidson.

The other civic clubs will also appoint committees.

Owners To Pass On Street Car Track Removal

A meeting of owners of property fronting on Luckie street will be held during the coming week for the purpose of determining whether or not the street car tracks on the street shall be moved to Techwood drive, it was announced Saturday.

Councilman Harry York, of the sixth ward, stated Saturday that he had been in conference with officials of the Georgia Railway and Power company, and it was practically agreed that the tracks will be moved should the property owners approve.

Fulton county commissioners have agreed to spend county funds along with those of the city in order to widen Luckie street, provided the property owners consent to have the street car tracks moved to Techwood drive, but unless that move is made, the entire project will be blocked, it was hinted Saturday.

AMERICAN GIRTH HAS DECREASED, SPEAKER STATES

Atlantic City, N. J., February 12—The waist average measurement of American men has decreased about an inch and a half during the past year, Henry R. Sullner, of Newark, told the State Retail Clothiers' association Tuesday.

The speaker attributed the phenomenon to "increased athletics and better diet." His conclusion as to the vanishing waistline was based on tailors' statistics.

WIFE OF BILL HART TO RETURN TO MOVIES

Reno, Nev., February 12.—(AP)—Divorced from her famous husband, William S. Hart of motion picture fame, after more than four years of separation, Mrs. Winifred Westover Hart was on her way to Los Angeles today to return to her first love—the cinema.

Mrs. Hart was granted the decree here yesterday after she had tearfully denounced the institution of divorce and had testified her husband had deserted her and had steadfastly refused to live with her since a few days after the birth of their son in September, 1922.

She was given the custody of the child, William Surrey Hart, Jr.

AGED WOMAN FOUND DEAD ON RAILROAD

West Palm Beach, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Hilda Johnson, an aged woman, was found dead on the Florida East Coast railroad tracks early this morning by the crew of an aproaching freight train. A southbound passenger train had passed the spot just a few minutes before.

While the woman was apparently killed by the first train, cuts and slashes on the body left some room for fears of foul play, police here admitted.

The woman's son, Gus G. Johnson, a groceryman, had been searching for his mother since the early hours of the morning.

ATTEMPT TO BREAK FLIGHT RECORD MADE

San Diego, Calif., February 12—(AP) The navy's Hawaiian flight plane PB-1 took off today in an attempt to remain on the wing for thirty or more hours and thus break the world record for duration. If the flight is successful it will not figure as an official record, because navy officers at North Island failed to comply with rules set down by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, H. E. Morin, contest committee member of that association, said tonight.

While the PB-1 was still in the air tonight, Captain J. H. Reeves, commanding the aircraft squadron's battle fleet, started an investigation as to why the aeronautical association had canceled the trial as an official flight.

Dr. Parks' Policies Being Carried Out, Says College Head

Milledgeville, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—The policies and principles of the late Dr. M. M. Parks are being rigidly adhered to in the conduct of the Georgia State College of Women, Dr. J. L. Beeson, acting president, said today.

"Dr. Parks' ideals and ambitions for the G. S. C. W.," said Dr. Beeson, "brought this college to the high eminence it now occupies, and we are 'carrying on' as he would have wished us to."

Finishing touches on the construction of the new college building and class room annexes are in progress. The structure, housing an auditorium capable of seating 1,700 persons, was the last achievement of the late president. It is a $195,000 project, which sum also includes the cost of a central heating plant covering the entire college. The practice school, or laboratory of the college of education, is housed in the annex.

Second semester work has been begun, it is announced.

Dr. Beeson, who has been for years chairman of the faculty, or vice president of the college, has taken Dr. Parks' place as president on numerous occasions, one being when the latter became state superintendent of schools for one year, on leave of absence from the G. S. C. W. He has been connected with the college for more than 30 years, as head of the chemistry department.

PONZI EN ROUTE HOME AFTER STAY IN TEXAS PRISON

Houston, Texas, February 12.—(United News.)—Charles Ponzi, Boston "financial wizard," is en route home today.

After a varied career that included work in Florida and an attempt to serve as a member of a freighter's crew, Ponzi has left the county jail here. Two Boston police officers took him back after a long legal battle.

He was arrested last July at New Orleans on board a ship on which he planned to leave this country, and was returned to Houston.

CITY'S AESTHETIC SENSE OUTRAGED BY GAUDY CARS

Kansas City, February 12.—(AP)—Kansas City's sense of the beautiful has been outraged by gaudy street cars, and now the local art commission is trying to determine the best color combination for the cars.

Recently the Kansas City Public Service company announced the street cars were to be redecorated. W. G. Woolfolk, president, recommended maroon with yellow trimming, which looked well on the small colored sketch.

When the first of the newly-painted cars appeared, lovers of beauty and art cried out in anguish. Red, almost crimson, and yellow clashed and smote the artistic eye.

An avalanche of criticism poured into Mr. Woolfolk and suggestions were legion. Then, in desperation, Mr. Woolfolk stopped the painting, washed his hands of the matter and turned it over to the art body.

WESTERN CITIES TALK TO LONDON OVER WIRELESS

Chicago, February 12.—(AP)—Chicago and Detroit talked over wire and wireless with London today, formally inaugurating commercial telephone service between the two cities.

MISSOURI VISITOR TO FLORIDA KILLED

Tarpon Springs, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—W. M. Douglass, 64, winter visitor here from Moundsville, Mo., died shortly after noon from injuries received when his automobile was struck by a northbound Atlantic Coast Line train at 8:30 a. m., at a grade crossing just south of the city. The car and man were carried 400 feet on the pilot of the fast passenger train, which stopped and brought the injured man to a hospital here.

FIRE PREVENTION SEEN AT BAINBRIDGE

Bainbridge, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—According to H. B. Rich, chief of fire department, Bainbridge is making great improvement in fire prevention. January's report to council showed only a few alarms with practically no damage.

Drills at the schools were made in 45 seconds in the grammar building and 48 seconds were used in clearing the high school building.

EXTENSION CLASSES GROW AT UNIVERSITY

Athens, Ga., February 12.—(AP)—From a beginning with a small group at Toccoa, Ga., in 1924, the extension department of the University of Georgia has grown to include 40 study groups in which 900 students are registered.

"The work done by this division is being praised over the state, especially by the county school superintendents," Dr. G. E. Hutchinson, who organized the service and now directs the division of home service states. "Only the more progressive teachers take the work and the mental stimulus together with instruction in the latest approved methods of teaching they receive, is resulting in much more efficient work on their part."

The division of home study is divided into two sections, namely those taking correspondence courses and those who are met by instructors from the university once or twice a month in extension classes at their home towns.

The correspondence section was begun in 1923 when 35 students were registered under this group. This section alone now has 300 students taking 500 credit hours of work. The faculty devoted to this department has shown a corresponding growth from one man who devoted his weekends to extension work in 1824 to the present staff of three professors who give their entire time to the extension department and seven who meet classes on week-ends.

Will Aid Students.

Dr. Hutchinson believes that interest created through correspondence and extension work will result in many students going to college who would not have gone otherwise. Most of the work now being offered, he says, is in education and sociology for the benefit of teachers who need additional instruction to secure credits for their state professional certificates. This work will soon be supplimented by the addition of more academic courses and the inauguration of a series of short commercial courses for business men, he says. Courses of the work now being offered count toward a degree at the University of Georgia, provided the recipient is able to meet entrance requirement, he pointed out.

Another plan of the division is to initiate a library extension service to furnish material for research work for the benefit of high schools, women's clubs, parent-teacher associations and other similar organizations.

The following instructors are meeting classes at these locations under the present organization: Dr. George Hutchinson, who teaches classes in education and sociology at Augusta, Savannah, Lawrenceville; Professor Sam. C. Pelham, education, sociology and geographic history at Calhoun, Cartersville, Buchannon and Tallapoosa; Professor E. D. Pusy, education at Carnesville, Clarkesville, Danielsville, Elberton, Hartwell and Toccoa; Professor E. S. Sell, education at Athens; Professor E. H. Henderson, education and social civics at Athens and Dublin; Professor R. P. Walker, English at Commerce; Professor A. H. Webster, education at Adel, Fitzgerald, Newnan, Quitman and Stone Mountain.

GOVERNOR GRANTS RESPITE TO SLAYER

Governor Clifford Walker Saturday granted a respite of 60 days to John Rounsaville, Chattooga county negro, sentenced to be executed February 15 following his conviction of killing his step-son. The governor took this action in view of similar action taken in other capital cases in which the contention has been made that the state does not now have a state prison warden legally qualified to execute condemned prisoners. This question is involved in several capital cases now pending before the supreme court.

Furniture Company Slashes All Prices Prior To Removal

EMPIRE FURNITURE COMPANY STORE.

Present home of the Empire Furniture company at 263-265 Peachtree street, is to be vacated shortly when the company moves into its new quarters, it was announced Saturday.

The change of location by the furniture company has been made the occasion for a pretentious removal sale. The company will not move a single piece of furniture, it was stated, every article being priced so as to insure its immediate sale.

"While thousands of Atlantans have already taken advantage of the price reductions," company officials stated, "our stock at present is complete and varied, due to the fact that orders which were purchased before the company planned to move could not be cancelled and are being shipped into the office."

GEORGIA EDITORS PICK BOSTON FOR MEETING

Eleven "sea-going" Georgia editors dropped anchor here Saturday and charted the third annual summer cruise of the Georgia Press association, which this year will be to Boston, Mass.

The cruising party will sail from Savannah May 12, arriving at Boston on May 16. After a brief stay in that city the Georgians will return on the same vessel, H. M. Stanley, corresponding secretary, announced following the meeting.

Details for this year's trip were mapped by the board of managers and the entertainment committee of the press association, together with W. A. Crawford, a representative of the Ocean Steamship company. Following the meeting the newspaper folk were entertained at lunch at the Capital City club as the guests of Linton K. Starr, local honorary member of the association.

Those in attendance at the meeting included President Ernest Camp, Monroe, editor of The Walton Tribune; Miss Emily Woodward, of The Vienna News, vice president; Mrs. Royal Daniel, editor of The Quitman Free Press; C. D. Rountree, editor of The Wrightsville Headlight; W. T. Shytle, editor of The Adel News; O. W. Passavant, business manager of The Newnan Herald; M. L. Fleetwood, editor of The Cartersville News-Tribune; Louie L. Morris, editor of The Hartwell Sun; Secretary C. E. Beuns, editor of The Butler Herald; Corresponding Secretary H. M. Stanley, editor of The Editors' Forum, Atlanta, and Linton K. Starr, honorary member, Atlanta.

WOOD FINISHING FIRM LOCATES OFFICES HERE

S. C. Johnson & Son, "the wood finishing authorities" of Racine, Wis., will open an Atlanta warehouse and southern sales office at 16 West Peachtree place, it was learned Saturday.

The branch will be open for business by the first of March and will act as headquarters for the territory of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and eastern Tennessee. The office and warehouse will occupy 5,000 square feet of space. Five men will travel out of the Atlanta headquarters to cover the southeastern territory.

A. L. P. Smith, who will be in charge of the Atlanta office and warehouse, is bringing his wife and family to Atlanta to make a permanent home. J. R. Engle is southern representative of the Johnson company, in charge of the district.

S. C. Johnson & Son is one of the largest manufacturers of floor wax and electrical floor polishers in the world. The company also produces varnishes, enamels, wood dyes and other equipment for treating floors and furniture. It has factories at Racine, Middlesex, England, and Sidney, Australia, and branch offices in various sections of the world. The Atlanta lease for warehouse space was negotiated through Weyman & Connors.

That the advertising of Atlanta by the forward Atlanta commission had great influence with officials at Racine and was a factor in their determination to locate their southeastern warehouse here, was the conviction expressed by Mr. Smith.

TYPISTS' SCHOOL ORGANIZED HERE BY B. G. PAULIN

B. G. Paulin, a public accountant for 20 years, has organized a typists' and ediphone operators' school in the Wynne-Claughton building for the purpose of teaching and supplying competent employees to fill positions in various offices in the city. The new institution is known as the Academy of Typewriting.

An Atlanta vocational agency was organized by Mr. Paulin in May, 1925, which has served as an employment agency since that time, without any registration fees.

During the month of March, 1926, the agency moved from the third floor of the Wynne-Claughton building to its present quarters on the twelfth floor in the same building. The present location has been equipped with the best of typewriting and ediphone equipment and made into one of the most modern vocational agencies in the state, it is said.

The difficulty of procuring competent typists and ediphone operators to fill the ever-increasing open positions, has led Mr. Paulin to organize a school of his own, wherein applicants may be trained and then placed through the Atlanta vocational agency.

BANK WITHDRAWALS TO BE TESTED IN COURT

Test of the privilege of depositors to withdraw money from banks on the days the institutions closed their doors is the object of a suit in Twiggs county superior court filed by A. B. Mobley, Georgia state superintendent of banks.

If successful in this test, the bank superintendent plans to institute suits in similar cases growing out of closing last summer of several score banks in Georgia, most of them members of the chain of which the Bankers' Trust company, of Atlanta, was fiscal agent. The actions would involve approximately $1,000,000.

The suit seeks to recover from five depositors of the Twiggs County bank, a member of the chain, money they are alleged to have withdrawn from the bank the day it failed and to prorate it among all the creditors. It is contended in the action, which involves about $12,000, that the bank was insolvent when the five depositors withdrew their funds, and that they, by their withdrawals, assumed the status of preferred creditors, a position to which they were not entitled under the banking laws. The defendants are given until February 28 to answer the action.

W. D. Manley, president of the Bankers' Trust company, was convicted in Fulton superior court recently of the "fraudulent insolvency" of the Farmers' and Traders' bank, of Atlanta, a member of the chain, and sentenced to from nine to ten years' imprisonment. This sentence has been appealed and Mr. Manley's illness has prevented him from being brought to trial on a number of other indictments in connection with the closing of the banks.

CHURCH CARETAKER SOUGHT IN KILLING

South Bend, Ind., February 12.—(AP)—Disappointed in their first day's search for the missing portion of a women's headless body found in the St. Joe river Thursday, authorities have concentrated upon a search for Ernest Rogers, 30 years old, caretaker of St. Mark's college.

Rogers disappeared December 20, the same day that Mrs. Alice Van Dusen, at whose home is was a boarder, was reported misssing. Neighbors said the woman would never have left her home and three small children willingly.

The man and woman started downtown ostensibly on a shopping trip. Officers were told that there was a sharp argument between the two just before they left.

Mrs. Van Dusen was separated from her husband. He was unable to give any information as to her whereabouts. Her weight and height tally closely with the approximated weight and height of the body.

Edward C. Smith, of the naval air station at San Diego, Cal., expressed fear that the body might be that of his wife, last seen January 17, while visiting in South Bend. After joining in a search, Smith returned to San Diego with his two children Wednesday.

Two shallow holes discovered in a marl bed not far from where the body was found, were first believed to have been used as graves. Measurements later proved them to be too small. The theory persisted, however, that the body was either buried in or covered with marl, which acts as a preservative. Officers held that the slayer might have used marl in the belief it would act as a corrosive, destroying the body.

Another theory was that the crime might have been committed many miles from South Bend, the body floating in the swift current until finally caught in a quiet cove.

Oratorical Contest Gets Aid From Georgia Library Board

Much valuable aid is being given the high school students in Georgia who contemplate entering the fourth national oratorical contest, sponsored in Georgia by The Constitution, by the Georgia library commission, according to Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, secretary, who says that calls are pouring in daily asking for books on the contest subjects.

"Among the numerous calls which come to the Georgia library commission on every conceivable subject," says Miss Wheatcroft, "none has been more popular during the last few weeks than the United States constitution essay contest in all its various phases. From the rural schools, located in the most remote counties as well as from the schools and public libraries of the larger towns, letters pour in asking for the loan of books to supply information on this subject or to supplement what may already be at hand.

"To meet this need as adequately as possible the library commission has gathered an extensive collection of books dealing with the constitution, its makers and its history. All of the books recommended by the American Bar association as being best suited to the understanding of high school students have been purchased and most of those on the supplementary list for college and adult use.

Books Are Loaned.

"These books are loaned to individuals or groups in the same community wherever possible or placed in the public libraries where as many contestants as are near at hand may have equal access to them. Each loan of a few books at a time is sent to one place for two weeks and upon the return of one loan another group of different books will be sent if requested, so that in the course of time as many books as needed will reach each borrower or group.

"The use of the books is entirely free, only the return postage on each loan being paid by the borrower. The commission pays the outgoing postage on each loan. The books are sent by parcel post. This individual mail service, inaugurated by the library commission six years ago to assist persons living in small towns or rural communities without adequate local library, facilities has grown steadily year by year. During 1926 more than 100,000 people in the state of Georgia were benefited by the book loan service of this department, which, on one of the smallest appropriations made to any state department, works steadily day by day answering thousands of calls on varied topics and sending out packages of books to every county from the mountains to the Florida line, affording information, education and recreation and carrying out its slogan of supplying 'books for the bookless' of our state.

"It is the intention of the library commission to give all aid possible to the oratorical contest, sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution, which is causing such intensive study of the United States constitution."

Many Libraries.

Miss Wheatcroft points out that there are 43 public libraries in Georgia to which students desiring to enter the contest may apply for books on the desired subjects.

In addition to the public libraries, Dr. Joseph S. Stewart, of the University of Georgia at Athens, who is director of the oratorical contest in Georgia, states that there are something like 75 other libraries operated by organizations, also many school libraries in the various districts.

"With the aid of the Georgia libraries, private libraries, school libraries and large collections of books owned by private parties and lawyers," says Dr. Stewart, "Georgia high school students should have no trouble in finding books that deal with the United States constitution, from which all necessary material may be obtained for orations on the constitution.

"When a subject for an oration has been selected by a student," continued Dr. Stewart, "no time should be lost in 'outlining' the speech, that is, a historical setting should be given, then work up to the meat of the subject and include in it present-day applications. It should be remembered that all speeches must not be over 10 minutes' long and in the final contest the gavel will fall at the end of 10 minutes' speaking, therefore speeches should not be over 9 1-2 minutes long.

"Length of speeches may be determined by the speed of the speaker. The winning speech last year contained 1,103 words, while that of Joseph Mullarky, Georgia winner in the United States zone contests, contained 1,400 words. I should say 1,200 words would be a happy medium.

"Students should also remember that zone and final contests will be held in halls seating something like 8,000 persons and speeches must be delivered that will 'carry' well in large buildings."

List of Libraries.

Georgia public libraries, as furnished by Miss Wheatcroft, follows, name of town, library and librarian being given in order stated:

Albany, Carnegie, Mrs. E. K. Menko; Americus, Carnegie, Mrs. L. P. Merritt; Atlanta, Carnegie, Miss Tommie D. Barker; Augusta, Young Men's Library association, Mrs. J. M. Johnson; Bainbridge, public library, Miss Sadie DesVergers; Barnesville, Carnegie, Mrs. Augusta Lamb dle; Boston, Carnegie, Miss Carolyn Herman; Brunswick, public library, Miss Beverly Jones; Camilla, public library, Mrs. Charles Watt, Jr.; Cartersville, Mary Mumford memorial, Mrs. J. J. Barrow; Quitman, Brooks county library, Miss Jeanie Denmark; Rome, Carnegie, Miss Helen Eastman; Savannah, public, Miss Ola M. Wyeth; Statesboro, public, Miss Myrtle Wilson; Thomasville, public, Miss Mary Hansell; Valdosta, Carnegie, Miss Elizabeth Havenotte; Washington, Mary Willis, Miss Kathleen Colley; Waycross, public, Miss Elizabeth Blackshear; West Point, Hawkes children's, Mrs. Mary Gulin.

Contest Not Complicated.

It is pointed out that there is nothing complicated about the contest. Georgia high schools that are paid-up members for 1927 in the State High School association are eligible to enter their students; each contestant must be 19 years old; as many pupils as desire may enter from any school, each school holding its own elimination contest; the winner in each school contest will then enter the district contest, the school districts occupying the same territory as the congressional district; the winner in the district contest will compete in the state contest to be held in Atlanta; the state winner will enter the zone contest to be held in Birmingham on May 6, with final national meeting in Washington on May 20.

During March and the first part of April individual schools will hold their contests and the district meetings will be held around the latter part of April. Students have from 30 to 40 days from February 15 to prepare their orations, it will be noted.

The Constitution offers $15 in gold to each winner in the 12 districts; $100 in gold to the state winner and $10 each to the winner in second and third place in the state contest.

The grand prize in the United States will be a summer European tour for seven zone winners and the national winner, with all expenses paid, Randolph Leigh, of Washington, organizer and director general of the contests throughout the United States, announces.

Letters received by The Constitution indicates that much interest is already being taken in Georgia in the contest. The seventh district contest will be held in Cartersville on April 1, C. A. Keith, of Cedartown, secretary, announces; Buford pupils write that they are interested and W. D. Sanford, superintendent of the Washington, Ga. schools, states there are 70 pupils in the high school there studying the United States constitution. "We expect to have a large number to tryout. Anyway, you may consider us as a contestant," he writes.

Must Be Original.

The orations must be the original work of the students; their delivery must not consume more than ten minutes, and the treatment of the subjects must combine historical background with application to conditions of today.

The contest is based upon the constitution, but wide latitude is given in the choice of subject so long as it conforms with the general requirement. By way of suggestion, the following subjects are proposed:

The Meaning of the Constitution Today.
America's Contribution to Constitutional Government.
Washington's Contribution to the Constitution.
Hamilton's Contribution to the Constitution.
Franklin's Contribution to the Constitution.
Jefferson's Contribution to the Constitution.
Marshall's Contribution to the Constitution.
Webster's Contribution to the Constitution.
Lincoln's Contribution to the Constitution.

In orations that deal biographically with the men included in the list above it is expected that the speakers will show how the influence of the men discussed survives today. In orations that deal with the general subject of the constitution, it is expected that the speakers will discuss the significance of the constitutional provision covering the subject chosen—the citizen's duty to vote, for example—and show its application today. It is emphasized that the contest revolves about the constitution and that it is designed to increase respect for and interest in American institutions.

DICTATOR SEEN FOR BROADWAY

said, "is a sincere man who has knowledge of public taste and is fit to judge what is good and what is not. The theater should be saved from petty outsiders who would ruin it. The theater needs a surgeon, and must submit to surgery to continue its existence."

At police headquarters Commissioner George V. McLaughlin said no week-end raids had been planned.

However, every policeman who has a theater on his beat is now, in effect, a stage censor, according to a blanket order which goes into effect today instructing the police to make arrests whenever, in their judgment, public morals are endangered.

Shows Are Censored.

The order was issued after the police had reported to Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee that they had been unable Thursday night to discover any nude or semi-nude women appearing in the current revues and musical comedies. Three shows, which the police inspected, were George White's "Scandals," "Gay Paree" and Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

Producers are in deadly earnest in their fight against censorship and on Monday a bitter battle may develop in Jefferson Market court when the principals of "The Virgin Man," "The Captive" and "Sex" are arraigned. May D. Steuer was retained today by "The Captive" owners. His first act to free "The Captive" was a letter to Joab Banton, district attorney of New York county, in which was presented the proposal that "The Captive" be acted out before a grand jury. This would show conclusively, Steuer believes, that the play is everything it should be.

Seven girls and two men, arrested late Friday night in a Brooklyn night club, were arrigned today in Gates avenue court before Chief Magistrate William McAdoo and released in $500 bail for hearing February 24.

The offense was that the girls stepped into the dining room attired in what Detective Edward Smith described as "short satin pants and below these their legs were showing, your honor!"

FARM BLOC PLANS TO FIGHT CHANGES

will be taken Monday when Chairman Haugen of the agriculture committee appears before the rules committee to ask for authority to substitute the senate bill for its companion under discussion in the house. A house vote on such a step is likely, and is expected to indicate the strength of the measure.

House farm leaders said today they were favorable to various senate amendments including the Bledsoe insurance plan designed as a safeguard against crop price declines, as a supplement to the equalization fee, and to the inclusion of tobacco as one of the commodities on which the fee would be levied, and were willing to accept all of them.

Continues Fight.

In the face of efforts to put through the senate bill unchanged, opponents of the measure continued their fight in the house against it and announced they would put every obstacle in the way of a vote on the bill. It is expected that both the Curtis-Crisp bill, rejected yesterday by the senate, and the proposal sponsored by Representative Aswell, Democrat, Lousisiana, will be offered as substitutes.

A final vote in the house is not expected before the middle of next week.

GEORGE AND HARRIS EXPLAIN OPPOSITION.

Washington, February 12.—(Special.)—Senators George and Harris issued a joint statement here today explaining their opposition to the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, against which they both voted. The senate passed the bill Friday. The statement follows:

"The McNary-Haugen bill, as it passed the senate yesterday, confers upon a board of control at Washington the power to levy an equalization fee or tax upon all of the staple agricultural products included in the bill. Two Georgia products are included in the bill, namely, cotton and hogs. The power of this board to fix the fee on each bale of cotton and each pound of pork is absolutely unlimited.

"The government board or bureau is to be appointed from names suggested by the farm organizations throughout the country. Not more than three of the board will have any direct interest in cotton farming. The real control of our chief product will, therefore, be at all times in the hands of a board the majority of which will have no real interest or understanding of the problems of the cotton farmer. This board will have the absolute power to produce an artificial scarcity or shortage in the basic farm products included in the McNary-Haugen bill. The government must acquire a complete monopoly of every line of business in which it enters. It will be borne in mind that the bill does not propose to regulate and control production and marketing. It proposes to market all the surplus basic agricultural crops directly using the cooperative association or any commercial association or corporation for that purpose.

Disaster Is Seen.

"In the long run the control of farming in the south by a board at Washington, subject to political influence and control, and with the power to tax every producer of cotton or hogs at will, must prove disastrous.

"Every effort was made to defer the equalization tax on cotton, especially, first for two years and then for one year. Although this promise had been definitely held out to us it was in the end flatly denied. In these circumstances, southern senators like Senator Heflin, Alabama; Senators Harrison and Stephens, Mississippi; Senator Blease, of South Carolina; Senator Overman, North Carolina, and the Virginia senators felt imposed to oppose the McNary-Haugen bill.

"We supported the Crisp-Curtis bill, which provided exactly the same sum of money and for precisely the same purpose as the McNary-Haugen bill. The Crisp-Curtis bill could have passed with the support of the democrats. It would be approved by the president. It is inconceivable that the president will approve the McNary-Haugen bill. Nearly every lawyer of recognized ability in and out of congress has declared the McNary-Haugen bill to be unconstitutional. It is hardly within the range of possibility that the bill, if it finally passes the house, can ever become a law. First, it is assumed that the president will veto it. It cannot be passed by the congress over his veto. Even if the president should approve it, it would finally be invalidated by the courts. We therefore had the option of taking a measure which we believe cannot become a law, or accepting a measure which gave us the same benefits but which did not contain the provisions of the equalization fee. The Curtis-Crisp bill is conceded on all sides to be free from attack in the courts.

Offers Definite Program.

"The tariff can have no application to cotton. The measure offers a definite program for the continued protection of all food products made in the west which all consumers, including our southern farmers, must buy.

"Convinced, as we are, of these facts, we believed that the Curtis-Crisp bill offered the only hope of farm relief at this session and that the McNary-Haugen bill in the form in which it now goes to the house might increase the price of western wheat but will be little less than disastrous to the southern farmer particularly."

FIVE POWER PARLEY AT GENEVA ASSURED

lief opposing theories as to basic procedure toward general disarmament.

ITALY WILL INSIST ON NAVAL DEFENSE.

Rome, February 12.—(AP)—"Italy must insist on absolute liberty to construct and use as many destroyers, submarines and all other types of light fighting ships as she considers necessary for her defense," the Gionale d'Italia declares tonight.

The entire Italian press agrees in expressing cynicism over the possibility of success of President Coolidge's proposal, while the foreign office announces that Premier Mussolini still is consulting military and naval experts in preparation for Italy's official answer.

The Gionale d'Italia says further: "We fear that the Coolidge proposal tries again to bring up for discussion certain problems, which first at Washington and then at Rome, did not get a warm reception. We do not object to the idea of Italy's capital ship tonnage being equal to that of any other Mediterranean power, but the same criterion cannot be used in the case of destroyers and submarines, which being purely defensive should be subject to regional agreements. If we were to limit the construction of these types of ships we would seriously injure our defensive powers."

BRIAND TO DRAFT FRANCE'S REPLY.

Paris, February 12—(United News.) The French reply to President Coolidge's new disarmament proposal, which is expected to define this country's objections to separate consideration of naval arms limitation, was formulated at a cabinet meeting today.

President Doumergue and Premier Poincare met with the cabinet and Foreign Minister Briand was instructed to draft a reply to the United States and submit it to the cabinet Tuesday.

It was understood that Briand's reply, while not an outright refusal, would constitute a strong statement of the French disarmament thesis, which is that naval, land and air armaments are indivisible and must be discussed together. There was likelihood, the United News was informed, that Briand's note would make suggestions to the United States government, possibly proposing that Mr. Coolidge make his proposal to the preparatory commission of the League of Nations and also to the smaller powers.

French Objections.

Briand's reply, it is said would object to the Coolidge proposal because it would take disarmament from the jurisdiction of the league, because it did not include smaller states and because it did not take into account the potential war strength of nations in determining the extent to which disarmament would be desirable.

JAPANESE WILL ACCEPT WITHOUT RESERVATIONS.

(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Toyko, February 12.—Japan will accept President Coolidge's proposal for a five power conference on the limitation of cruisers, submarines and other lighter units of navies, a foreign office spokesman declared today. The acceptance is expected to be made without any reservations.

Considering that President Coolidge sprang a complete surprise on Japan, his disarmament proposal is meeting with a very favorable reception on the whole, although the press generally agrees that Japan is entitled to a higher cruiser rating and Japan is not willing to enter into an agreement with Great Britain and America only.

WOULD ENDANGER COLONIES, SAYS FRENCH NEWSPAPER.

(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Paris, February 12.—"The naval limitation plan, if undertaken, means the abandonment of the colonies," is the gist of an editorial in the nationalist newspaper Liberte tonight. The article hints that the United States wants France to consent to a further reduction in the size of its navy in order to obtain certain valuable French colonies for which a portion of the war debt will be written off.

"With colonial power ceasing to be naval power we will only conserve the colonies a short time," says Liberte, which states that the German general staff now has readopted the Schlieffen plan for the next war, evisaging operations in the west—against France—instead of in the east against Poland or Russia, as they did previously, since the armistice."

Exclusive Suburban Supper Club Opening Will Give Atlantans Tastes of Night Life

Peachtree Gardens, beautiful night club which will be opened on May 1, will give Atlanta its first exclusive supper club and touch of cabaret and night life. It will be located just off Peachtree and Wieuca roads.

Gay night life on a par with that of New York and other night club centers will be afforded Atlantans after May 1 in the opening on that date of the Peachtree Gardens, exclusive suburban supper club, to be located on Oakdale road, just off Peachtree and Wieuca roads, according to announcement Saturday by L. P. Kilgore, manager.

Contracts already have been let and construction of the 100 by 170 foot clubhouse will start immediately.

"No expense will be spared to make it the finest institution of its kind in the south, and great care and excellent taste on the part of the operators will assure the public of only the best in the way of entertainment," Mr. Kilgore said.

An Atlanta company has been organized, with a capital of $300,000, to operate the establishment. L. P. Taylor is president of the company, other officers being, N. R. Glenn, first vice president; N. N. Furney, second vice president; Philip N. Jobson, treasurer; A. W. White, secretary, and Mr. Kilgore, general manager.

$130,000 Estimated Cost.

Seventeen acres of land have been purchased for the club site, the total cost of the ground and buildings being estimated at $130,000, practically all of which has been raised locally. Plenty of parking space will be available for motorists, sufficient to accommodate 250 cars. Special protection will be given cars by a special police force.

The interior of the clubhouse will be tastefully decorated in keeping with the theme of gaiety, and two separate raised stages will be provided, one for the orchestra and the other for the performers. Dancing will be done by patrons on a maple floor 40 by 70 feet. Arrangements will be made to seat 800 guests at one sitting, while an unique system of electrical equipment will provide unusual illumination.

Color effects produced will create the effect of a dance under the open sky, with moving clouds, the moon and stars in plain view above.

High class entertainers will be engaged for the Atlanta night club, according to the announcement. Max Fisher's eleven-piece orchestra will play during the opening week. Fisher's orchestra is well known through its Brunswick records, and is now playing an engagement at Castle Farms, Cincinnati's famous cabaret.

Big Revues Planned.

Ernie Young, of radio fame, will provide weekly revues of a high type, bringing direct to Atlanta performers from New York and Chicago's exclusive night clubs. Choruses of from 15 to 20 attractive dancers will appear in each revue.

The cafe will be open to the public from 6 o'clock at night to 2 o'clock in the morning, the first revue appearing at 8:15, for 30 minutes. There will follow a 20-minute period for general dancing, this schedule being continued until 12:15. Dancing will be permitted from the close of the revue until 2 o'clock.

Directors of the club are, L. P. Taylor, F. W. Woolworth interests, Paul S. Etheridge, Philip N. Jobson, N. R. Glenn, N. N. Furney, A. W. White, H. Stafford, L. P. Kilgore and A. Q. Dobbs.

THEATERS JOIN IN BIG BENEFIT

show and one which will attract thousands.

It is the hope of managers to turn over a goodly number of $1,000 bills to the Tallulah Falls institute after the performance and have the satisfaction of knowing that they have given Atlanta a show worth ten times the price of admission, and at the same time have added a substantial sum to the treasury of the school which is doing such a great work among mountain children of Georgia.

Plans for Seat Sale.

Arrangements have been made to sell only the number of tickets which will fill the auditorium to capacity and not one ticket beyond the capacity of the theater will be sold. This will assure each purchaser of a ticket that he will get a seat and will eliminate any possibility of having to stand in the back of the theater during the show.

From now until March 11 an intensive advertising campaign will be conducted for the big show. Newspapers of Atlanta are cooperating 100 per cent in the enterprise and the show will be advertised on billboards, in newspapers and in special trailers to be shown at the moving picture and vaudeville theaters of the city. All the special scenery and lighting effects will be installed in the auditorium before the show is presented and managers are in a position to guarantee that the auditorium stage will be equipped to give a perfect show. Acts selected for the performance also will be chosen for their adaptability to a large building like the auditorium, and with virtually unlimited material from which to select a program will be presented which the managers believe will please from the first minute until the final curtain.

Details of plans will be announced later as well as names of numerous stars of the stage and screen who will participate in the show. Tickets will be placed on sale at $1, the date for the sale to be announced later.

OPERA STAR DENIES USE OF CIGARETTES

comment, "I don't believe it—Sarah." And her daughter writes, also, "When did you start it?"

She likes the odor of tobacco smoked by her own boys—except on days when she is to sing. Such days she doesn't allow a burning atom of tobacco to enter her rooms.

Doesn't Powder Nose.

"Me smoke?" She laughed. "Why, I am so old fashioned I don't use powder. I sing with a shiny nose."

Sings to Boys Who Died.

Near the close of the program which Madame Schumann-Heink will give at the auditorium Wednesday night, is a number, "Taps," arranged by Pasternak. As the title indicates, it deals with the soldier boy for whom "Taps" is blown the last time.

Madame Schumann-Heink, in her apartment at the Georgian Terrace, talked a little about that song Saturday afternoon in the interview which developed into one of the memorable events of a newspaper career covering twenty years.

"When I was singing in the camps, for the boys of America who went to war in 1917," said Madame Schumann-Heink, "I was really afraid of all the majors, and captains, and the colonels. Because I wasn't working for them. They were all right anyway. The ones I buddied with, the ones I sang for, and the ones I loved were the boys in the ranks. They were real America, the best demonstration of America yet—and, in most cases, even their parents didn't know it.

The Ones Best Loved.

"Then a lot of them, these boys that I loved, died. All through the war—and afterwards—I kept hearing that so-and-so had died, that the other fellow had been killed, that four or six or ten in a group had 'gone West.' And while I love all the ones left—the D. A. V., the legion, the war mothers, and every one—it is the boys who passed over that I love best.

"And when I sing 'Taps,' it is not the audience I see. It is the host of those boys in olive drab, the boys who died, whom I see marching past my eyes in mighty serried ranks. It is to them I sing it, for my heart is with them."

Madame Schuniann-Heink is, before all, a lovable human being. She is so vivid, so motherly—no wonder she has been adopted as official "mother" by D. A. V., by Sigma Chi, and other organizations.

Seat Sale Opened.

The great contralto—greatest in opera or concert through the entire fifty years of her professional career,—arrived in Atlanta early Saturday afternoon. She was met at the terminal station by a host of legionnaires, D. A. V., war mothers, Sigma Chis and a military guard of honor from Fort McPherson. She smiled her way past the barrage of newspaper photographers, reporters, hand shakers and kindly friends.

She is resting in her apartment until Wednesday, when she sings at the auditorium for the benefit of the local symphony association, which hopes to wipe out a deficit for the current season thereby.

Appearances at the box office in Phillips and Crew Piano company, 181 Peachtree, where the seat sale opened Saturday, look favorable for eliminating said deficit. The rush for seats is fast and constant. They will remain on sale until the concert hour, or as long as there are any left. They are priced exceptionally low, ranging from 50 cents to $2.

And Madame Schumann-Heink will rest—except for a luncheon engagement with the D. A. V. Monday—a visit to the base hospital on Peachtree road, and other concessions for "her boys," which are all beyond her power to refuse, because her heart and love says "I must go."

Wednesday's Program.

Madame Schumann-Heink will be assisted Wednesday by Florence Hardeman, violinist.

The program follows:

Emory University, Ga., February 15.—(Special.)—Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, of Nashville, Tenn., widely-known author and Methodist minister, will deliver the sixth series of Quillian lectures at Emory university during the first week of April, it was announced Saturday by Professor J. G. Stipe, acting dean of the college of liberal arts.

The Quillian lectureship was founded in 1897 by Rev. W. F. Quillian, of the North Georgia conference, and his nephew, Marvin C. Quillian, for the purpose of bringing distinguished theological scholars before the Emory student body. Five series of lectures have been delivered to date.

Dr. Rowe, whose series at Emory will consist of six discourses, is book editor of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review.

SNOW IS REPORTED IN MIDDLE WEST

Kansas City, Mo., February 12.—(AP)—Warning of a cold wave in Montana and snow in the middle west tonight and tomorrow was issued today by weather bureaus.

Utahans awakened today to find a two-inch blanket of snow on the ground and predictions that the snowfall would continue tonight and tomorrow.

Originating in southeastern California and Arizona, the storm swept eastward and northeastward this morning and it was snowing at Winnemucca, Nev., and in New Mexico, where a fall of from six to eight inches was recorded. It was snowing also in the region of Grand Junction, Col.

Attorneys Press Suit as Ames' 'Fiance' Recovers

Chicago, February 12.—(United News)—While her attorneys were pressing her $200,000 heart balm suit against Robert Ames, Miss Helen Lambert, proprietor of a New York Night club, was recovering today from a nervous breakdown.

Miss Lambert, who said she came here to wed Ames, collapsed when she learned of his marriage to Miss Murial Oakes, New York society girl. Rumors that she had taken poison were denied by her attorneys today.

Following filing of the alienation of affections suit against her new husband, Mrs. Ames also suffered a nervous breakdown, but her condition is said not to be serious.

Ames, an actor, is playing a leading role in "The Ragged Edge" here. He indicated tonight that he would fight Miss Lambert's suit.

AFRICAN ROMANCE ENDS IN WEDDING HELD IN ONTARIO

Lindsay, Ont., February 12.—(AP)—A courtship which began in the heart of Africa two years ago resulted in the marriage today of Aleen Hughes, youngest daughter of the late General Sir Sam Hughes, and James Freeman Clarke, of Boston, Mass.

The couple will pass their honeymoon in the wilds of French Indo-China.

The two were members of a big game hunting party which included also Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Creighton, of Boston, and it was during the expedition that they became engaged.

Today's wedding was said to be the most notable in the history of Lindsay, with which town Sir Sam Hughes, Canada's "war minister" during the early part of the world war, had long been identified.

Dean Johnston Opens Students' Conference Being Held at Athens

Athens, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Dean T. H. Johnston, rector of St. Philip's cathedral, Atlanta, gave the opening speech at the three-day Georgia Student Volunteers' conference which convened at Athens Friday evening. The meeting is being held in the auditorium at the State Normal college. Several hundred students, representing every college in the state, are present at this meeting.

The conference is the annual assemblage of students who have definitely pledged themselves to lifetime service in the foreign mission field and students who are especially interested in this field. They will consider some of the national and international questions existing today.

Dr. Y. H. Shahbas, Persia; D. L. Chaves, Brazil, and E. J. Anker, India, will speak on the attitudes of these nations toward the missionary movement. Dr. W. F. Quillian, president of Wesleyan college, and John Knox, of Emory university, are among the speakers.

The theme of the conference is "Missions as a Joint Responsibility."

The executive committee is composed of Miss Verna Scarborough, G. S. C. W., president; Miss Mary Heath, Agnes Scott, vice president; Miss Grace Taylor, G. S. C. W., secretary; Miss Elizabeth Dent, Wesleyan, treasurer.

The conference adjourns Sunday evening after the consecration service at 7:30 o'clock.

We rather like the candor of the reviewer who remarked that "lovers of fiction will look forward eagerly to the publication of Miss ——'s last book."

Dresses are now being made from banana skins. They should be easy to slip on.

Lowry Bank Lends State $2,000,000 for Teachers' Salaries as They Are Due

U. S. FLIERS DENY BOMBING CHARGES

Managua, Nicaragua, February 12.—(AP)—Lee Mason and William Brooks, United States citizens, who have been employed by the conservative government as aviators, today denied charges by the liberals that their bombing of Chinandaga during the recent battle there had cause the deaths of women and children.

Brooks declared that after his plane had been hit by bullets during two scouting flights, he carried "three small explosive packages—bombs by courtesy." He said that he dropped one on an open field near Filadelfia, causing the liberals to retreat into Chinandaga; the second near Calvary church where the liberals then had their headquarters, causing the evacuation of the church, and the third in an open street nearby, causing dust and noise but apparently injuring no one.

"My main intention was to create a moral effect and to break down morale simultaneously when the conservative troops attacked," Brooks said.

Mason said that he had directed machine gun fire from his plane solely against fighting liberals and that he did not believe his fire had been effective.

CHARGES U. S. AVIATORS KILLED WOMEN, CHILDREN.

Mexico City, February 12.—(AP)—Charges that American aviators, employed by President Diaz of the conservative government in Nicaragua, killed many non-combatants, were made in a statement to the press by Pedro Zepeda, liberal representative in Mexico City.

Zepeda added that the bombardment had destroyed ten blocks in the heart of the town. He declared that he had telegrams from Costa Rica, Guatemala and San Salvador abundantly sustaining his charges. He also asserted that all Central America was indignant because "Diaz is forcing old men and young boys, some only 11 years old, to fight in his army."

CHURCHES ASK PRAYERS FOR PEACE OF WORLD

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—Because of the "many grave problems threatening to disturb the peace of the world," the administrative committee of the federal council of churches has issued a "call to prayer on world issues."

In a statement to church leaders and the religious press today, the council suggested that during the balance of this month and in March each minister draw attention to the "spiritual issues involved in the American relations with China, Mexico, Nicaragua and Europe."

The prayer is not intended to interfere with the normal church services.

Four Notes Signed By Governor Saturday For Loan at Interest Rate of 3.94 Per Cent.

Through a loan of $2,600,000 made by the Atlanta and Lowry National bank Saturday to the state of Georgia the school teachers of the state this year will receive their salaries promptly and in full, without having to accept warrants to be discounted by various banks. The loan will bear the low rate of interest of 3.94 per cent per year.

Four notes were signed Saturday by Governor Walker, each for $650,000, dated in February, March, April and May, and all falling due on December 31, 1927, after state and county taxes are due.

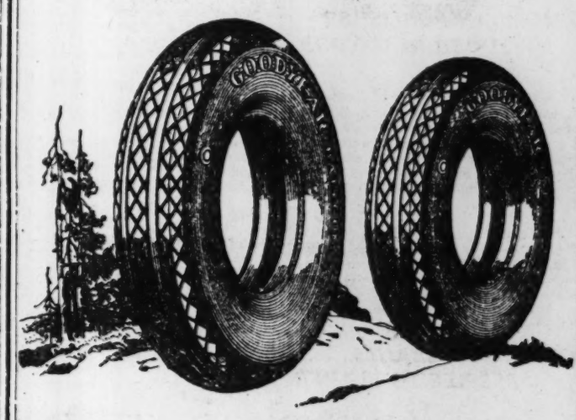

Bids were advertised for prior to negotiating the loan. The bid of the Atlanta and Lowry was the lowest received.

The school department will profit to a considerable extent by the new system. Under the old plan, warrants were issued to the teachers in payment of their salaries and these were discounted last year at the rate of 3.99 per cent, both principal and interest being taken from the school funds. Under the new plan, the interest on the notes will be taken from the general fund in the state treasury and not charged against the schools which will, therefore, receive the full appropriation.

At the last session of the general assembly an amendment to the constitution took effect authorizing the governor to anticipate tax collections by borrowing not more than $3,500,000 for the purpose of paying teachers' salaries. Governor Walker negotiated the loan under this authority.

"I am very glad that the Atlanta and Lowry National bank was able to make this loan to the state of Georgia as it is generally recognized that this is a better and more businesslike system of paying the school teachers than by the former system of warrants to be discounted by them," said Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the board of directors of the bank.

"We regard the notes of the state of Georgia as good as any notes in the United States, and we are especially glad to be able to give the state the benefit of the extremely low interest rate."

Goodyear's
TIRES

The new tire shown above is the famous Goodyear All-Weather Tread, scientifically redesigned for balloon tire use.

The first advantages of this new tread are traction and resistance to skidding.

The sharp-edged, diamond-shaped blocks are placed in a semi-flat design so that they not only grip the road, but they retain their usefulness longer than any non-skid tread ever before tried.

The second advantage is long, slow, even tread wear.

And with these virtues of traction, non-skid and long wear, this new tread is perfectly quiet and does not produce the vibration of many non-skid designs.

Outstandingly the greatest tire Goodyear ever made

Coming from a company the size and character of Goodyear, the statement which heads this advertisement is doubly significant.

It is issued only after testing its complete truth and weighing its full meaning in terms of the highest public interest.

This is the greatest tire Goodyear has ever made!

By the resources and skill devoted to its manufacture, by the experience, research and authority represented in its advanced design, we believe we may properly say also it is the greatest tire the world has so far seen.

This is the new Goodyear balloon tire with the new-type All-Weather Tread!

The first big advantage of this great tire is traction. Safe, surefooted, skidless, the sharp-edged diamond-shaped blocks in the tread's center seize, grip and hang-on.

The second big advantage is long slow even tread wear, as opposed to the "cupping" and "pot holes" until now characteristic of wear in balloons.

The third big advantage is freedom from structural failure and similar troubles, such as casing rupture and shoulder breaks.

These major benefits proceed from the new-type semi-flat tread with its heavily ribbed All-Weather pattern, and from the amazingly durable and elastic SUPERTWIST cords of which the casing is made.

Not only is the tread on this new tire the survivor from eighty separate and individual designs tested under harshest service, but the tire as a whole is heir to all the lessons learned in operating the Goodyear tire-testing fleet last year a total of 5,400,000 tire-miles.

In every particular, therefore, this new-type All-Weather Tread Goodyear is the true exemplar of the most progressive tire company in the world:

—the company which has never been halted in its onward sweep to leadership and which in recent years has steadily increased its pace —which has made and placed into service nearly 100,000,000 tires, millions more than any other maker —which alone uses nearly one-seventh of all the crude rubber produced annually on the earth, almost 50% more than any other manufacturer —which every year for the last ten years has made and sold more tires than any other company in the world —which since the post-war deflation period has stepped up the productivity of its man-power something more than 100%

—which focuses on development, chemical research and service work the largest engineering body of its kind —which operates its own cotton plantation, textile mills, rubber plantation, coal mines, factories and branches, to the end of delivering the tire-user the greatest possible value for his dollar.

These facts and others like them explain why it is supremely meaningful to say the new All-Weather Tread Goodyear Balloon is the greatest tire Goodyear has ever made.

It is outstandingly the newest, tested reason why more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind!

CENTRAL RAIL HEAD SPEAKS AT ATHENS

Athens, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—John J. Pelley, president of the Central of Georgia Railway company, in delivering the Georgia day address before the students of the University of Georgia and others who heard him, Saturday stated that the greatest needs of the state were educated minds and trained hands. "The university," and he had in mind the university as a system, "can give to Georgia that which it most needs, the educated mind and the trained hand.

"The university's sons and daughters can, with mind and hand, never forgetting the heart, achieve modern miracles with the material at hand if animated by the flames of service that will burn away the mistakes of the past and light the pathway for future years," he said.

Pelley spoke in the chapel at 12:30 o'clock and was heard by a large crowd of students and citizens. He said that it was a great temptation, on such an occasion, to talk about "the good old times." The speaker said he had great faith in the "good new times" and to this theme would address most of his remarks. "I think you young men and women are most fortunate to be living in the golden age of the history of the world. It seems to me that there has never been a period so full of interest and activity, so charged with opportunity for the ambitious, so fraught with promise for the future as the year 1927," he said.

He spoke of the voyage of General Oglethorpe 194 years ago, his aims and ideals, and then called attention to the great changes that have been wrought in our history since then.

He said that Georgia has one county, Wilkinson, that has sufficient kaolin deposits to serve the needs of the entire country for 600 years and that these deposits, if developed, are worth enough to pay all the expenses of the world war. He said that until the last few years no steps were taken in the state to educate the people how to develop such resources but that the ceramics department of Georgia Tech was now doing fine work along this line.

He touched on the agricultural possibilities of the state and added that the state should change its stinting policy toward her educational institutions but should respond "with a liberality that will pay rich dividends in results and in satisfaction."

Lita Opens Fight To Seize Home Left 'For Good'

Los Angeles, February 12.—(AP)—Lita Grey Chaplin, who left the Beverly Hills mansion of Charlie Chaplin last November with the declaration that she never would return, today awaited a court order which may permit her to again rule over the 40-room hilltop home.

Mrs. Chaplin, through her attorneys, served notice in superior court yesterday that she will seek to return to the actor's home, which she says is unoccupied and is her rightful place of abode.

Mrs. Chaplin declared that she is without funds to meet a month's rent of $7,000 due February 17, on a home which she recently rented.

She has been unable to collect the $4,000 a month temporary alimony due to income tax liens against the comedian's estate and other legal entanglements.

Checks totaling $400 received by Mrs. Chaplin from Lloyd Wright, her husband's attorney, for the support of the children have not been cashed, she said, as Wright has not acted as the authorized agent of Chaplin. No other funds have been forthcoming from the comedian.

FURNISHING THE HOME ∴ MARIAN MOORE

A Thousand Homemakers Have Asked This Question

My dear Marian Moore:

I am faced with the necessity of getting furniture, draperies, rugs—everything, in fact—for the furnishing of a living room, and I realize that I know almost nothing about what to buy. More than that, my means are quite limited. Won't you please advise me as to the actual articles of furniture which can be bought at a small cost and still be pleasant to live with; also what is the lowest price one must pay for a rug, consistent with fair durability? What about curtains, draperies and lamps in the same scale of expenditure?

I do want this room to be attractive and believe you can help me. Please don't forget to tell me how to harmonize it in colors. The room is 12x20 in size, has windows on the west and south and the walls are cream color.

This letter is typical of many that reach my office, so that in answering it through the columns of this paper I feel that I shall be helping a host of other women who are faced with the same problem.

Every living room requires certain essentials to comfort and livableness: A fairly large table, four chairs, a couch, at least one small table, a bookcase (if one owns many books), two lamps, a rug, curtains and draperies, a mirror, pictures, a desk.

The larger table may be a davenport model, but the gateleg table is just as decorative and easier to place in small interiors; it has been called the "table of a hundred uses." It is moreover, very economical and harmonizes with most English and American furniture designs.

Of the four chairs, one may be a Windsor armchair, and one a Windsor side chair; the other two should be a large Coxwell for a man (or a smaller model for a woman), and a semi-upholstered chair, like the one shown at the top of the picture. Coxwells cost from $45 up, but about $60 should be paid for a really substantial articles.

The couch should be a davenport or a bed davenport, if at least $150 may be spared for this tiem. A day bed costing about $60 is a good substitute; but cheaper models, though quite attractive looking, often have poor springs. It may be selected with denim, muslin, cretonne or repp upholstery; or a slip cover may be made to match the draperies. A box couch costs less than any other kind.

The most practical of all small tables is the end table with book trough or magazine shelf below. Books may also be placed on the larger table between book ends; but if you own enough books a bookcase will prove a most decorative addition.

There should be at least one table lamp and one floor lamp. Parchmentized paper shades with simple line decoration or bandings cost much less than silk. There are good looking table lamps, all complete, available from $3 up; while floor lamps with wrought iron bases can be purchased as low as $2.50.

An Axminster rug represents the best value if a Wilton is beyond one's means. The former cost $62.50 and up for a 9x12 size.

Plain scrim or marquisette curtains are tasteful and inexpensive, while cretonne draperies combine economy with color and pattern value.

Blue would be a good dominant color in the room described in the reader's letter, and should dominate generously in the rug, draperies, upholstery, pictures, pottery and pillows; the complementary color, yellow, would also appear in draperies, pillows and lampshades; and there should be touches of rose, green and black for interest and variety.

A large mirror in a simple inexpensive frame is extremely decorative. It may be hung above the couch or over the table in place of the picture. Some ornament of adequate size is always needed over the couch. It may be a large picture, or two of medium size, or a row of four; else a hanging shelf.

A desk is almost a necessity; the spinet design fits into the average sized room, costs little, yet belongs to the aristocracy of furniture.

Italian Aviator To Begin Spectacular Race With Time

:: WILL FLY TWICE ACROSS ATLANTIC ::

BY THOMAS B. MORGAN.

Rome, February 12. — (United News.)—Italy's greatest airman is expected to take off tomorrow on a 25,000-mile flight which would carry him twice across the Atlantic ocean, and through South America, the United States and Canada, in the most spectacular race against time in the history of man's conquest of the air.

In compliance with Premier Mussolini's dictum that "Italians must travel rapidly," Colonel Marquis Francesco de Pinedo was at Cagliari, Sardinia, today with a powerful Savoia hydroplane, ready for the great test. De Pinedo is no novice in aeronautics. It was he who flew from Rome to Melbourne, Australia, and thence to Tokio and back to Rome.

De Pinedo's first stop will be at Rabat, West Africa, and thence de Pinedo will proceed to Villa Cisnero and to Bolez in Portuguese Guinea.

At Bolez de Pinedo plans to leave land and the old world behind to point his course toward Pernambuco, Brazil, on the yonder side of the south Atlantic. From Pernambuco, de Pinedo would fly to Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Asuncion, which is in Paraguay, up the course of rivers to Manaos, Brazil, to Barajo, Georgetown, which is in British Guinea; to Caracas, in Venezuela; to Port au Prince, Haiti, Havana and on to New Orleans, La.

Skirting the Gulf of Mexico, de Pinedo will fly to Galveston, Texas, and on to El Paso and San Francisco, Victoria, British Columbia, will see Pinedo next, and then he will go to Winnipeg, Chicago, Quebec and New York.

North from New York he will fly to St. John's, Newfoundland, thence to the Azore islands, to Lisbon and back to Italy, where, if he is successful, a hysterical welcome almost without precedent awaits him.

Red Grange Bars Kissing, Petting In New Picture

Santa Rosa, Calif., February 12.—(United News.) — Harold "Red" Grange, iceman, football star, sheepherder and film actor, is going back to Hollywood—but not to be "necked."

The youth from Wheaton, Ill., who burned up the gridiron a few years back, admitted tonight he had signed a contract which calls for his appearance in the film capital a week from Monday to start rehearsing.

"But—there's going to be no kissing and petting," Grange said.

Instead of "One Minute To Go" type of film, Grange starred in when he made his screen debut, he is to play in "One Mile to Go," as an automobile speedway demon.

Grange hasn't changed his mind a bit about the way film actresses kiss. "Their 'necking' is too artificial. They know too much about kissing," Grange said.

Grange has been herding sheep on the Cloverdale ranch, near here, which he owns jointly with C. C. Pyle, who started him on his professional football career.

COAL CONFERENCE TO DEVELOP FIGHT OVER WAGE SCALE

Miami, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—The growing shadow of uncertainty of outcome which lies over the beginning of negotiations here Monday for a new wage scale agreement in the central competitive bituminous coal fields deepened tonight as miners and operators pointed to contrasting instructions or proposals given their wage scale committees.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and head of the delegation of miners, reiterated that his organization has no other course than to stand by instructions given its wage scale committee at the Indianapolis convention last week. These instructions call for a two-year agreement based on no reduction of wages.

On the other hand, operator representatives pointed to the wage proposal adopted at their meeting in Toledo, Ohio, a few days ago. This proposal seeks a continuous wage agreement in competition with the non-union fields of West Virginia and Kentucky.

The present wage scale contract in the central competitive district, formed at Jacksonville in 1924, will expire March 31. It provides for a daily wage of $7.50 for labor and $1.05 for tonnage workers.

In many instances, it is pointed out, union and non-union mines lie in the same districts, the wage scale at the non-union plants varying from $1.50 to $5 per day. The operators claim they are unable to compete with such a difference in wages.

Wind and Snow Sweep Corsica, Killing Twenty

Ajaccio, Corsica, February 12.—Terrific winds accompanied by snow caused widespread destruction on this island today and it was estimated that 20 persons had lost their lives through accident or cold.

Eighteen feet of snow was reported in the interior of the island today in places where the terrain caused windblown drifts to accumulate. Houses and trees were borne down by the weight of the covering mass. A tree smashed into a cabin occupied by 17 Italian workmen, killing 13 of them. The cabin was crushed.

Normal means of communication were interrupted and snow drifts prevented the recovery of bodies. Rescue crews of skiers were formed to penetrate the snowy wilderness.

Ajaccio is principally famous as the birth place of Napoleon. The house in which he was born still stands there. Corsica is an island, 110 by 53 miles, in the Mediterranean, west of Italy. It belongs to France.

SOCIAL HYGIENE SPEAKER AT EMORY FOR TALKS ON SEX

Emory University, Ga., February 12.—(Special).—Dr. F. N. Seerly, representing the American Social Hygiene association of New York, arrived at Emory University Saturday morning to give a series of lectures on sex problems and relations. He spoke in the Theological chapel Saturday night, using as his topic, "Sex and Manhood." Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock he will speak at a mass meeting in the new Emory chapel on "Sex and Womanhood". He will also conduct the vesper services at Wesley Memorial hospital for the nurses and Emory men at 7:30 Sunday evening. His lecture Monday evening in the Theology chapel will conclude his series of sex talks.

The Emory Young Men's Christian association was instrumental in bringing Dr. Seerly to Emory.

INSULL CONTEMPT TRIAL FORECAST

Washington, February 12.—Three prominent Chicagoans and a Philadelphia court clerk were cited for contempt today by the Reed senatorial elections investigating committee.

Those named were witnesses who refused to testify when called before the committee during investigations of the Illinois and Pennsylvania primaries. They were:

Samuel Insull, public utilities magnate; Robert E. Crowe, Chicago state's attorney; Daniel T. Schuyler, Insull attorney, and Thomas W. Cunningham, Philadelphia court clerk.

At the conclusion of the report was a recommendation that the senate "take such action as it may deem proper."

A special meeting of the Reed committee was called for Sunday to reach an agreement on presentation of recommendations for definite contempt proceedings on Monday.

Insull's alleged contempt was noted in the report as follows:

"The witness, Insull, refused to testify whether he gave Robert E. Crowe a sum of money—just as the witness, Crowe, refused to testify whether the $15,000 alleged by him to have been expended in behalf of the Crowe-Barrett candidate, Captain Joseph P. Savage, had been contributed to him by Samuel Insull. The witness, Insull, also declined to answer questions put to him as to whether he had given $10,000 to Roy O. West, of the Deneen group which was supporting the candidacy of Senator McKinley.

"Your committee considered it to be its plain duty to ascertain the effect of the senatorial candidates of every dollar spent by or contributed to any political group advocating a ticket or slate on which appeared the name of one of the senatorial candidates."

Schuyler, the report said, declined to testify regarding contributions made by him, other than the money he handled for Insull directly affecting the senatorial race.

Concerning Cunningham, the report stated: "Every opportunity was given the witness, Cunningham, to testify, and he steadfastly and obdurately refused to give your committee any information."

Louisville, February 12.—(AP)—The republican party will select its nominees for state office at a state-wide primary Saturday, August 6, and ten days later meet in convention in Lexington to adopt a platform upon which the successful candidates will stand in the general election Tuesday, November 8.

These decisions were reached at a meeting of the republican state central committee at headquarters here this afternoon. The majorities for the primary and platform convention were large.

Auburn Beats Tech, 42 to 24---A. A. C. Downs Georgia

Tigers Square Count With Yellow Jackets; Tiny Bags 18 Points

BY SAM ADAMS.

Auburn, Ala., February 12.—Georgia Tech ran into a growling Auburn Tiger while on its way home Saturday night, and the Auburnites stopped the Yellow Jackets completely, winning by a score of 42 to 24, in a fast and furiously fought basketball game.

Auburn succeeded in stopping Tech by stopping everyone of the Jackets except their key man, Mr. W. W. Hearn, known to the trade as Tiny, center on the golden shirted quintet. The Tigers are the second conference cagers to stop the muchly victorious Tech team, and with this accomplished, had little trouble in running up a score that quickly assumed large proportions.

The Tigers completed their stoppage work for the night by keeping Frank Player, greatly improved Jacket forward, successfully under cover. With this done, Mundorff's men could offer little, if anything, in the way of an offensive, and had to resort largely to a defensive style of play.

George Comes to Bat.

It was during the defensive part of play that Nick George, flashy Tech guard, did his good work. He aided materially in keeping large numbers of Tiger shots from being followed up by taking them off the backboard, and broke up several Auburn parries at the visitors' goal. The playing of George was outstanding on the Jackets' defensive side.

Auburn was laying for Mr. Hearn, and had him groggy at times, but he kept his head cleared enough to shoot 18 of the visiting team's total of 24. Hearn used his height to a very good advantage, and without him Tech would have been at a distinct loss.

Tech jumped into the lead at the very start, as the Jackets seem to have a way of doing, but was quickly overtaken by the Tiger. After that, the Jackets were never able to catch up, and the gulf between the two quints kept widening.

The game was rough, getting rougher at times, and a total of 25 fouls were called during the routine of play. A large number of Auburn's fouls were caused by the efforts of Tiger players to keep Hearn from making himself too useful. It is very hard to successfully guard the big boy without fouling him, and the Auburn players learned this tonight.

Tech contributed its share to swell the total of fouls, and play was fast throughout.

Akin, Tiger forward, played a fine game at his position, shooting a total of 13 points, running second to Hearn in number of points scored.

James Boys Star.

F. James and E. James put up a good exhibition of guarding, and that they succeeded is shown by the fact that neither of the Tech forwards shot a single point.

Tech was held to a total of seven field goals, and made good 10 shots from philanthropists' pathway. Auburn secured twice as many field goals, and 14 more of their points came from goodwill chunks.

Lineup and Summary.

TECH (24)	Pos.	AUBURN (42)

THREE TEAMS IN EPWORTH ARE UNBEATEN

As the Epworth season nears the tournament the remaining games are being closely contested and only three teams out of the 26 continue to carry an unblemished record. Park Street, leaders of the boys' B league; St. Mark's, leaders of the girls' A league, and Capitol View, leaders of the girls' B league, are the only teams that have weathered the storm and still cling to their 1,000 per cent record.

Of the 11 games that are to be played next week, four are outstanding and promise a deal of excitement in Epworth circles. Monday the St. Mark's-Emory girls' game will be the feature attraction. Emory has lost only one game and that to St. Mark's in the first round. If Emory is successful in the game Monday night the result will be a tie for the championship of the A league.

Almost the same thing will be true Thursday when Park Street meets the Epworth boys. Epworth has lost only one game this season. Park Street has 1,000 per cent and to lose Thursday would result in a tie for the championship of the boys' B league.

Friday night another championship is at stake when the girls from Grace meet the Capitol View girls. Grace has lost only one game and that a forfeit to Capitol View. For Grace to win would tie Grace and Capitol View for the championship of the girls' B league. Another game Friday that is expected to be close is between Wesley Memorial and Druid Hills boys. Druid Hills held the College Park team to a margin of one point above their own score last week.

THE SCHEDULE.

Monday.

St. John vs. Druid Hills (girls), 6:30.
Oakland City vs. Grant Park (boys), 6:50.
Emory vs. St. Mark's (girls), 7:50.
Calvary vs. Kirkwood (boys), 8:10.

Thursday.

St. Paul's vs. Kirkwood (girls), 6:30.
St. John's vs. St. Paul's (boys), 6:50.
Park Street vs. Epworth (boys), 7:50.
Wesley Memorial vs. Druid Hills (boys), 8:10.

Friday.

Capitol View vs. Grace (girls), 6:30.
Calvary vs. Grant Park (girls), 6:50.
College Park vs. Trinity (boys), 7:50.

G. M. A. DEFENDS COTTONSTATES BASKET TITLE

Auburn, Ala., February 12.—(AP)—Sixteen of the leading high schools of Alabama, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee were included in the entry list for the sixth annual Cotton States basketball tournament, which was announced by Coach Wilbur Hutsell here tonight.

The tournament will get under way here Thursday of next week. The teams included in the list compiled by the committee were:

Vienna High, Vienna, Ga.; Georgia Military academy, Atlanta; Castle Heights, Lebanon, Tenn.; Darlington Preparatory, Rome, Ga.; Tallapossa High, Dadeville, Ala.; Springville High, Springville, Ala.; DeKalb County High, Fort Payne, Ala.; Dalton High, Dalton, Ga.; Malone High, Malone, Fla.; Montezuma High, Montezuma, Ga.; Montgomery Bell, Nashville, Tenn.; Lanett High, Lanett, Ala.; Columbia academy, Columbia, Tenn.; Red Level High, Red Level, Ala.; Anniston High, Anniston, Ala., and Millport High, Millport, Ala.

The meet, as in previous years will be staged under the auspices of the Auburn Athletic association, with Coach Hutsell in charge.

20 WOMEN ENTER MONKEY TOURNAMENT

Indications that a field of about 20 women golfers will be entered in the two-team monkey tournament to be held at the Ansley Park Golf club Monday morning at 9 o'clock by the members of the Atlanta Women's Golf association were made Saturday.

Mrs. Clarence Bradley will captain one team and Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes the other. The women will attempt to make as much noise on the shots of each member of the opposing side in their efforts to disconcert the player as is possible. Thus is derived the tile for a competitive golf match of this sort.

The arrangement is simple. The members of each team draw the name of a club from a hat in which has been placed a number of slips with the title of the entire repertoire of clubs written separately. They use the clubs in rotation, the driver coming first, brassie second and on through.

Seven Basket Games On Menu This Week

BY TOM THOMPSON.

Atlanta's major basketeers will participate in seven games this week, one of which will be staged on a foreign court when Tech winds up its schedule with the Georgia Bulldogs in Athens Saturday night. The remainder will be played in Atlanta, several of them coming on the same nights.

Oglethorpe meets J. P. C. at J. P. C. Monday night.

Oglethorpe entertains the Florida Gators at the Petrel institution Tuesday night.

Atlanta Athletic club and J. P. C. come to grips at J. P. C. Wednesday night.

Oglethorpe and Tech wade into each other on the same night at the Atlanta Athletic club.

Petrels Meet A. A. C.

Oglethorpe will tackle the A. A. C. quint on the latter's court Saturday night and at the same time on South Pryor street the J. P. C. will be host to Macon. Tech journeys to Athens for its third Georgia tilt on the same night.

Oglethorpe, playing four nights out of the encroaching six, finds itself face to face with its heaviest week of the season. And of all its foes, only one is not an Atlanta aggregation.

The Tech and A. A. C. game will decide the city championship. Both teams have vanquished all local opposition except each other—having split their two meetings with a win each—and the third game will name the city's titleholder among the cagemen.

Oglethorpe, having jumped from defeat to defeat with exemplary consistency, will go about the business of righting its poor season in the eyes of local fans. The Petrels will come nearer taking Florida and J. P. C. into camp than its other two foes, which, of course, is perfectly obvious.

J. P. C. finished a road trip Thursday night which gave it two wins and two defeats. The J.'s have found the going rather tough this year, more especially among the local opposition, and its schedule, calling for two local games this week, will also provide a loophole for vengeance.

TORNADO BEGINS TO BLOW

Maybe you have often wondered where the Golden Tornado comes from. Well, here it is. In the springtime it is a gentle zephyr, wafting and warping about in flimsy fashion, but that is where the Golden Tornado comes from, for in the springtime they just get started for the work that will follow in the fall.

Here is the 1927 Golden Tornado going through its baby paces on Grant field—or rather a part of it. At the right are Coach W. Aeolus Alexander, Hank Bjorkman and Don Miller, part of Tech's coaching staff.

PRO TENNIS BODY PLANS ROUNDING OUT

New Haven, Conn., February 12.—(AP)—Plans for a professional tennis association are fast coming to a head, says Vincent Richards, tennis star, who was deprived of No. 1 ranking by the United States Lawn Tennis association because he joined C. C. Pyle's professional tennis troup last fall.

Admitting that he is behind the movement to organize the professional net game, Richards today said he would call a meeting for that purpose, probably within the next month. No more definite information could be obtained.

JUNIOR HIGHS TO PLAY TWO TILTS MONDAY

The lack of playing courts, as well as adequate practice courts, is causing the Junior High school basketball officials and coaches a lot of trouble this season. It is the biggest proposition that they have to contend with, and they are having to spend a great deal of their time with this phase of the game.

Twice each week they have to scurry around and try to beg a court on which they may play their games. And the courts that they are able to get are most of the time not what they should be.

Next week finds the Juniors in their second round of ball. All of the boys' teams are going very well, but some of the girls' teams have not been fully organized and they will not be able to play for several days.

Monday afternoon the boys of Bass and Brown Junior High schools will meet in an effort to regain the ground that they lost last week in their first games. Both teams lost hard battles, and when they meet Monday the fur will fly. No one could dope out the result, as the teams are evenly matched. The Joe Brown team may have a little better passing team, but it hasn't the defense that the Bass outfit boasts.

The girls of these schools may meet, but it is not certain, as the girls of Bass have not had enough practice to enter a game.

O'Keefe will carry its boys and girls out to Decatur for a game with the junior teams of that city. O'Keefe boys met and defeated the boys of the Joe Brown school last week.

Decatur has a strong girls' combination that has been winning very consistently in all of its pre-season games.

Hoke Smith has a day of rest on Monday, as it drew a bye in the schedule for this date. The squads no doubt will witness one of the other junior games.

SCHEDULE FOR MONDAY.

O'Keefe vs. Decatur at Decatur at 3 o'clock.

Bass vs. Brown at Brown at 3 o'clock.

Another Test For Strib.

Burt Miller, acting for his brother Walk, who is at the present time manager of W. L. (Young) Stribling, announces that Walk will call the bluff of Joe Woodman, manager of Homer Smith. Said bluff being in the form of a statement in which Woodman declares that a battle between Strib and this same Smith would result in the complete oblivion of W. L.

Burt declares that Stribling will be matched with Smith in Atlanta on February 22 for the edification of Atlanta fans. Stribling has made one bid for a place in the heavyweight elimination tournament in his fight with Eddie Huffman in New York early this month and there was much comment of a more or less controversial nature on that fight. The general consensus, however, was that Stribling should have bumped off the ex-sailor in a few rounds, which he did not do.

This Smith-Stribling fight may be of some importance to the latter in his struggle for recognition in the big city but it is certain that he must STOP SMITH or do what Joe Woodman says he should do—stay in the "sticks."

Sailor Eddie Huffman is barely within the second-rater limits but Homer Smith is no better if as good, which means that it is up to Stribling. A knockout will satisfy a few and will placate many more but a mere decision or draw would be ruinous to the hopes of W. L. for some time to come.

* * * * *

The Sanguine Mr. Spiller.

There may be some pessimists who believe that the large crop of winter scandals will hurt baseball attendance during the coming season but Rell Jackson Spiller, owner of the Atlanta Crackers, is not one of these. As a matter of fact Rell J. declares that he will sell more ducats and consequently more peanuts and soda pop this season than ever before and he gives as his reason the fact that the scandal publicity has been more beneficial than detrimental to the game.

It is also Mr. Spiller's opinion that the Cracker team will be a one-two-three outfit this season, a fact which seems to be borne out by the fact that the Messrs. Spiller and Niehoff are still working on the personnel of a first class team.

Insofar as the scandal proposition is concerned we are inclined to believe that Mr. Spiller is right. The fact that these accused players are being offered big salaries to play this year is indication that the big boys in the majors believe in their drawing power.

The power of publicity is well demonstrated in the salary which Tyrus Cobb is believed to be drawing from the Philadelphia Athletics for the season of 1927. Cobb is a mighty valuable ball player to any club and with the objective in mind of startling the world with one more big season he may be of even greater value but it is unquestionable that he would not have received as much money for his new contract if he had not been the recipient of so much publicity. The fact that the publicity was supposedly derogative to the character of this great diamond star has reacted to his infinite good by crystallizing the feeling of his friends.

POWER CO. FIVE MEETS ORANGE CAGERS NEXT

The Georgia Railway and Power company will be the one to take a crack at the Gulf Refining company quint when the City league holds its regular round of play. At present the Orangemen are leading the second round of the league with three wins and no defeats. A victory by the Power quint would put a little more pep and ginger in the race.

Another good game on Wednesday's schedule is the one to be played by Atlanta Lowry and Southern Bell. Dope gives the Bell boys a slight edge, but the bankers are determined to overcome their foes, and will stage a real scrap in order to do so.

The Schedule.

7:15—Atlanta Lowry vs. Southern Bell.
7:45—Atlanta Steel vs. Terra Cotta.
8:40—Knights of Columbus vs. One Hundred and Twenty-second infantry.
9:00—Gulf Refining Co. vs. Power Co.

Peps Meet Tough Foe.

The strong Pep class team will meet its toughest foe of the present season Tuesday night when they tie up with the powerful Western Heights Baptist quint in the regular round of play of the Dixie loop of the Y Church association. Third Baptist has been helped greatly by the addition of two new men and is counting on giving the Gideons a tough fight.

A meeting of the Y Church association will be held on Wednesday night and all teams not having a representative present will be fined.

The Schedule.

6:30—W. E. P. vs. Anchors.
6:50—Gideons vs. Third Baptists.
7:50—Peps vs. Western Heights.
8:10—Boethians vs. College Park.

Keen Competition.

With ten teams now playing in the Sewanee loop of the Y Church association, competition is becoming keen. Some of the teams have not been reporting on time and, hereafter, all teams not present at the sounding of the referee's whistle will lose by default.

The best game on Thursday night's card is the F. E. F.-All Saints. Both teams were in the Sewanee loop in the last half, and will battle each other from start to finish for a victory.

The Schedule.

6:00—Associated Reformed vs. Pattillo Memorial.
6:20—Pep Freshmen vs. Anchor Feds.
7:20—Epworth Workers vs. Confederate Avenue.
7:40—F. E. F. vs. All Saints.
8:40—Wesley Memorial vs. First Methodist.

Record Smashed.

Lake Placid, N. Y., February 12.—(AP)—Ross Robinson, of Toronto, broke the world's record for the five-mile skate at the international speed championships here this afternoon, covering the distance in 14 minutes, 30 3-5 seconds. The old mark was 15 minutes, 11 1-5 seconds.

O'Neil Farrell, of Chicago, was second and Eddie Murphy also of Chicago, finished third.

Air-Tight Guarding By Bean Five Halts Bulldog Forwards

BY TOM THOMPSON.

Held in check by superlative guarding the Bulldog basketeers of Georgia went down before the Atlanta Athletic club at the club Saturday night, 37-25. The forward combination of the club cagers had apparently taken a new lease on life, but the momentous deal was not put through until the first half of the affray had wended well toward being mostly played.

The affair began slowly. Georgia's forward, Keen, dropped in the first counter for two points. Florence followed a minute later with free shot.

The play rocked along. None of the A. C. forwards could get accurate distance or aim. It seemed that an epidemic of inaccuracy had smitten the Bean headquarters. Then Stephens worked into the hole for a crib shot and two points. Bass followed a minute later with a long looper from midfloor but not until Georgia had moved up another two points on a floor shot by Keen.

Club Takes Lead.

Bennett got a long one to put the clubmen one point in the lead—six to five. Georgia led again when Drew dropped a floor shot. The As took the lead, again and for all, when Bennett got another floor goal. He made another point shortly after with a free chunk. Florence dropped a charity chunk. Brewer got a field goal. Turner duplicated for his only score of the half.

Bennett and Stephens each sank a floor shot. Florence took a floor goal. Brewer and Bennett tallied once each again and the As rested with 19 points. Morris, subbing for Drew, dropped a charity chunk and Harris, with 30 seconds left in the half, took his place. Harris immediately tossed in a field goal, and the half ended, 19-15 A. A. C.

The locals led off in the second half with a bit more accuracy and considerable more vigor and shortly put the game on ice. Toward the end Joe Bean rushed in a complete new lineup. Brewer made three field goals, Cy Bell, taking Bennett's place at center countered with the same number, Bennett got one floor goal and Stephens one and two effective charity chunks for the clubs scoring in this round.

Georgia's scoring in the second stanza comprised a field goal by Harris, two by Keen, one by Turner and two foul goals by Florence.

Forbes, Turner Star.

The guarding of Forbes and Turner for Georgia was one of the outstanding features of the game. However, as the contest drew to a termination, the same malady of inaccuracy seemed to grip the Bulldogs, for a plethora of tries rained on the backboard and only a disparaging few of them were effective.

Rufus Bass and Latimer played their usual good game at guard. It was extremely good. Bennett took the scoring honors with 11 points, while Stephens improved slightly on his last two exhibitions, gathering a total of eight points. Stephens seems to make fewer tries than he formerly did, and of these the percentage of effective ones is sadly depleted. Bennett's performance was considerably better than his last two.

The locals made 17 field goals during the conflict; Georgia made 10. Three of six free charity chunks were effective for the A's; five out of eight counted for Georgia points.

Lineup and Summary.

A. A. C. (37)	Pos.	GEORGIA (25)
Brewer (10)	rf	Keen (8)
Stephens (8)	lf	Florence (6)

MERCER BEARS BEGIN EARLY BALL PRACTICE

BY GEORGE S. CLARK, JR.

Macon, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Coach Mosley, Mercer baseball mentor, gathered together some 20 Bear baseball aspirants here last Monday afternoon in the first official practice of the 1927 season.

In the first workout the boys were put through very light practices, but since Monday workouts of an intensive nature have been undergone. Tuesday Coach Mosley gave over the reins to Captain-elect Jim Tom Bush. He will guide the destinies of the squad until Mosley returns to the [illegible] time next week.

With seven of last year's regulars lost [illegible] Mosley will experience a rather hard time developing a winning aggregation. Of the seven lost, four were pitchers, two infielders, and one outfielder. The moundsmen lost are Joiner, Carson, Parkerson and Simms. In the infield Mercer loses Dunn, at first, and Pinkston, at second, while Leasford in the outfield completes the list of losses.

But Coach Mosley is not despondent over Mercer's prospects.

"If I can ever get my pitchers going I think the Bears will have a fairly good team," were his remarks. "I don't think that we will win all of our games, but I do expect the team to win a larger portion of them."

In practices this week the following men have shown up to form: Stapleton, first base; Cannon, second; Butts, short; Bush, third; Parks, catcher, and Smith, Dunn, Salter, Guerry, McCart, in the outfield.

The pitchers have had little chance to exhibit their wares. Those reporting to Captain-elect Bush are: Crow, Stanley, Purcell, Overstreet, Cordell. With the exception of Cordell all were on the freshman team of last year.

The official schedule, consisting of 21 games, was announced today as follows:

March 25-26: Mississippi A. and M. in Macon.
March 31: Michigan State in Macon.
April 5-6: Macon Peaches in Macon.
April 8-9: University of Georgia in Macon.
April 13-14: University of Michigan in Macon.
April 18-19: Notre Dame in Macon.
April 22-23: Oglethorpe in Atlanta.
May 2-3: Clemson in Macon.
May 10-11: Oglethorpe in Macon.

Four games with the University of Florida, two in Thomasville and two in Tallahassee, have been arranged, but the dates have not been set.

BARROW SAYS KING OF SWAT WILL RETURN

New York, February 12.—(United News.)—"Babe Ruth will be back in right field for the Yankees when the season opens," Ed Barrow, business manager of the New York club, predicted today.

Barrow refused to say whether the Yankees would have to meet the Babe's terms or whether the star home run hitter would have to take what the club gives him, but he intimated much when he said that they had always been able to get together in the past.

The Yankees say the seriousness of the Ruth case is being grossly exaggerated.

"I don't believe we could keep the Babe out of the game if we wanted to," Barrow said. "He would be the unhappiest man in the world if he was out of baseball. I know that from the experience I had when he was playing for me with the Boston Red Sox. When he first started to break into the outfield he would almost cry when I took him out for a right-handed hitter."

ALABAMA FIVE MEETS TULANE AND MISS. AGS

BY ARNOLD FINNEFROCK.

University, Ala., February 12.—Alabama's much defeated cagers will campaign on foreign soil this week. They leave Tuscaloosa Sunday night for New Orleans, where they will lock horns with the Tulane Greenies Monday and Tuesday. Friday night they will take on the Mississippi Aggies in Starksville.

The disastrous defeat at the hands of the Georgia Tech quintet did not seriously impair the morale of the men, and they intend to regain their lost laurels—if they ever had any—at the expense of the Green Wave. Mississippi, if a defeat over Auburn is a criterion, has one of the best teams in the conference and is favored to push the Crimsons further down in the standing of conference teams.

Host of Prep Teams In N. E. Ga. Tourney

Athens, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—With 42 teams already having filed their entry in the sixth annual northeast Georgia high school basketball championship tournament, the largest cage meet in the United States will get underway in Athens on the morning of February 23.

These tournaments for the past two years have drawn forty teams, a record for competitive play, and this former record will be broken when more than fifty teams tee off in the play. The entry list closed at midnight Saturday. No entry postmarked later than midnight will be accepted.

At 9:00 o'clock Saturday morning forty-two teams had entered. Those entered at that time were: Covington, Snellville, Carnesville, Maysville, Lawrenceville, Comer, Canon, Social Circle, Ila, Bishop, Dacula, Grayson, Arnoldsville, Jersey, Danielsville, Watkinsville, Washington, Eastanollee, Statham, Hartwell, Winterville, Lexington, Bowersville, Crawford, Colbert, Mansfield, Cornelia, Cumming, Gainesville, Nancy Hart Consolidated (Hart County), Monroe, Bowman, Braselton, Royston, Eatonton, Athens, Centerville, Commerce, Clayton, Jefferson, Bogart and Elberton.

Nine silver loving cups; a thirty-six-inch bronze statuette; individual minature gold basketballs to the members of the championship team; the basketballs used in the tournament play; a large silver loving cup to the player selected as the most valuable to his team and several other minor trophies will be awarded for various accomplishments at the close of the tournament.

The drawings will be held Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Athens "Y". Play will begin on February 23 with more than 21 games scheduled for the first day. All games will be played in Woodruff Hall on the University of Georgia campus and it will be necessary to use all three courts at the same time to thin down the list of entrants.

Watkinsville, Grayson, Greensboro and Athens High school are the winners in the five previous tournaments, the last named school being the only team ever to win two championships.

With each team bringing 10 men and a coach, it means that, counting only the present entries, there will be 420 high school cage stars in action with 42 nervous coaches looking on. As the last day for entering the tournaments in the past has always brought about a score of applications, it means that at the least 55 and probably 60 teams will be on hand to battle for the title.

Joe Stecher To Wrestle Here Thursday Night

Browning Will Meet Champ In Feature Match Of Big Show

Another chapter in Promoter John Contos' efforts to have the world's heavyweight wrestling championship change hands in Atlanta will be written at the city auditorium Thursday night. At that particular time and place Champion Joe Stecher will grapple with Jim Browning, who since his victory over Rough Richard Daviscourt has been regarded as something of a wrestling hero

It will be the third time that the champion has appeared in Atlanta this year, but Promoter Contos declares that it will also be the champion's hardest bout here. Contos seemingly is sold on the idea that Browning can give Stecher trouble and plenty of it. If the wrestling match was to be settled by the question of individual physical power the fans would be inclined to string along with the promoter's view.

However, Stecher's deadly body scissors will figure in this match, just as they have in his past appearances here. But Promoter Contos declares that the scissors holds that threw both Dick Daviscourt and Pete Sauer into a state bordering on a panic will prove no such bother to Browning. Contos gives as his reason the fact that Browning uses scissors holds himself and knows enough about them not to lose his head, when they are applied to his body.

Back Browning.

"Browning uses a head scissors almost exclusively in winning his matches," Contos said. "He will not be worried when Stecher clamps his legs around him for he knows that the body scissors can be broken and he of all wrestlers knows the best way of turning that trick. I have never given the Atlanta wrestling fans a bum steer and right here and now I want to assure them that Jim Browning is as good an opponent for Stecher as can be found in the wrestling world today."

If the Stecher-Browning match for some reason or other should not provide the spectacular thrills that it promises the fans will have two other chances for excitement and their money's worth. Two preliminary matches of equal importance have been billed and with the championship tilt will afford a total of four hours' wrestling, if all of the bouts go the limit.

In one of the introductory scraps Wladek Zbyszko, who has been absent from the Atlanta mat lo these many months, will tackle Carl Vafel, from St. Louis. Vafel, according to all reports, is one of the outstanding wrestlers in the heavyweight ranks and is fully equipped to give the younger Zbyszko a rough evening.

A Powerful Man.

Vafel weighs 218 pounds, is considered one of the most powerful men in the game and is sufficiently skilled to take care of himself, regardless of how rugged and talented his opposition may be.

Atlanta fans remember the younger Zbyszko as a powerful and skilled wrestler. He made quite an impression in his last appearance here and confronted with as tough an opponent as Vafel should put up plenty of good wrestling Thursday night.

In the other preliminary bout two of the younger and more popular mat stars will clash. That means that John Paxos has agreed to meet Paul Jones, and wrestling fans who have seen both of the boys in action, are of the opinion that that bout should push the main event for honors.

Jones has not been defeated in his four appearances at the city auditorium. His most spectacular and pleasing stunt was staged when he held Browning to a draw in what was intended to have been a one-hour match. However, it had to be cut short in order that the main event could get underway on time.

Jones in addition to being powerful and skilled is blessed with exceptional speed. He gets around the ring so fast and cannily that it is extremely hard to apply a hold. Once it is applied the opponent has a tough time making it stick.

Won Six Straight.

Since leaving Atlanta Paxos has won six straight matches, so Promoter Contos reports. In that case it is to be considered that Paxos has developed even more skill than he showed in his past appearances here. In that event he will be able to give Jones a busy hour.

Tickets for the wrestling show, which is the fourth of the new year, will be placed on sale at Chess' place and the Piedmont Hatters Monday. The same prices that have been charged for the other wrestling shows here will prevail, so Promoter Contos says.

MANY TEAMS ENTER MEET AT RICHMOND

Richmond, Va., February 12.—(AP) Track stars from many colleges in the South Atlantic states are expected to take part in the University of Richmond South Atlantic indoor games here Saturday, February 19 and in the third annual indoor invitation games of the University of Virginia in Charlottesville on February 22.

Two new events have been added to the University of Richmond games, in the shot put and two-mile run. Freshmen teams will be allowed to enter the collegiate meet.

The games this year were divided into two divisions, scholastic and collegiate. The scholastic games will be held here tonight, with representatives of 13 high and prep schools from Virginia, Maryland and Washington represented.

At the University of Virginia invitation games, 20 track events and three field events are listed. Four 50-yard dashes, three 440-yard dashes, three 880-yard runs, three mile runs, one two-mile run, three 50-yard low hurdles and three relays complete the roster of events. Rules of the southern conference will be used in conducting the meet.

The events at Charlottesville will be held at the memorial gymnasium, said to be the largest playing floor of any college or university in the east or south. There is space for 50-yard dashes and low hurdles on a straightaway. The balcony is a banked track, 11 laps being a mile, the same dimensions as the Madison Square Garden track where the national championships are held.

Among the colleges which will be represented in either of the track meets will be the University of Virginia, the University of Richmond, William and Mary college, University of North Carolina, University of Maryland, Washington and Lee university, Duke university, North Carolina State college, Davidson college Randolph Macon college and Hampden Sydney college.

CUBS PILOT PUTS FAITH IN GUY BUSH

BY CULLEN CAIN.

Along towards the close of last season when the Cubs were in New York on their last swing around the eastern circuit some newspapermen were visiting with Joe McCarthy, the wizard manager, in his hotel room. Guy Bush, his kid pitcher, entered the room, and McCarthy placed his hand on the boy's shoulder and swung this abashed youth to the front and made prophecy as follows: "Boys, this fellow is going to be my star pitcher next season."

Everybody looked pleasant and interested except Bush. But Joe McCarthy was in earnest. While Root was his most effective man that year and also one of the most talked-of young pitchers in the majors, yet McCarthy believed he saw certain signs of greatness in the stripling from Mississippi. Root, Kaufman, Jones and Blake bore the pitching burdens for the Cubs last year, as well as Bush, who won 13 and lost 9 games. A pretty good record. And so it was Bush's name that was pronounced to lead all the rest another year.

Mississippian.

Bush was born in Shannon, Miss., 23 years ago and went to a military school down in his home state. He started in to pitch for Greenville back in 1922, but the league blew up in June. The young pitcher drifted north and entered the Kitty league. His pitching was of such brilliant quality that it attracted a Chicago Cub scout. President Veeck wanted to sign the southerner that year, but Bush held off for a year. "It took that long," he confessed, "to get my nerve up to the point where I was ready to tackle the big league."

About all Bush did for the Cubs in 1924 was pitch to the batters. He was sent to Wichita Falls for seasoning. He pitched so well out there he was called back. But there was nothing in his work during the 1925 season to instill any hope in the most sanguine manager's breast, for he won only 6 and lost 13 games. And yet he almost reversed that punk record last year.

But Bush's real work does not show in the won and lost columns or in the number of complete games he pitched, for he only appeared in seven full games. But, in earned run effectiveness, he was a bear with the Cubs. He held opponents to 2.86 earned runs per game.

Bush is a typical southerner, unctious, frank, sincere, likeable and slurs his "r's" into "a's." He is slender to frailness, has a thin face and piercing black eye. He works in a bank in Chicago in the winter. He is crazy about baseball. "I'd play if they only paid me $100 per month," he declared. "We will remember that when it comes time to send out your contract next year," laughed McCarthy.

Bush replied with great seriousness "But Mac, I cannot live on that up here. But I'd go back to the Cotton State and play for that money rather than not play at all, or do anything else for twice the money."

Joe McCarthy, wonder with young players, and with the best young pitching staff in the majors last season, must have had his real good reasons for naming Bush as his coming star. Bush has a snap and a leverage on the ball, and then he also has a brave heart and a level head, and most of all, he has a deep and abiding love of baseball in his soul.

Juvenile.

Attracting attention when he pitched for the Commerce High school nine, Worcester, Mass., Jim Dunlap, just 16, has been signed with the Boston Braves. The Braves will farm him out to either New Haven or Lynn and if his performance warrants it will recall him after the minor season closes.

POLICY LOOP ENDS SEASON ON TUESDAY

The Insurance league will finish its season Tuesday night with three games scheduled to be played at the Atlanta Athletic club starting at 7:30 o'clock. From present indications it appears that the leadership of the league will remain in a tie between the Insurance Company of North America and the Fireman's Fund Insurance company, and no doubt a game will have to be played between these teams to determine the winner of the race.

Insurance Company of North America has the harder game of the two, being forced to meet the Southeastern Underwriters association, now in third place. Should Southeastern succeed in defeating the North America lads and Fireman's Fund win its game, Fireman's Fund will get the cup without an extra game being played. However, Fireman's Fund will have a hard game in the Hartford Insurance company, which started the Southeastern lads down the chute by defeating them three weeks ago. Southeastern has lost three successive games, after winning six in a row, and, according to the law of averages, they are due to win Tuesday over North America. Should both the leaders lose then the race will be in a triple tie. However, this is highly improbable, but not impossible, as worse upsets have happened.

The Schedule.

Southeastern vs. Insurance Company, 7:30.

Fireman's Fund vs. Hartford Insurance Company, 8:30.

Commercial Union vs. Royal Insurance Company, 9:30.

THIRD WEEK OF GRID WORK AT 'BAMA ENDS

BY ARNOLD FINNEFROCK.

University, Ala., February 12.—With the conclusion of today's scrimmage, the third week of spring training at Alabama came to an end. The large number of men, possessing only mediocre ability, who were so much in evidence at the beginning of the spring training grind, have dropped out of the picture. As in life, it is a case of survival of the fittest, and Coach Wade is not the one to tolerate dumbness or lack of condition in any of his performers.

The first thing on the program each day for the gridders is a stiff session with the tackling, blocking and hitting the dummy. Tackling and blocking are Coach Wade's two pet fetishes. His elevens of the past three years have been past masters in these arts which are the greatest fundamental principles of football. Ben Ennis, an end of last year's outfit, has been assisting the Alabama coaches in drilling the candidates in the Wade style of play.

Hicks Good Passer.

Passing comes in for a major share of attention, with each of the backs taking a turn at shooting the oval into the arms of a teammate. Billy Hicks, whose flashy broken field running has been the feature of the daily scrimmage, is an able passer. His southpaw heaves possess more accuracy than any other Tidesman, with the possible exception of Archie Taylor.

At this time, it looks as if "Red" Brown will do most of the punting next year, although Hicks gets height as well as distance with his boots. He kicks with his left foot and he gives his punts a deceptive spiral that opposing backs find hard to judge.

Wade appears to have solved one of his problems when the placed Earl Smith at one of the terminals. This boy made a letter in the backfield last year where he was used more for blocking than carrying the ball. He is big and fast, and tackles hard and clean. He is also adept at receiving passes. Beale, a frosh, is being used at the other end, and he is sure to make Pepper show something to get a regular assignment in the fall.

Pierce and Dye have been alternating at center this last week. If Wade finally decides upon Dye, Pierce will be stationed at tackle.

Backfield positions are still very much in doubt. However, "Red" Brown, Taylor, Holmes and Hicks have seen the most service and indications are that, with the possible exception of one man, they will form the regular backfield. Vines, who is a member of the basketball squad, belongs in there some place, and either Holms or Hicks will not be among the starters. As Hicks has been calling the signals, it looks as if he will be retained.

A Pot of Gold Awaits Golfers In Clearwater

Clearwater, Fla., February 12.—(AP) A pot of gold at the rainbow's end of a gruelling 72-hole competition and Florida's open golf championship crown will lure some 200 of the nation's premier golfers over three of the five golf courses in the Clearwater-Belleair-Dunedin region here Monday week when the opening rounds of the two-day Florida open championship tournament gets under way.

Twelve low ball scorers will come in for a share of the $4,000 cash purse posted for the event, $1,000 going to the winner.

Definite assurance that Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Bobby Cruickshank, Willie Klein, Tommy Armour, Joe Turnesa, Johnny Golden, Al Watrous, Louis Chiappetta, Leo Diegel, Joe Kirkwood and a host of other leading professionals will fight for first honors in the events, was received here late this week following filing of their entries.

Hagen and Sarazen, eager to be in on the three events scheduled for next week in which over $7,000 prize money will be awarded, have changed their long heralded exhibition match from February 27 to February 20.

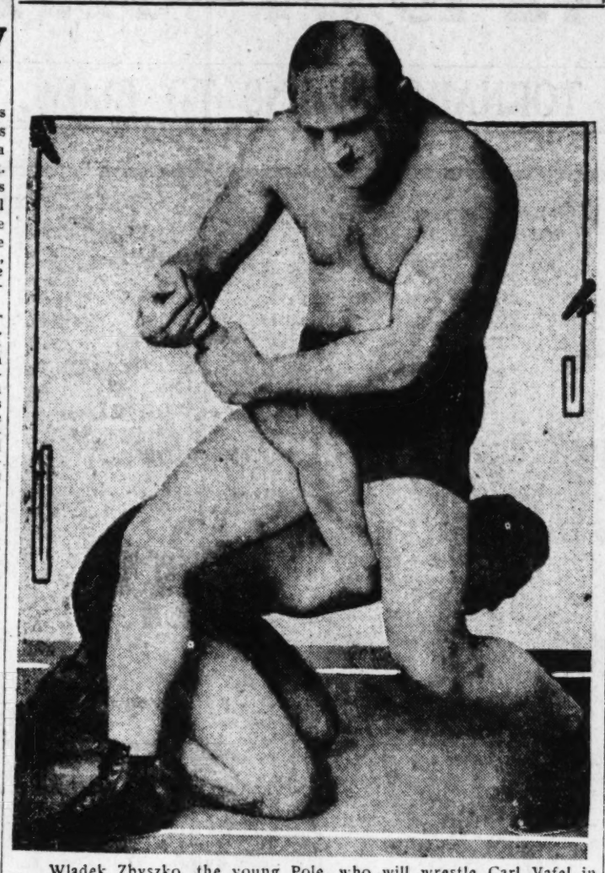

They will play off the first of the two exhibition matches at Miami Sunday week and leave immediately afterwards for Clearwater to enter the Florida open on Monday morning, according to their announced plans.

More than a score of entries by leading amateurs in both the Florida open and the annual pro-amateur tourney Sunday week at Belleair were filed here today.

Feminine Sports.

The most popular sports in universities for women in Germany are track and field events, gym work, swimming and tennis. More than 50 per cent of the students participate regularly in one or more sports.

WRESTLES VAFEL THURSDAY

Wladek Zbyszko, the young Pole, who will wrestle Carl Vafel in one of the feature bouts of the Stecher-Browning match at the city auditorium Thursday night. This is the first time either of the Zbyszkos have appeared here in more than a year. Zzyszko is one of the strongest and cleverest men in the game and should give the fast Mr. Jones a run for his money, if not beat him.

Petrels Book Game With Johns Hopkins

BY ALTON REDFEARN.

The Oglethorpe-Johns Hopkins university football game, which has been pending for several days, was officially scheduled Saturday, according to an announcement from Frank Anderson, director of athletics at the Peachtree road institution. The game will be played at Spiller field on December 10, thus leaving but two December dates, the 3d and 17th, to be filled by the Petrels in order to complete their 1927 schedule

Johns Hopkins university is ranked with the first five of American universities, academically speaking, which are, namely, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Chicago and Johns Hopkins. Of these it is the first to come south to engage in an athletic contest; also it will be the first post-season affair for the Baltimore gridders since the installation of athletics at the Maryland school.

It is true that Hopkins up till the present has never been any too brilliant in sports. However, in recent years, the past two or three in particular, it has made excellent progress in athletics, especially in football, holding its own with good competition. Therefore, in the face of things, indications will, more than likely, point to a good game when Hopkins comes south.

However, aside from the expectation of a good and close game, it is thought that by game time next December much interest will be manifested over the struggle for more reasons than one. But chief among these is that it will be home-coming day for the Johns Hopkins southern alumni, and there are scores of them scattered over the south. Other reasons, of course, will crop out before the game time.

Coach Anderson also announced Saturday that he was in communication with other good schools for the date, December 17, which, if a game is scheduled, will be played in Atlanta likewise. The Birds also have an open date on December 3, but the chances are that this date will be left open, and if it is filled, the game will be played in foreign territory, due, of course, to the Tech-Georgia game which will be played in Atlanta on this date.

Gainer Hi Five Beats Cumming

Ellijay, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—In one of the cleanest and fastest games ever played on Ellijay's court, the boys of the Gilmer County High school last night defeated the Cumming High boys' team by a 15 to 16 score.

At the end of the first quarter the score stood 5 and 4 in favor of the Gilmerites. At the end of the first half it was 9 and 8 in favor of Cumming. The Gilmer boys maintained a steady, though meager lead from then on except at one time during the third quarter, when a field goal by Cumming put the score 14 and 13 in favor of Cumming. A long field goal by Stevens and a foul shot by Pinson gave Ellijay a lead that was never overcome. Brooks, right forward for Cumming, was high point man of the game, leading with 10 points. Milton, of the Gilmerites, was second, with six points.

Reading in bed is now popular, we learn. Nevertheless, one can often read between the lines between the sheets.

ANCIENT MIKE MAY YET WIN ELIMINATIONS

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, February 12.—It would be amusing, but not amazing if old Michael McTigue should win his way right through the present heavyweight elimination tournament to the threshold of a title bout with Gene Tunney. The thing would be ludicrous, but is far from impossible.

The way the cards are stacked at present, McTigue has to fight Jack Sharkey, of Boston, first of all. In more than 100 fights during the past 12 years, the old Irishman has been knocked out but once, and has lost only three decisions. The records of men he has beaten, Harry Greb, Johnny Risko, Paul Berlenbach and others, are better than those of Sharkey's victims—if one expects the charcoal shell of what once was the Black Panther of Harlem.

Sharkey is only 23, stands six feet one, weighs 195, and was aggressive against Harry Wills. Heretofore, he, like the McTigue of old, specialized in defensive boxing. The Bostonian tore right in against Wills, however, and impressed the critics with his willingness to fight.

McTigue, "made over" into a knockout artist in his fortieth year, actually packs a wickeder punch than Sharkey, who lacks a sleep producing blow. On their records, it would not be surprising if McTigue were to win.

Meanwhile, probably, Jack Delaney, of Bridgeport, will have disposed of the other Boston entrant, Jimmy Maloney.

This situation would leave McTigue and Delaney together in the finals. Now Delaney knocked out Mike last year, bringing up a savage uppercut flush to the jaw as Mike came off the ropes. The blow nearly finished Mike, and Patsy Haley stopped the slaughter a minute later. But in a return bout, with the aged Celt packing a wallop of his own against which the light-heavyweight champion must guard, and with the men equally matched in boxing skill, it is not inconceivable that McTigue would win.

What fun it would be to have Mike McTigue the unchallenged logical contender for the throne of heavyweight champion of the world. How chagrined Gene Tunney would be.

Samson Improves.

Within the last few weeks Paul Samson, captain of the University of Michigan swimming team, has achieved sterling performances in competition. He covered the 100 yards free style in 54 3-10, 220 yards in 2.21 4-5, and 440 yards in 5:17. Coach Mann thinks that he is now capable of shattering every free style intercollegiate record listed at present.

ST. LUKE FIVE HOLDS S.S.A.A. LOOP LEAD

The Sunday School Athletic association will again swing into action Monday with five games, and then on Friday with five more. The Friday games were originally scheduled for Thursday night, but due to the fact that Tech and Oglethorpe will play on Thursday night, the S. S. A. A. moved its games to Friday night. All 10 games will be played on the court of the Atlanta Athletic club.

The two races are getting close. In the National league Jackson Hill Baptist managed to increase its lead by defeating T. N. T. class last Monday night by three points, in the most interesting game of the week.

St. Luke's Episcopal is still dominating in the American league, but have a hard game Monday night when they meet Triple E Class. The remainder of the schedule shows some pretty good games in the making, and play in the games should be good.

The attendance to all of the S. S. A. A. games has been holding up exceptionally well throughout the season.

THE SCHEDULE.

Monday.

St. Paul Methodist vs. Central Presbyterian, 7:15.

Fortified Hills vs. Druid Hills, 7:40.

Grace Methodist vs. Grant Park, 8:35.

Covenant Presbyterian vs. Pryor Street, 9:00.

Triple E. Class vs. St. Luke's, 9:55.

Friday.

T. N. T. Class vs. Pryor Street Presbyterian, 7:15.

Grace Methodist vs. G. F. C. Class, 7:40.

Fortified Hills vs. Triple E., 8:35.

Druid Hills Presbyterian vs. Grant Park, 9:00.

Jackson Hill vs. Clifton Presbyterian, 9:55.

N. C. STATE'S SPORT CARD VARIED ONE

Raleigh, N. C., February 12.—The coming week will be a busy one in the winter sports program at North Carolina State, with five major contests scheduled, all of which will be staged at home.

Tech grapplers will meet the Carolina Tar Heel matmen in wrestling Monday evening, and on Saturday Coach Drennan's huskies will close the local wrestling season with a match with Washington and Lee.

The Duke university basketball squads will be the attraction on the local boards Wednesday. Due to the startling rise of the Blue Devil quint in recent games, much interest has been aroused in their second meeting with the Red Terrors. Preceding the varsity encounter, the yearling teams of the two institutions will mix up in a battle which will help to decide the freshman championship of the state.

The Blue Imps are credited with a 29-27 victory over the Little Terrors, and since the first meeting, in Durham, the former team has swept through Virginia on a highly successful invasion. "Doc" Sermon's young hopefuls have brushed aside all other opposition, and the fur is sure to fly when these leading first-year teams clash next Wednesday.

On Friday evening, State will play host to the basketball team of the University of Maryland, which is coming to Raleigh for its first visit in several years. The Old Liners are ranking high in the southern conference, and loom as strong contenders for the southern conference championship. Maryland won last week from the Carolina Tar Heels, perennial conference champions.

In addition to the regularly scheduled games in the winter sports program, Coach Gus Tebell, on Monday, will issue a call for spring football practice. It is expected that nearly a hundred candidates for the 1927 Wolfpack will don the moleskins for six weeks of intensive training.

Hoover To Coach.

Walter M. Hoover, national amateur rowing champ, announced that he would coach at the Undine club, of Philadelphia, where he is a member, and that he is through with competition. Hoover won the world's most famous rowing trophy, the diamond sculls, on the Henley in England and held the Philadelphia gold challenge cup emblematic of the world's amateur championship.

Welch Signs Contract Spiller Sees Great Attendance in 1927

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Baseball, according to Mr. Rell Jackson Spiller, lead-off man for the Crackers during the off-season, is in for a big year, and the Atlanta fans are especially in for a big time. Particularly so during the period of exhibition games, which begins on March 23, according to the big boss.

Among other announcements, which were emanating freely from Cracker headquarters Saturday, Bert Niehoff gave out the statement that Fran Welch, formerly with the Philadelphia Athletics in their hay field and lanbaster of baseballs de luxe, had finally quit arguing over such a trivial matter as salary and had signed his contract with the Crackers.

Anent baseball and its big year particularly in Atlanta, Spiller had more and lots of it to say.

Ty Cobb Here.

To Mr. Spiller, outstanding among the games scheduled here for the early spring, is the brace schedule for April 1 and 2 with the Philadelphia Athletics, recently made headliners among the big-time teams by the addition of Mr. Tyrus Raymond Cobb, along with his vindication by Judge Landis, to perform in the outfield this year.

According to Mr. Spiller, the Mackmen have material of championship caliber this season, and it will also be the first chance that Georgia fans will have to give Mr. Cobb joyous greetings upon his return to baseball as a fully vindicated performer.

Another exhibition game which the Cracker prexy believes will draw numbers of cash customers will be played on April 4 between the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals, who will revive their little skit of last fall, entitled 'The World's Series or the Battle for a Fortune.'

Local Interest.

After the exhibition games are over which include the usual International and major league matinees, Spiller says that the Crackers of 1927 will keep up plenty of interest among the fans.

"For one thing," said Spiller, "Atlanta will have a one-two-three club—depend upon that. When Atlanta has a club in the first division battling for the flag, increased attendance is noted all over the league."

Mr. Spiller also believes that the recent Landis production of "Scandals," which supplanted George White's regular edition this winter, has caused the national pastime to become so talked of during the rounds of play of the winter league that the players, all of whom came out clean in the wash, will cause a great deal of interest, and big collection of pay-as-you-enter fans.

He is looking for an increased attendance among the home folks here, and thinks that all attendance records will be broken this season.

Spiller and Manager Bert Niehoff are ready to leave Monday for New Orleans, where the Southern association will make its schedule for the coming season.

GEORGIA BALL TOSSERS START NEXT MONDAY

Athens, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Pitchers and catchers of the Georgia Bulldog baseball team will report for the initial practice of the year Monday week, according to an announcement of Coach Bill White today. Remaining aspirants for the Red and Black diamond team will assemble upon the close of the spring football training season early in March.

Of the 14 letter men of last year five are lost. The worst problem facing the Bulldog mentor is the infield, three of last year's inner defense being lost to the 1927 team. The squad will boast an able array of talent, however, and prospects are good for a strong team.

The schedule is expected to be announced by Dr. S. V. Sanford within the next few days.

DUNDEE READY FOR BATTLE WITH ANY FOE

West Palm Beach, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—Declaring that he is still the holder of the featherweight championship of the world, and scouting reports of his retirement, Johnny Dundee, wintering with his wife at Palm Beach, added today that he will be ready to meet any contender for the title Tex Rickard cares to select as soon as he gets a few "warm-up" bouts under his belt.

Dundee expects to reenter the ring late next month. He declared his belief that Bennie Bass is the most logical contender for the title, since Louis "Kid" Kaplan, recognized in New York as former synthetic champion, has glided into the lightweight division.

"I cannot understand why some writers and officials refer to me as retired, undefeated featherweight champion of the world," he said. "I have never been defeated within the featherweight limits, nor have I retired. Possibly the impression of my abdication arose three months ago when I went through the last five rounds of my bout with Tod Morgan at San Francisco with a fractured arm. I lost the decision to the junior lightweight champion, naturally, because I could use but one arm. I voted a few months' rest, and the boys got the idea I was retiring.

"I don't feel that I should have to go through a tourney should I make a stab for New York's recognition of my title. Let the other boys do that and I'll meet the man Rickard says I should meet for the championship," the little Italian concluded.

Tenth A.-M. Preps For Ball Season

Sparta, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—The students of the Tenth District A. & M. school, located near here, have completed their basketball season and are now making preparations for the best baseball nine which has ever been put on the diamond by the school. Coach Biles is now getting the best players lined up and by early spring they will have their practice on in earnest. In fact, they are scheduled to start in as soon as the weather will permit. New uniforms and other paraphernalia will be purchased by the beginning of the season. The players will cross bats with all of the agricultural and prep schools in this section, according to the coach.

Miss Turpie Loses Again in Tourney

Biloxi, Miss., February 12.—(AP)—Miss Marion Turpie, New Orleans, youthful holder of the southern women's golf crown, received her second defeat in as many weeks here today in the semi-finals of the Gulf Hills ladies' invitation golf tournament.

But for the misstep today, Miss Turpie tomorrow would again have been arrayed against Mrs. Dalton Reymond, of Baton Rouge, her strongest antagonist for Louisiana golfing honors.

Mrs. Reymond won her semi-finals match against Mrs. Ward Baker, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, 3 up and 1 to play and tomorrow will meet Mrs. C. A. Crummel, of Gulf Hills, who defeated Miss Turpie today, 1 up.

Miss Turpie last week was beaten by Mrs. Reymond, 2 and 1, in the finals of the annual New Orleans ladies' invitation tournament.

Hunter Named.

"Big Bill" Tilden, who will head the American tennis team on their extensive tour of Europe, will no doubt, have Francis T. Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y., as his partner. Hunter is a veteran tennis star and co-holder with Vincent Richards of the Olympic doubles championship. Matches will be played in Spain, Germany, Belgium and Ireland in addition to the competition in the major French and British tournaments.

Bobby Jones To Enter Southern Open Tournament

Alabama Baseball Team Books 4 Games With Georgia Tech

BY ARNOLD FINNEFROCK.

University, Ala., February 12.—Alabama's 1927 baseball schedule as announced today by Athletic Director Wallace Wade includes 23 games, of which 16 are with conference opponents. Fifteen contests are slated to be played on the campus, giving the baseball fans of this vicinity one of the most attractive menus in years.

Three trips will be taken, the first of which carries the Crimson ball tossers to Atlanta where they will encounter the conference champions in a two-game series. The most extended tour of the season finds the Captoners hitting the trail for Baton Rouge and New Orleans, where they will cross bats with L. S. U. and Tulane in four games. Mississippi A. and M. will wind up the season with two games in Starksville.

A newcomer is listed on the schedule in Lance Richbourg's University of Florida nine. Reports emanating from 'Gatorland indicate that Florida will send a strong team here for their trace of games with the Crimsons on April 6 and 7.

Work Starts February 26.

The balmy spring weather of the last few days has seen a score of ball players cavorting on Denny field, but official practice will not start until the conclusion of spring football training February 26. Prospects for a championship team are far from being bright, nine members of last year's heavy hitting aggregation having been lost through graduation and withdrawal from school.

"Lefty" Hutto, one of the foremost college hurlers in the south, is the only veteran of last year's pitching staff that is back. Three men at the least will have to be found to carry the team over the rough spots in the season's campaign.

Several catchers will have to be developed to replace "Pat" Cruise and Frank Chambers. Chambers is to have a tryout with the St. Louis Cardinals this spring.

Captain Tommy Sewell will hold forth again at the hot corner, giving every assurance that this difficult spot will be well taken care of. Pepper, who saw service at both short and second last year, may be shifted to the outfield. Harry Moore, a reserve last year, is expected to stage a strong fight for a regular berth. Connatser, heavy hitting guardian of the initial sack last year, graduated, and his absence is sure to be felt. Connie played last summer in the Cotton States league and is to get a trial with Birmingham this spring.

However, the biggest loss is in the outer garden where the four letter men of last year's combine are conspicuous by their absence. "Red" Barnes, Winslett, Rosenfeld and Shirley formed as heavy a clouting quartet as one could find in college baseball. Barnes is to receive a trial with Birmingham this spring, and indications are that he will make the grade.

The Schedule.

The 1927 baseball schedule follows:

March 18, 19, Birmingham Barons at Tuscaloosa.
March 28, 29, Birmingham Southern at Tuscaloosa.
April 1, 2, Georgia at Tuscaloosa.
April 6, 7, Florida at Tuscaloosa.
April 8, Cleveland at Tuscaloosa.
April 20, 21, Georgia Tech at Atlanta.
April 22, 23, Georgia Tech at Tuscaloosa.
April 27, 28, L. S. U. at Baton Rouge.
April 29, 30, Tulane at New Orleans.
May 6, 7, Mississippi A. and M. at Tuscaloosa.
May 9, 10, Mississippi A. and M. at Starksville.

ALL-STAR FIVE EASILY BEATS DRUID HILLS

Epworth All-Stars had little trouble with Druid Hills Presbyterians Saturday night, and turned in an easy victory, 51 to 24. The Emory Nurses fell before the attack of the All-Star girls, 23 to 15, in a hard-fought game.

In the boys' game, the Epworth forwards and center proved to be too much for Druid Hills. Arthur McHenry, U. S. B. star, sank a total of 20 points during the game. Hutcheson and Martin, the forwards, each scored 11 points.

Patton worked best for the losers, scoring eight points. Druid Hills had a fair passing attack, but was unable to get by Smith and Richardson, Epworth guards.

Miss Cawthon, All-Star forward, with 12 points to her credit, was the outstanding player for the winners. Miss Dean, Emory guard, played an unusually good game at her position.

PETRELS WIN FROM Y. M. C. A. IN COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Oglethorpe university took down the banner of the local Y. M. C. A. tonight, 43-35, in a fast basketball game.

The invaders from Atlanta grabbed the lead early in the game and were never behind. Columbus, after trailing at the half, made a desperate stab at recovery and only by fast passing and accurate shooting were the Petrels able to hold their lead.

South Ga. A. & M. Beats Norman Five

Tifton, Ga., February 12.—The South Georgia A. & M. college quintet defeated the fast Norman Park institute five here by the score of 38 to 22. The game was one of the fastest and hardest fought seen on the local court.

This victory gave the Rams the best two out of three games played with Norman. Norman won the first game with the Rams in Norman Park.

The game started off slow but continued to get faster throughout the game. Norman drew first blood when Langford scored a point on a free throw. Norman held the Rams to a close score in the first half, but the Rams came back in the second frame and ran the score up in their favor.

Mercer 5 Plays Florida Monday

Macon, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Monday night the University of Florida five will be in Macon for a game with Coach Moore's Bear team.

Florida is coming to Macon with a representative team this year and is bent on revenge for the defeat dished out to them last season by the Mercer boys. And, too, there is a football defeat of last fall that Florida would like to account for.

The only comparison that can be made between the two teams lies in the fact that Florida beat Georgia early in the season by one point, who in turn defeated Mercer last Saturday night by nine points. This—so far as dope is concerned—gives the Alligators a ten-point advantage.

Nevertheless, a large crowd is expected to be present for this game, the next to the last of Mercer's home schedule. The last game will be played with the J. P. C. five here Saturday night of next week.

McNamara After Goullet's Mark

New York, February 12—(AP)—Reggie McNamara, "iron man" of the cycling world, has enlisted for Tex Rickard's next six-day grind, starting March 5, in an attempt to equal Alfred Goullet's record of 12 bike marathon victories.

McNamara already has drawn down more prize money than any rider in the history of the sport. He has won 11 races, finished second seven times, third on five occasions and fourth on three others.

The veteran Newark, N. J., athlete returned two days ago from Europe, where he carried off first honors in a 62 1-2 mile team race with Linari, after finishing fifth in the Berlin six-day race. An injury to his partner put Reggie too far behind to make a strong first place contender in the latter event.

Rock Gets Small Man for Leader

Notre Dame, Ind., February 12.—(Special.)—The adage about good things coming in small packages has its staunch believers among the members of the Notre Dame football team. For the result of the annual election to the captaincy was the naming of the smallest man on Rockne's big squad to the leader's job.

This is stockily-built, blue-eyed John Smith who has starred for the past two seasons as one of the greatest watchcharm guards ever to wear the blue. Smith is a junior and is expected to be a leading contender for All-American honors when the annual picking is done next fall. His home is in Hartford, Conn., and his election brings the captaincy back to the line after its sojourn in the backfield division during the 1926 season.

Ice Carnival Interest Grows

Madison, Wis., February 12.—An extensive program for the annual University of Michigan ice carnival, to be held here February 19, was made known today by W. R. Brandow, who is in charge of the winter program at the university.

The events include ice boat races which are open to organizations or individuals, ski events, skating events, relays and skating races in addition to other contests.

A high point trophy will be awarded for men contestants in the carnival, and one similar honor will be open for women. Contestants may enter in three races and the relay and the only fee required for all participants and the spectators will be the nominal charge of 25 cents for a badge.

Exclusive of the ski jumping contest and the ice boat races, the following events will be open to men: 220-yard (8 men) open, 400-yard (8 men), 880-yard (8 men) open, one mile (6 men) open, fancy skating (5 men), interfraternity relay (6 teams—6 men), Tripp-Adams race, military department (4 men), and open relay (6 teams—4 men each).

Events listed for women include: 100-yard (6 girls), 220-yard (6 girls), 880-yard (6 girls), potato race, (6 girls), fancy skating (3 girls), Barnard-Chadbourne relay (4 girls on team), intersorority relay (4 teams—3 girls on team).

Scribes' Tourney.

Orlando, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—Newspapermen of Florida will assemble at Mount Plymouth tomorrow to tee off in the first annual newspapermen's golf tourney to be played over the St. Andrews course. Advance reservations indicate a large field will be on hand for the matches.

The program will begin tomorrow morning with a putting contest, followed by a newspapermen's golf luncheon, after which the golfers will tee off for the 18-hole tourney.

VOL. 59. No. 3. QUIGGVILLE, GLA., FEB. 12, 1927. SUNDAY MORNING

"You're a Big Pig" "I'm Not a Big Pig" Pigs Will Be Pigs

Atlanta, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Having been interrupted in the midst of his story on the alleged framed game in the 1923 Press league pennant race, Swede Reesberg, former player in the Press league, completed the preliminary hearing here today before the baseball commissioner.

The 12 men named in the scandal were called in for the hearing by the judge but all of them did not appear before the high boss Saturday as expected.

As the judge entered the room where all of the men were seated the big Swede began to eye the men lined about in front of the judge's desk like a frightened rabbit.

"Now Mr. Reesberg," the judge started. "Will you let me hear the rest of your story on the fixed games? Tell me just what those involved in the framed game were to receive for throwing the game on the 11th of July, 1923," the judge continued.

The Swede stood up eyeing everyone in the room and began to relate his story. The six men present looked at the big Swede with set eyes as he began with his story.

"Some one was talking as I passed them back of the stands and I heard something about whisky," the Swede said.

"Who was this person talking as you passed?" interrupted the judge.

"As well as I remember it was Slim Higgins," answered the big Swede.

"It's a lie," stormed Higgins.

"How much whisky was there involved in the deal?" asked the judge, leaning over on his desk.

"Two gallons," answered the Swede.

"Just who had the liquor?" asked the judge. "Was it Higgins?"

"I do not remember," said the Swede.

"Huh, thought you knew so much on these men," said the judge.

"I do," said the Swede.

"He's full of mud," stormed several of the players, rising from their seats.

"Well, let me hear the rest of your story," said the big boy as he leaned back in his big chair.

"These men I named last week had the liquor in the dressing rooms in a suit case before the game but did not open it until just as all of the players were leaving the rooms. Then those involved in the deal lingered around the rooms to get a drink before going on the field," said the Swede.

"He's a liar and a big pig!" shouted the men.

"I am not a big pig," answered the Swede.

"You are!" yelled Higgins as he started in the direction of the Swede, shoving chairs out of the way as he went.

There was a big auto race planned at the fair grounds last Friday but Chase Carr couldn't get his Ford started and the other fellow wouldn't race alone.

A fellow came up to Quiggville from down south the other day to enter the skating race but when he saw the skates he refused to enter. He said somebody took off the wheels and put on a knife blade.

Orange Malleteers Win Polo Tourney With Right to Jaw

Editor's Note: Sometime a reporter, especially one connected with the sports department, is called upon to write up with the tone of an expert some totally unfamiliar sport. The following was turned in by Merri Mack upon the completion of the polo tournament at Fort McPherson, in Atlanta, Ga., recently.

BY MERRI MACK.

The Orange Malleteers were driving the apple down the field. Suddenly McGinity (for it was none other than he) ripped off 10 yards through the left wicket. "Two up and one to play," liltingly chirped up the timekeeper, in tones calculated to freeze the stoutest heart. Immediately there was loud confusion as if caused by many running of feet.

"Give 'em air," a large policeman of traffic squad was heard to exclaim. The crowd rushed to the center of the large ballroom which until this time had been the scene of the encounter. A weighty problem presented itself. Jetty Jurns had passed out again for the third consecutive time, come next Michelmas.

Thirty love! "Big" Fearn had hooped another basket. The linesmen were dealing them close to their loud plaid waistcoats. As if by magic the Yellow Horsemen tore down the grid setting their opponents three tricks doubled and re-doubled. It was a noble victory. The boys were marching home from the war. Up 'til this time there was no mention of Liberty bonds or Peaches Browning. Suddenly—

"What! No caulks on them polo ponies?" It was Ned Bamforth speaking. He always was fond of carrots. The game seesawed this and that, tit for tat, until the fatal seventh when by careful nursing Hoppe managed to pull over good ole Checkers by a snoot—full. It was 3-3 tie with Stribling on the pan. With startling suddenness a shot rang out—

"I'll have to cut your story to at least three and one half agate lines," announced the syrupy voice of Darence Bixon. Up to this time no one had spoken a word. The crowd was frozen in its boots. And here the great rough giant secured a chin hold on his opponent, bending him this way and that. At this juncture K. O. Beeler rushed up. "I protest," he said and the mob fell back as one man, "no man shall be held by the chin. Think of it. He won't be able to talk." "Ha! Ha!" It was U. S. B. broadcasting. "Where's your cup and gun?" Confusion reigned. McNiff sent two hard rights to the head and wind, reading from right to left. He always was fond of spinach. Just then the whistle blew.

Ella Vaator, the champion woman golfer of Quiggville claimed the distinction of making a hole-in-one yesterday but she afterward found she was mistaken. She thought they meant one putt.

Some outsider wanted to put on some field trials in Quiggville township but all the farmers hereabouts know their soil pretty well and they voted at the last meeting of the Grange not to fool away any money on trials.

* * *

All citizens of Quiggville are invited to the blasting bee to be held next Saturday afternoon when the last stump in the new baseball diamond will be done away with.

Impression Made In Backyard By Wash Smatter Is Detaining

To the Editor,
Honest Sir:

I was absent on the last day of publication because I found it impossible to get there. I hope you will excuse same, and that my weekly wage will not be excused.

There are several reasons why I could not be there so I will give the best one which I think is a very good reason and will explain fully why I was not there.

At times I am known to take strolls at night on which I sometimes do not steer as strait a course as I should, and some people think I am drunk, which maybe I am, because I sometimes sing—at least I think I do.

So the other day Miss Crab, our old maid, called me an old tom cat on account of I wandered about late at night sometimes.

Well on the night before the day of publication I was prowling about as is my sometimes want. While I was prowling about I prowled into somebody's back yard, and did some singing, which I later heard was called yowling. So while I was singing—or yowling—the man in whose back yard I was at present didn't like it.

So thereupon he heaved at me the family white elephant, which being very old and large for its years, this act floored me and I left quite a good impression. Causing said impression caused me to be incarcerated on the day of publication which is why I was not there.

Hoping you will excuse the same, and pass it over, I am.

Yours truthfully,
WASH SMATTER.

'BAMA CAGERS BEAT SEWANEE FIVE, 27 TO 9

Tuscaloosa, Ala., February 12.—(Special.)—Outplaying Sewanee decisively, the Alabama Crimson five broke into the win column tonight after receiving five consecutive setbacks, winning, 27-9. The game was slow and listless, with both teams exhibiting a poor brand of basketball, Alabama missing countless shots.

Campbell, Alabama forward, was high point man of the evening with 11 points. The air-tight defense play of Pepper and Leach, Crimson guards, held the Purple-clad Tennesseeans to three field goals. "Mount" Helvey was the outstanding Sewanee cager.

Lineup and Summary.

ALA. (27)		SEWANEE (9)
Campbell (11)	f	Monaghan (2)
Cohen (2)	f	Hope
Young (4)	c	Williams (3)
Leach (5)	g	Burton
Pepper (2)	g	Helvey

Substitutions—Alabama: Vines (3) for Cohen, Little for Leach; Sewanee: Rigsby (4) for Hope.

National Basket Meet Planned

Madison, Wis., February 12.—With arrangements completed for holding the national academy basketball tournament here on March 17, 18 and 19, the athletic department of the University of Wisconsin is planning to entertain scores of military school students at Madison during that weekend.

Eight teams comprised the national academy basketball roster last year, including Pillsbury academy, St. John's Military academy, Morgan Park Military academy, Milwaukee County Day school, Wayland academy, St. Alban's, Onarga Military academy and Howe school.

Evidence that the number of entries this year will be larger is shown by inquiries made concerning the tournament by Culver Military academy, Western Military academy, Principia, Thorpe and other familiar institutions.

Another feature added to the academy basketball congress here in March will be the national academy indoor track championships, both of which will be staged simultaneously.

PEGLER SAYS DELANEY SCRAP

PICTURES IN PAPERS DECREE IMPORTANCE OF FIGHT

TO COST CUSTOMERS PLENTY

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, February 12.—Judging by the pictures in the papers at this time, the heavyweight elimination fight between Jack Delaney and Jimmy Maloney in the Garden next Friday night will be one of those battles of the century, a financial term meaning that the ringside customers will have to go to the scalpers for their tickets and pay $100 a copy.

It is easy to discriminate between a battle of, say, the fortnight and a battle of the century because in the former case the pictures in the papers merely show the prize fighters, swathed in folds of soiled underwear, punching the body-sack at Rosenbaum's east side healthatorium and physical culture institute. When a battle of the century is imminent, Mr. Tex Rickard deports the implicated prize fighters to suburban places and the pictures show them in turtle-neck sweaters, creased pants and patent leather shoes, engaged in climbing trees, pushing wheelbarrows or chopping down saplings.

At present, Mr. Jack Delaney is doing this at Bridgeport, Conn., and Mr. Maloney is doing more or less likewise at Long Branch, N. J. There may be some cautious ones who will insist that Bridgeport, Conn., with its automobile and small arms and typewriter factories is not truly rural but it passes for such with New Yorkers who regard all territory north of 110th street and west of Tenth avenue as the wide open spaces.

Gives Delaney Alibi.

The cauliflower commission has graciously provided Delaney an alibi in advance of the fight, having ordered him to weigh not more than 175 pounds at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon on the ground that he, as light-heavyweight champion of the world, should either make weight or resign the title. Maloney will weigh about 195 pounds and if he should win the fight, Delaney will state that he could have won if he had been permitted to carry a little more baggage.

There is nothing to be gained by going into the sense or justice of this because there is no sense to it and if there was any justice in the situation the boys would be paid not to exceed $10 a round for their work with prorata reductions for the clinches. They are very good prize fighters, of course, but $3.33 a minute would be good pay at that.

Delaney had trouble in two of his bouts with heavyweights because he was too light to handle them. They were not very good heavyweights, either. Young Bob Fitzsimmons was one, an awkward, crab-gaited third-rater with stumpy arms who nevertheless reached out and spanked Delaney on the temple with a left hook that sent him tangle-footing to the ropes, Johnny Risko was the other.

Maloney Is Better.

Maloney is better than those two, although he is supposed to have a pie crust chin, having been lumped on his shoulderblades twice by taps on this fault in his structure. He is a rushing, hurly-burly sort of fighter, faintly reminiscent of Jack Dempsey at his best, and he whips his left out of a weaving approach the way Dempsey used to do. Of course, Delaney's idea will be to pop him in the face with his straight right, a punch that dropped Bud Gorman as though he had been drugged, a few weeks ago, and if Maloney's chin really is made of pie crust he probably will fall on his face and stay there. But Harry Persson whacked him on the chin without causing him much distress and perhaps Delaney's right, at 175 pounds, has been over-rated. He hurled this punch at Paul Berlenbach's face for 15 rounds last summer and some of his right uppercuts almost unhinged Berlenbach's head. But Delaney did not once floor the man who went down in four rounds before old Mike McTigue. Delaney's right is so flashy that little has been said about his left but this is about as good a member as there is to be seen in the ring just now.

Seminary Girls Beat Covington

Washington seminary girls won their fourth straight game of the season by defeating Covington high on the seminary court Saturday afternoon by a score of 25 to 18.

The game was fast and hard fought from start to finish, with the seminary girls holding the lead from the start. Misses Julia Hope and Nell Harris starred for the winners.

GULF QUINT IS DEFEATED BY ALBANY Y

Albany, Ga., February 12.—Using a passing attack that was unstoppable, and with "Skipper" Smith and Frank Hardy shooting goals from seemingly impossible angles, the Albany "Y" Blues defeated the Gulf Refining company quintet on the local "Y" court here tonight 51 to 32.

At only one stage of the game did the Atlanta city league champs have the lead. That being in the early part of the first half when they led 8 to 6. From then until the end of the initial half, the Blues scored almost at will, scoring 18 counters, while the Atlanta five tallied only one point, a foul shot by Brock. The half ending 24 to 9 in favor of the Blues.

In the final half the Blues used several substitution and the game was close, the locals again leading with 27 points to the visitors 23. In Nichols, the Gulf quintet presented a fast basketball star and a dead shot, especially under the basket. He led the visiting quint in scoring with 16 points. Brock and Bynum also played a good game for the Atlanta five. The guarding of Cherry and J. Smith was also brilliant for the home five.

Lineup:

Albany (51)	Pos.	Gulf (32)
E. Smith (14)	F	Tasker (5)
Robinson (12)	F	Brock (8)
Hardy (17)	C	Nichol (16)
J. Smith (3)	G	Bynum (1)
Cherry (2)	G	Connor (2)

Subs—Albany, Riley for E. Smith; Cox (3) for Robinson; Brisbos for Hardy; Whiting for Cherry. Gulf, Bumstead for Tasker. Field goals, Albany 24, Gulf 13. Foul goals, Albany 3 out 13; Gulf 6 out of 19. Referee Joiner. Umpire Gremmer. Timekeepers Fields and Hayes.

State Tourney Set.

Orlando, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—Dates for the annual tournament of the Florida State Golfers' association, originally set for April 5, 6, 7 and 8, in Orlando, have been changed to April 13, 14, 15 and 16, according to an announcement by officials of the association here tonight. Conflicting tournament dates was given as the reason for the change.

Judge Signs.

Joe Judge, veteran first baseman, has signed with the Washington Senators for 1927.

Penn State Teams Travel This Week

State College, Pa., February 12.—Two Penn State teams will make their first invasion of foreign fields in eastern colleges this week. The Nittany boxers and wrestlers will go on the road to meet Naval Academy and Harvard, respectively. The cagers will engage in the only home contest, meeting Bucknell in the ninth game on the home floor.

The trip to Cambridge will not be the first away-from-home meet for the grapplers, however, a tournament at Iowa State college, January 28, giving them their initial foreign floor experience of the season. The Annapolis bouts with the midshipmen will be the first trip for the boxers.

Although they have defeated Lafayette and Syracuse decisively the wrestlers are expecting stiff opposition from the Crimson. The Iowa meet demonstrated to Coach Charley Speidel that the squad will have a long way to go to reach the condition necessary for the intercollegiates at Philadelphia in March. Before the championships the team must go through dual tournaments with Navy and Cornell, two of the hardest spots on the schedule.

Injuries have hampered the boxing team in the early meets, but the return of Filegar 135-pounder, and Roger Mahoney, heavyweight, have bolstered the chances of the mittmen considerably. Both are expected to be back in the lineup for the Navy bouts.

Atlanta Golf Star Will Drop Studies To Play In Tourney

BY DICK HAWKINS.

Insofar as the golfing fans of Bobby Jones' home town are concerned the $12,000 southern open tournament set for East Lake late in March is an assured success because the open champion of Great Britain and the United States has finally said that he will take part in the tourney. Bob appealed to the dean at Emory university and it was agreed that the champion might play hookey during the tournament.

And that is not the best part of it, either. Bobby will probably be paired with Walter Hagen in the pro-amateur matches on Wednesday, the day preceding the opening of the open qualifying rounds.

These facts have a double significance. They mean that Atlanta will have a foremost contender in the open and that Atlantans who have not had the opportunity to see Bobby Jones in action at the big national tournaments will be able to watch him in real big-time company right here at home.

Purse to Attract Crowd.

The fact that the largest purse in the history of open golf has been offered is enough to insure the attendance of the nation's greatest professionals and with Bobby Jones entered, it is entirely probably that the list of amateurs will be considerably swelled because of the fact that the ambition of most non-professional golfers is to beat Bob Jones.

The pro-amateur matches set for the first Wednesday of tourney, will replace the first day of qualifying play which has been set back to Thursday. It was decided by the committee in charge that the qualifying scores should count in the total of 72 holes and that 36 holes would be played only on Saturday, thus making a three-day rather than a four-day tourney.

Bob has been playing very little golf of late, owing to the pressure of studies, and there are many who believe that the champion will have hard sledding against the professionals who have been playing continuously all winter, but it is to be remembered that Bob will be playing on his own course and there are few who can boast of having beaten Bobby Jones at East Lake. At any rate the entrance of Bob Jones assures the tournament of a truly big-time aspect, and the fact that Watts Gunn, Gene Cook and Charlie Black, Jr., will also take their places in the competition means that Atlanta will be well represented in the ranks of the amateurs.

To Relieve Strain.

As stated above the tournament will be confined to three days rather than four for the reason that under the former plan it would be necessary for entrants to play 36 holes on two successive days, a hard strain, particularly for those of the contestants who have not been playing steadily through the winter.

Under the present plan there will be 18 holes played on Thursday and 18 on Friday and the lowest 64 scores with ties will enter the championship play of 36 holes on Saturday. The 36 holes of qualifying will be counted in the 72-hole medal score for the trophy or purse.

The first three amateurs will receive suitable trophies and the first professional will cop the $4,000 top purse, while no less than 29 other professionals will come in for a slice of the money.

Horace Smith, president of the Southern Golf association, has appointed the following committee to take actual charge of the affairs at East Lake: Al Bailey, Wimberly Peters and Keith Conway.

With these men in charge and the entry list growing daily there remains no doubt of the success of what promises to be the south's greatest golf tournament.

TECH TANKMEN FACING LONG ROAD JAUNT

A program that calls for the longest trip ever undertaken by a Georgia Tech swimming team has been arranged for the natators of Tech, headed by Captain Bill Noyes.

The tankmen of the Central Y in Brooklyn, N. Y., will furnish opposition for the Techmen on March 12, and on March 14, the Techmen will face Yale at New Haven.

In addition to these two dual meets, a quadrangular affair, probably involving Tech, Georgia, Florida and Vanderbilt is being arranged. Plans for this meet have not yet been finished, and it is still doubtful if Florida will enter the affair. Tech is also angling for a meet with the Citadel swimmers in Charleston, S. C.

Tech is allowed only five swimming meets each year, and with these four in view, the fifth has not yet been intimated. Present plans are to have Tech meet Citadel either on the road to Brooklyn or on the trip back from the Yale meet.

De Palma, Purvis Hurt in Crash

Tampa, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—John DePalma, Los Angeles, and Wild Sam Purvis, Jacksonville, Fla., two of the best-known race drivers in the country, were slightly injured in a collision at the South Florida Fair grounds this afternoon when their machines crashed at a turn. DePalma was taken to a hospital suffering from numerous cuts and bruises. Purvis was given first-aid treatment at the fair grounds.

The accident occurred when DePalma, who was leading in the race, struck a wooden fence on the turn. As he glanced off, Purvis, who was close behind, struck DePalma's machine and both cars turned over.

Baby Stribling Boxes at Waycross

Waycross, Ga., February 13.—Smiling Dick Baker, formerly of Savannah, and Baby Stribling, regarded as two of the flashiest little men in the southern ring, will be the principals in a fight card here Friday, March 4, under the auspices of the Young Men's Athletic club.

The two plucky scrappers have met once before, once in Miami, where Baker was the winner, and again in Macon, where Stribling was declared the winner.

Pa and Ma Stribling will accompany Baby Herbert to Waycross, and it was announced today that Young Stribling possibly will be along the ringside.

The Young Men's Athletic club has sponsored several cards during the past few months and the fighting game is gaining steadily in popularity through south Georgia.

Lacrosse Practice Begins at Tech

The lacrosse team of Georgia Tech will begin practice Monday for the coming spring season, though no tilts with other teams have yet been scheduled. The lacrosse outfit is headed this year by Captain Red Riley.

Jousts with Georgia, Florida and Vanderbilt are in the offing. None have been arranged as yet. Several northern colleges, according to information received at Tech, are planning southern tours this spring, and if possible Tech may arrange for battles with the invaders.

The lacrosse uniforms will be issued Monday and preliminary practice begun.

Conference Teams Begin Preparing For Track Mee

L.S.U. To Be Host At Annual Meeting; Strong Teams Seen

BY JULIEN SAKS.

Though spring and ideal outdoor conditions continue to flit fitfully between wintry spells, coaches at many of the 22 southern conference colleges have turned their minds to the conference meet to be held at Louisiana State university at Baton Rouge late in May and are busily preparing their charges for what promises to be one of the best meets that the conference has yet produced.

A brand new track will be ready for the competing athletes.

A number of colleges in the conference are going to make strong bids for the championship and it is a toss-up as to who will be the winner. North Carolina, champions of 1926, are certain to be strong contenders, with Elliott, Pritchard and Watt back.

Auburn, with Baskin, one of the best hurdlers in the country and Snyder, who together gathered 13 points last year to place their alma mater fifth.

Promises Big Doings.

Clemson has Newman and Odell who each won a first place in 1926. Virginia, last year's runnerup, will have Cummins and other stars back. L. S. U. will put in as strong a bid as anyone with most of her best track men returning.

Tech Strong.

Georgia Tech, too, will have a good track team. Captain Ernest Kontz set a record during the trials for the quarter-mile. "Pop" Hood who tied with LeBauer, Virginia, for second place in the shot put, ought to be much better this year. Ed Hamm should come through with places in century and broad jump. Georgia should have a well-balanced track team in dual meets but what it can do in a conference meet remains an unknown quantity.

Each year the number of good track men in the south is increasing. Of course, many were lost through graduation last spring but many others have sprung up to take their places.

Roy, Clemson, twice conference quarter-mile champion, is through, but Blake, Vanderbilt; Kontz, Georgia Tech, and Cailleteau, L. S. U., will give a good account of themselves in the 440. Turner, Georgia, and Odell, Clemson, will be among the leading pole vaulters. Baskin, Auburn, and Nash, Sewanee, can be counted on in the hurdles.

Last year the high jump was won with 5 feet 10 1-4 inches, a relatively poor height. But practically all the contestants for that event will be back and this year it will probably take 6 feet or over to win. Snyder, Auburn, and Cummins, Virginia, have both returned and there will be some cinders burned when these two meet. Elliott, North Carolina, too, will be back and will be hard to beat in the mile. Luny Smith, Alabama, and Lindsey Roberts, Tech, who took first and second in the two mile, have left by the graduation route, but many others are striving to fill their places. "Pop" Hood, Tech, will return to heave the shot.

Few Possibilities.

These are only a few of the possibilities that can be considered now. And each year a number of men, previously unknown, zoom into the limelight. Practically every team in the conference will be stronger than last year and faster time and better distances are going to be required to place in the various events. Southern track men have been rapidly improving and comparison with those of other sections will show track in the south is rapidly becoming on a par with that in the other sections of the country.

Last year the conference meet, held at Chapel Hill, was won by North Carolina with a total of 22 points. Virginia came second with 18 1-2, and L. S. U. was third with 17. Though the meet last year was held under the adverse conditions of rainy weather, it was highly successful. Seven old conference records were broken and every one of the 16 events of the field events was good. On the whole the marks made at the southern conference meet would rank with the marks made at any conference meet in the country.

Elliott, North Carolina, established the fastest college mile in the country for 1926 when he negotiated that distance in 4 minutes, 21.2 seconds. Cummins, Virginia, sped over the century in ten seconds, while Snider, Auburn, ran the 220 in 21.7. Watt, North Carolina, jumped the low hurdles in 24.6 and Baskin, Auburn, cleared the highs in 15 flat. White, V. M. I., tossed the shot 44 feet 6 1-4 inches.

VIRGINIA U. COMPLETES '27 CINDER CARD

University, Va., February 12—Five dual meets have been scheduled for the University of Virginia track team during the season of 1927 and individuals will be entered in the Penn relays in Philadelphia and in the southern conference competition in Baton Rouge, La.

Dartmouth's track squad comes here to open the season on April 2, there are also to be meets with Virginia Military institute and Washington and Lee here, and with North Carolina and the Navy, away.

Four more events remain on the indoor track schedule, two in which the entire team will be entered and two for individuals. The entire team will be entered in the Richmond invitation games on February 19. The team will also take part in the third annual invitation games here later in the month.

Captain Henry Cumming, sprinter; Maurice LeBauer, weights; Harry Flippin, hurdles, and probably other track men will be entered in the national championship meet in Madison Square Garden, New York city, on February 28.

Virginia has excellent prospects for a well balanced outdoor team, with outstanding men in almost every event. If the team shapes up as Coach Lannigan expects, it may be that a northern trip will be added to the schedule.

Captain Cumming, holder of the 130-yard world indoor record, is recognized as one of the fastest sprinters of the county. LeBauer is national junior shot put champion and also holds the senior and junior metropolitan championships. Weak spots in last season's team will be strengthened by Neeley, hurdler, and Hutcheson, one of the best distance men to wear the Orange and Blue in years.

The 1927 outdoor schedule follows:

April 2—Dartmouth, at home.

April 9—Virginia Military institute, at home.

April 14—North Carolina, in Chapel Hill.

April 29-30—Penn Relays, Philadelphia.

May 7—Washington and Lee, at home.

May 9—Navy, in Annapolis.

May 14-15—Southern Conference, Baton Rouge, La.

Track and Field Competition Lacks Old-Time Color

New York, February 12.—Indoor track and field competition this winter lacks the color, the focus of interest, lent by Paavo Nurmi and Charley Hoff during the past two seasons.

Even when Paul Harrington, the blonde ex-valedictorian from Notre Dame, swept gracefully to a new world's record in the pole vault the other evening, the crowd just gave a short bark of appreciation and settled back to betting upon its individual interests.

Alan Helffrich, establishing once again his place in the van of American middle distance runners, and Lloyd Hahn, thrusting the unicorn of the B. A. A. to victory in spectacular miles, lack the color of a single Finn.

It is fortunate, therefore, that we are soon to see another fleet son of Abo, now of Sweden, in competition against the best in America. Edvin Wide, the Swedish school teacher, who gave an exhibition in Newark this week, will be ready for a special race against Hahn and any others on March 17, when the K. of C. hold their games.

Wide must fulfill all the fables of his greatness if he hopes to take the measure of young Mr. Hahn, who right now comes close to being the world's greatest miler.

Alan Helfrich, Johnny Gibson, Ray Robertson and Vincent Lally have been named as the four starters in the Muermeyer 500, which is the feature event of the New York A. C. games.

Challenges Increase.

New York, February 12.—(AP)—The Davis cup challenge list was increased to 12 nations today with entries from Switzerland and South Africa, the United States Lawn Tennis association announced. Both teams will play in the European zone elimination tests.

Pyle May Have Team Of All-American Pros

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, February 12.—Along the trail that Suzanne Lenglen and her troupe blazed across the country, professional tennis, with American stars replacing the volatile French girl in the spotlight, will have become a permanent feature of national sport before the end of the year.

Vincent Richards, male star of C. C. Pyle's traveling circus which completed its American tour today, makes the above prediction unreservedly.

Bill Pickens, sports impressario who has been feeling the public pulse and handling barnstorming trips for a quarter of a century, and who helped coddle Suzanne during the recent tennis tour of Pyle's troopers, backs up Richards' assertion.

And Mary K. Browne, one of the greatest sportswomen in the United States, who has a tender feeling for an amateur standing in golf even though she has turned pro in tennis, agrees with the others that professional tennis has proved a practical, paying proposition in this country.

Suzzane, who recovered sufficiently from her attack of tonsilitis to play in Hartford, is leaving the United States a week from today. Then, for the time being her connection with American professional tennis comes to an end.

Tilden May Enter.

There is every likelihood that "Big Bill" Tilden, seven times in succession ranking tennis player of the United States, will replace Mlle. Lenglen as star attraction of the professional game this year.

Tilden already has signed contracts with the Metro-Goldwyn Film corporation, which makes his amateur standing dubious.

But the elongated Philadelphian is expected to come right out with a professional tennis program of his own next fall.

"Big Bill" probably won't play under the Pyle banner. As an opposition attraction, his matches against crowds—as tennis goes. If Tilden were a member of the Pyle brigade, his matches with "Vinnie" would be under suspicion.

Mary K. Browne and Richards may shortly be seen together in vaudeville, until the time is ripe for more tennis exhibitions.

"Vinnie" has a pleasing stage manner, and could swing the three-a-day alone, or would be a great partner for the little California girl whose personality assures her of a stage success.

There will be an effort to enlist Anderson, the great Australian player, in next season's professional match, and a contest between him and Richards would be a real drawing card in the Antipodes, as well as on the Pacific coast.

No Tours Necessary.

Those who believe in the future of professional tennis say that it need not neccssarily be conducted along the lines of the Lenglen tour.

More probably big matches will be arranged from time to time with no special itinerary or "barnstorming" aspect to the arrangements.

Suzanne Lenglen, as a trail blazer, carried interest in Tennis, or at least curiosity concerning herself and the game as she plays it, into the wilderness. Whatever she cost, the French girl enabled Pyle and Pickens to sound out sentiment in cities where there was little tennis interest before their arrival.

Richards will continue to be the keystone of Pyle's tennis plans.

Vinnie Is Busy.

"Vinnie" just now is busy hurling verbal brickbats at the United States Lawn Tennis association, which is pretending to ignore them. Richards declared Wednesday that his friend, "Big Bill" Tilden, really is a "pro," having made a "good thing" out of the amateur game for eight years. He predicted that Tilden will quit as an amateur before the end of the year.

Tilden himself naturally would not confirm the fact that he has an eye on the professional game, because as matters stand at present "Big Bill" is working hard with an eye to success at Forest Hills and Germantown this year. One more year as national singles champion and Davis cup defender would enhance the Philadelphian's value as a "pro."

Julian Myrick and other amateur tennis heads admit that they deplore professional tennis because of inroads it makes on the game as controlled by the Lawn Tennis association and as an amateur sport.

With Pyle, Richards, Tilden, Mary Browne and others lined up on one side and Myrick, Mersereau, Hardy and Ward on the other, the current year probably will see a "show-down" as to whether professional tennis really can exist in this country without a ballyhoo artist and a Suzanne Lenglen.

Dodge Basket Tournament Set

Eastman, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—The annual Dodge county basketball tournament for boys and girls will be held in the indoor court of the Eastman High school Friday and Saturday, February 18 and 19. A holiday will be declared for all of the schools in the county to allow teams to compete. This tournament promises to be the largest of its kind ever held in this section.

The following schools have entered teams in the tournament: Chauncey, Rhine, Sand Grove, Union High, Dodge High, Empire, Jay Bird, Cross Roads, Antioch, Roddy and Chester High school.

Casting Championship Is Won by W. Williams

Orlando, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—Walter Williams, of Oakland, Fla., won the all-around championship trophy in the final event of the southern states casting tournament here this afternoon. At the end of the eighth cast in the final event, Mr. Willman was tied with L. J. Hurst, of Indianapolis, but forged into the lead on the next three casts. The final score was Willman, 28, Hurst, 30, and Sterling Moulton, of Geneva, Ohio, 43.

The closeness of the battle has never been equaled before, according to Mr. Hurst, who is vice president of the National Scientific Anglers' association.

Van Wie Becomes Woman's National Golfing Threat

St. Augustine, Fla., February 12.—(AP)—Miss Virginia Van Wie, 17, of Chicago, who made her debut in national golf circles here last year by carrying Miss Glenna Collett to the nineteenth hole in the final round of the Florida east coast championship and then beating her in a sensational finish, will begin a campaign here next week which golf experts believe will establish her as a contender for the national woman's title.

After winning practically every winter tournament in the south last year she went north and changed her swing. The result was a poor showing in the major northern tournaments. Coming back south to the winter home of her parents at Deland, this year she went to D. E. Miner, veteran professional, who had taught her to swing her first club and he smoothed out her swing. She now is hitting them straight and far.

Miss Van Wie, weighing 140 pounds and endowed with a strong body, has been playing for several years under careful teachers, who consistentlly have developed a naturally compact swing. She pivots very little in making shots but gets good distance, nevertheless. Golf experts say she has no superior in iron play in this country or abroad. Her irons go high and long, dropping without a roll. She is not as good as Miss Collett with wooden clubs but is vastly superior with irons, professionals who have observed the two play say. Miss Van Wie's best game is her short one. She chips with deadly accuracy and seldom is short on a run-up or a putt.

In last year's round with Miss Collett Miss Van Wie was confronted with a dead stymie on the fourth. She was one down. Taking a niblick she hopped the ball into the cup five feet away for a win to square. From that point on she never was headed.

Placid and calm after the manner of Dutch ancestors, Miss Van Wie possesses a natural disposition for golf. Phlegmatic and easy going, she has no temper to conquer and nothing bothers her, either in practice or in facing Miss Collett in tournament play.

Miss Van Wie recently set a new course record for women on the difficult Ormond links.

The Chicago youngster will begin her tournament campaign next week when she faces a hard field in defense of her title as Florida woman's champion. The following week she will compete in the south Atlantic championship at Ormond. The first week in March she will defend the title she took from Miss Collett last year in the Florida east coast tournament.

Dreyfuss To Wed.

Pittsburgh, February 12.—(AP)—The engagement of Sam Dreyfuss, secretary of the Pittsburgh National league baseball club, and son of the owner, Barney Dreyfuss, and Miss Carolyn Wolf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wolf, of Paragould, Ark., was announced here today. The wedding will take place after the conclusion of the 1927 pennant race.

Dominance Among Straight Eights

TWO years ago, with the coming of the Hupmobile Eight, an alert public quickly sensed the fact that here at last was an eight of new and sound simplicity—

An eight lavishly generous in miles-per-gallon; distinguished in smoothness and soft silence.

So Hupmobile quickly became the largest selling straight-eight in the world; making complete conquest not only of its own market, but taking unto itself large sections of new markets beyond.

All this will be plain to you, the first time you drive this Eight.

You will find yourself asking where else on earth you could find such super-smoothness, such surpassing ease, such a wealth of power with such a finished manner of turning it into performance.

There is a difference between this Eight and any six; and it is that final degree of distinguished performance which is bringing to the Hupmobile Eight, scores and hundreds who had thought the higher-priced six the finest car they would ever drive.

Fourteen Distinguished Body Types—priced from $1945 to $5795 f. o. b. Detroit, plus revenue tax.

Body Designers Use Cheat Lines.

Automobile bodies are made to look lower and longer by the use of cheat lines, lowness can be expressed by a single moulding that runs all around the body and may extend across the hood to the radiator; also by a moulding at the body sill, either continued through the body or ending at the wheel base, and the wider the moulding is the lower and longer the entire design appears.

Another governing factor in expressing lowness is the crown or curvature, of the roof. A crown of five to six inches, with proper curvature across the roof, takes away the bulky appearance that a heavy crowned roof sometimes has. The appearance from the rear is improved by dropping the rear corner to offset the height due to the springs when the car is not fully loaded. Size and proportion of the windows have a place also in altering the apparent proportions of a car. If the glass is wider than it is high, it makes the body look lower and longer.

Low cars, good proportion in design, harmony in exterior finish and comfortable seating will be governing factors in public buying, and simplicity will be one of the finer trends of the future. The chasis engineer will have to come to the aid of the body designer if more comfort and better appearance are to be produced. Steering wheels and pedals should be placed farther forward, adjustable front seats must be developed and some way should be devised to avoid the kick-up of the chasis frame at the rear and the life of the rear springs when there is not a full load in the rear seat. These factors now limit the body designer in creating proper body proportions, good appearance and comfortable seating. Pastel shades are coming into vogue in external finish and will be used more than ever because of their softness.

The commercial car department out at the John Smith company's place is certainly alive with activity these days. Since joining their staff about a month ago, George Hops, Jr., a well-known commercial car man in Atlanta, has instilled just the necessary punch that has started them on their way up toward the leaders in the light delivery line here.

The much anticipated NEW HUDSONS are here, and it must be said that none of the nice things that have been broadcast regarding this new car were the least bit exaggerated.

With its new graceful hood and body lines and some brand new engineering features, a reputed speed of over a hundred miles per hour, this car should keep HUDSON high in the ranks of motordom.

We have just been advised that our old friend, Joe Felder, who for the past few years has been "trouble shooter" for the Willys-Overland company here, has been appointed to their retail sales staff.

Now if Joe gives half the attentive service to sales prospects he did to service clients we'll say they've got a whooping good man.

J. C. "Jim" Reynolds (who will be remembered as an old University of Georgia football player) after spending the past year in the real estate business in Atlanta, has returned to his old love, the CHRYSLER. According to the sales board out at Harry Sommers he is celebrating his homecoming with a deluge of sales.

The Atlanta dealers have certainly educated the public into buying good rebuilt automobiles.

Registration reports so far this month show a remarkably large increase in the number of used car sales over the same period last year and is indicative of the wisdom of the Atlanta dealers in making their USED CAR policies the foundation of confidence.

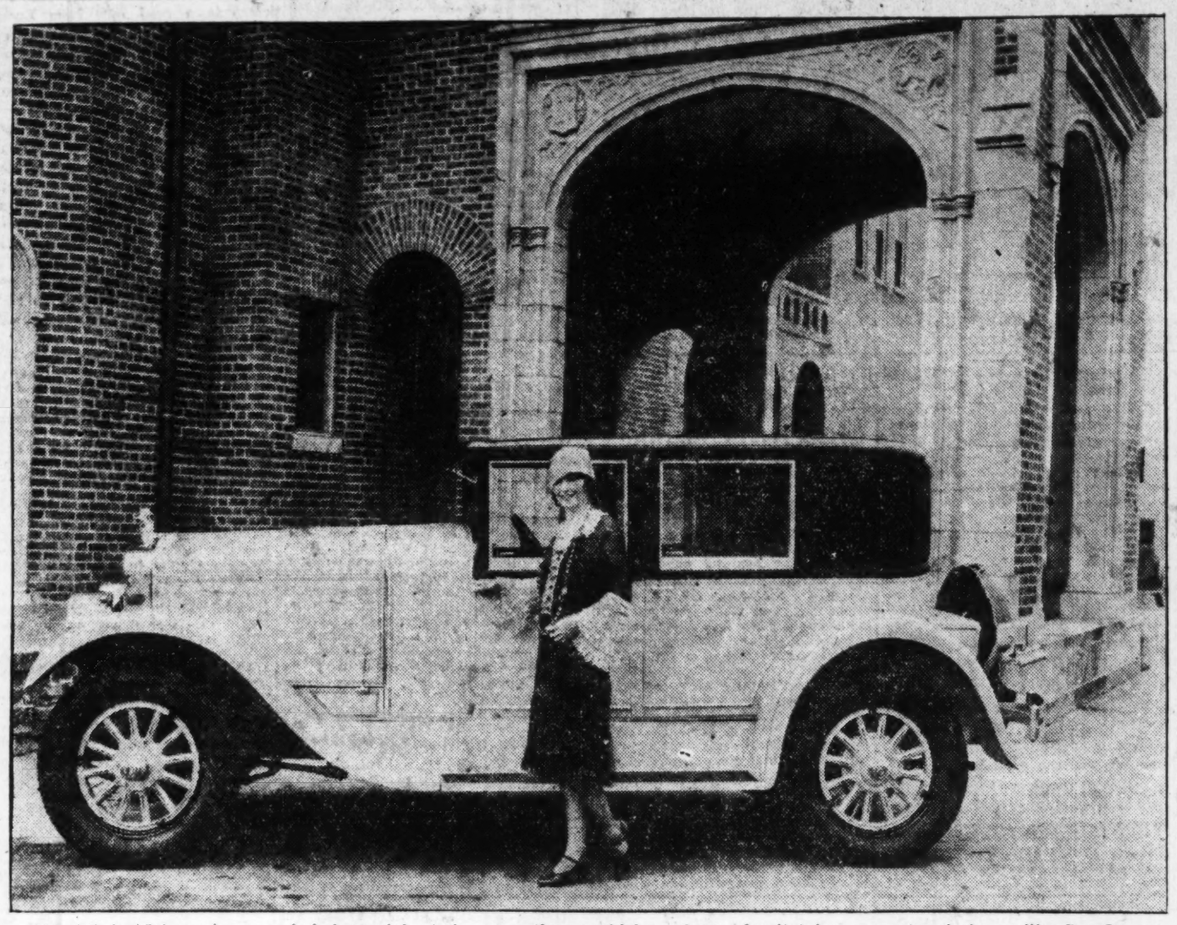

Used cars sold on the Atlanta dealers plan have removed the bugaboo.

Beauty That Only 1927 Could Offer

Franklin's 25th anniversary is being celebrated as no other could have been, for it takes a master designer like De Causse and the very latest 1927 ideas of European and American design to create a masterpiece like this new pandem sport sedan. But with all its inspiring beauty this latest Franklin offering sacrifices none of the good old American idea of roomy comfort. It's low and racy and has the snap and style that makes an ideal background for Mrs. Gwendolyn Bradham, who was tricked into this unpremeditated pose by The Constitution photographer.

Bridge Building Program Between Atlanta and Gulf Coast Progressing Rapidly

Projects Between Pensacola and New Orleans Rapidly Eliminating Heavy Toll Charges.

BY O. J. WILLOUGHBY.
Editor, Constitution Highway Dept.

While motorists are looking with favor upon the rapid progress being made in road and bridge construction in the territory covered by The Constitution's motorlog of the Gulf Coast section, the communities being directly served by these new projects are revealing in the anticipation of early realization of a ferry free highway from Pensacola to New Orleans.

W. A. Stannard operating one of The Constitution's pathfinder cars, now in this territory, reports rapid strides, particularly in the bridge building programme along the Gulf coast from Pensacola to New Orleans, where bridges just completed, under construction or contracted for call for total expenditures in excess of $5,000,000.

The new bridge across Mobile Bay, costing about half the above figure, is the greatest single project. In addition to reducing toll fees it will greatly speed up traffic that has heretofore been forced to wait for ferry schedules that were none too satisfactory. Of next importance from the point of view of the motorist is the several spans now open between Bay St. Louis, Miss., and New Orleans, that reduce the driving time several hours and toll costs several dollars.

A new bridge has just been opened across Back bay at Biloxi costing over $300,000, while another between Biloxi and Ocean Springs has been contracted for. The Bay of St. Louis is being bridged between Bay St. Louis and Pass Christian and is promised to motorists within the year, as are bridges across Pascagoula Bay, Perdido and Escambia rivers.

Permits have recently been granted to build bridges across Lake Ponchartrain north of New Orleans, and across the Mississippi river just south of New Orleans. It is stated in New Orleans that the two projects will exceed $20,000,000. The former is to be built by a syndicate, while the latter is to be built by the New Orleans Public Belt commission.

Bid for Tourist.

In addition to these bridge projects Mr. Stannard reports a steady continuation of the development program of the Gulf coast section by hotel, resort and commercial interests. Chamber of commerce officials along the Gulf coast are enthusiastic over new improvements in rail facilities, the entree of the Alabama Power company in that section, and the rapid development of pecan and Satsuma groves, not to mention the expansion of truck farming and the sea food and vegetable canning industries.

The entire Gulf coast, including Pensacola and New Orleans, is making a strong bid for tourists, both winter and summer. The several chambers of commerce, the Mississippi Gulf Coast club and the railroads are cooperating in a publicity campaign of national scope.

Several million dollars have been invested in new hotels opened to the public this season. Chief among these are the Edgewater Gulf and the Trivoli at Biloxi and the Markham at Gulfport. The long established resort hotels along the coast from Ocean Springs to Bay St. Louis are reporting an excellent business.

suspended animation, due to the fact that it is such a great strain on his system.

Terry Turner, general publicity agents for Loew interests, and probably other officials of the company will be present for the demonstration. Newspaper representatives from New Orleans, Birmingham and Memphis have been invited to be present.

Manager James is now engaged in finding a suitable place for the temporary burial of the fakir. In addition to this public demonstration, Bey will appear on the stage at Loew's with each performance with other demonstrations.

OWNERS RESPONSIBLE FOR MANY THEFTS

BY C. W. CHURCHILL,
General Sales Manager, Buick Motor Company.

A huge yearly saving in automobile insurance rates can be effected by automobile owners if they will heed the warning of insurance companies which appears in unmistakable terms in the 1927 auto rate manual. Two significant changes are found: an increase in the theft insurance rates and elimination of credit for approved locking devices. The Western Auto Underwriters' conference states through its secretary manager that the new manual will go into effect February 14. It is entirely up to the automobile owner as to whether or not these new and drastic rules will prevail in 1928, since it is the owner rather than the insurance company who sets the rates.

Locks are almost useless against the professional thief, who, like a safe-cracker, operates when he is sure that he will not be disturbed for several hours. He can steal any car ever built if given enough time. However, statistics show that a large majority of automobile thefts are committed by non-professional thieves of the joy-rider type, who almost invariably select the car which is easiest to drive away with the minimum loss of time. Such thieves are interested only in gaining free transportation for a few hours, after which they usually abandon the car. They often wait in front of a large building for an unwary driver, whom they see leave his car without locking it. It is at this time that the theft is committed.

This type of thief will not as a general rule bother with locked cars, since the time element is all-important. He waits for an opportunity to steal an unlocked car and is away in a flash as soon as the owner has turned his back.

It is to prevent just such losses as this that automobile companies build locks into their cars. Yet large numbers of car owners are in the habit of leaving the car unlocked while away for a few minutes, and it is on such occasions that the theft is most likely to occur. This carelessness is costing the American motorist enormous sums yearly in unnecessarily high insurance rates. These rates are not fixed by the insurance companies; they are fixed by the automobile owner. If thefts could be reduced in number, there would be a corresponding reduction in the cost of insurance.

It is not alone the loss of the car or the damage it might suffer before being eventually recovered which keep the rates sky-high. Many an owner has forced his fellow drivers to pay a repair bill on his car by claiming damages from theft which he is himself responsible for. This is all included in the cost of insurance. Then to these expenses must be added the extra cost incurred in investigating a larger number of adjustments, all of which must be included in the rates.

The small effort necessary to lock the car when leaving it even for a few minutes would be repaid many times if automobile owners would observe this precaution. Even though the car is stolen and eventually recovered, and all damages are repaired to the best of the ability of expert mechanics, there is the chance that the treatment which the car received at the hands of a thief will leave it permanently crippled to the extent that no repairs short of a complete rebuilding will make it right. It is sometimes extremely difficult to obtain as complete adjustment as this, since it is manifestly impossible to prove the extent of liability on the part of the insurance company in such a case.

Many automobile companies, Buick among them, take extra precautions to aid in the recovery of stolen cars by an intricate system of serial numbers, some of which are secret. Through them Buick has been able to recover many lost cars and bring about the arrest of the thief. But the owner of the stolen car is bound to suffer some loss. No matter how much he pays for insurance, the automobile owner will continue to take these losses as long as he neglects to take ordinary precautions against theft.

104 GENERALS IN FRANKLIN ARMY

One hundred and four salesmen, each of whom sold during the year 1926 Franklin cars ranging in value from $45,000 to $145,000, were awarded titles of general and paid cash bonuses that amounted in some instances to more than $1,000 in the Franklin Automobile company's 25th anniversary sales contest, the final winners in which were just announced

Two of the men, Wallace L. Wilcox, of Providence, R. I., and Philip Orr, of Hollywood, Cal., succeeded in making individual sales of more than 52 cars each during the 12 months of the contest, winning through the feat membership in the exclusive Car-a-Week club of the Franklin sales organization.

Organization of the contest was moddeled on regular army lines, the country being separated with regard to populations. Each salesman started the year 1926 as a rookie with a certain quota varying with his division that he was required to average every three months. Promotions ranged through the ordinary army grades from corporals up through captains, colonels, brigadiers, major generals and generals.

Advance in grade was attained only through making a specified number of sales. Special bonuses were paid for reaching the rank of captain before June 30, for leading in the quarterly totals, for highest percentage of sales to former water-cooled car owners and for becoming a general before December 31.

New York state salesmen won the greatest number of generals commissions, with Ohio following a close second and Pennsylvania, California, New Jersey and Illinois trailing in the order named.

Georgia that will afford them plenty of action either in the field or on the stream.

A proposition of this kind does seem a fine thing and only goes to show how close the present-day dealer and his patrons really are.

We are glad to see our friend, Earnest Andrews, back on the job and able to cuss and take nourishment. Flue, fever and what not can't keep a good man down.

Perhaps one of the busiest automobile men in Atlanta is Warren Davis, out at the Ford plant. Now you will naturally ask: "What in the world could keep a plant man busy?" Well just this: Warren has the job of scheduling, or rather designating the number and model of each car this plant must assemble each day. Well that's not so much! Huh! His real worry is supplying the Atlanta Ford dealers with enough cars and the kind they want.

REMARKABLE RECORD FOR NEW ESSEX

An average speed of 53.8 miles an hour for 24 continuous hours was hung up by one of the new type Essex super-sixes on the Culver City, Cal., track, according to official word received here by the Goldsmith-Becker company, Hudson-Essex distributor.

This test, according to C. H. Becker, was completed by Walter M. Murphy, the Los Angeles distributor, and was officially observed and scored by Los Angeles newspapermen and by the Western Union. After the Essex had dashed off its 1,291 miles on the track, it completed a trip up Mt. Wilson and return, and was placed for display in the distributor's Los Angeles showroom.

"When this test was undertaken," said Mr. Becker, "the program was simply to equal the 50-miles-an-hour average which has been promised by the Hudson organization for the Essex super-six. To be safe, this speed was somewhat exceeded early in the 24-hour run, so that even when fog and a damp track handicapped the latter part of the run, the average was substantially better than had been planned.

"Such a test takes more out of a car than 10 times the mileage under usual driving conditions, yet the car was immediately started on the Mt. Wilson climb, which involved entirely different operating qualities. No difficulty at all was experienced in either part of the test. The top speed made on the track was around 63 miles an hour.

"We consider that this test backs up our statement that the Essex super-six is the most enduring Essex ever built. The old Essex 'four' was admittedly a remarkable car, yet it never equalled the performance just completed at Culver City. At the Indianapolis races, even the cars—though their speed is much higher—operate only a total of 500 miles as against this Essex's 1,291. This record was made, too, not with a stripped car, but with a regulation Essex sedan.

"Our Los Angeles distributor, Mr. Murphy, declares that he has seen many tests run at Culver City, but that never has a motor car finished more successfully or in more perfect mechanical condition than this Essex super-six. No mechanical changes or adjustments whatever were made during the run, and the car was running smoothly and easily at the finish."

SNOWFALL DELAYS OFFICERS SEEKING WARRING INDIANS

Albuquerque, N. M., Febuary 12.—(AP)—A snowfall of 6 to 8 inches last night has delayed the Indian officers who are attempting to verify reports of a conflict between cowboys and Navajo Indians, the Crown Point agency believes. No word has been received from the officers, who are said to be working in a remote section about 70 miles from the agency.

The sheriff's office at Bernalillo also had no word from the sheriff and his deputy who went into the country from a different direction.

THREE NEW SALES ZONES FOR CHEVROLET

Reflecting increased sales activity under the 1927 sales program, the Chevrolet Motor company has just announced the opening of three new zone sales offices located at Columbia, S. C., Salt Lake City, Utah, and Richmond, Va., making a total of 37 zone sale offices now operating.

Possibilities of increased sales of Chevrolet automobiles in the territory embraced in the new zones are such that it was vitally necessary to create new zone headquarters, with adequately increased staffs, to handle the business, according to C. E. Dawson, assistant general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor company.

The new zone offices will supervise more closely the activities of field forces and Chevrolet dealers. Offices will be supervised by zone sales managers, with an assistant and the necessary clerical force to maintain proper records. The opening of the new offices is in line with the Chevrolet Motor company's policy of concentrating more closely on districts where past sales indicate a rapidly growing market.

Following are the changes and appointments made in the various sales zones and regions: H. L. Horton, assistant regional sales manager of the Atlantic Coast region at Tarrytown, N. Y., becomes regional sales manager at Tarrytown, succeeding D. E. Ralston, who becomes regional sales manager of the Middle West region, with headquarters at St. Louis, Mo.; E. W. Fuhr, regional sales manager at St. Louis, becomes Pacific Coast regional sales manager at Oakland, succeeding F. M. Coats, resigned; R. L. Myers, assistant regional manager at St. Louis, becomes zone sales manager at New York city, succeeding G. H. Schmidt, who is transferred to the Atlantic Coast regional office at Tarrytown, to assist Mr. Horton; W. E. Holler, city sales manager at Los Angeles, Cal., becomes assistant regional manager at St. Louis; L. M. Dreves, zone sales manager at Los Angeles, becomes zone sales manager at St. Louis, succeeding W. J. Burns, who becomes zones sales manager at Oakland, Cal.; G. H. Wallace, zone sales manager at Oakland, assumes a similar position at Los Angeles; E. E. Jones, sales manager of associate zone at Richmond, Va., operating under the Baltimore zone office, now heads the new zone office at Richmond; C. G. Smith, zone sales manager at Little Rock, Ark., becomes zone sales manager at Memphis, Tenn., replacing T. J. Burns, resigned; M. B. Roys, city sales manager, Chicago, becomes zone sales manager at Little Rock; P. A. Watson, sales manager of sub-zone at Columbia, S. C., operating under the Charlotte, N. C., zone office, becomes sales manager of the new zone at Columbia; C. B. Spraker, sales manager of sub-zone at Salt Lake City, operating under the Denver zone office, becomes sales manager of the new zone office at Salt Lake City.

HIGH SPEED FROM WHIPPET SIX

In presenting the new line of Whippet sixes, Willys-Overland engineers have developed a motor for this group of cars capable of high speed and sufficient power to mount the steepest grades in high gear without straining the motor.

The engineers declare that the line of construction followed in the Whippet six motor is along the same principles of the lighter Whippet, a compact power plant capable of a sustained speed of 60 miles an hour and better. The speed and power performance of the Whippet six, they assert is bound to prove revolutionary in the light six clissification as the original Whippet did in the four-cylinder group last June.

Construction units of the Whippet motor are cited by the factory engineers in pointing to the speed development of the six-cylinder motor. It has a bore of three inches and a stroke of four inches with a piston displacement of 169.6 cubic inches. The rated energy as 21.6 horsepower, but a maximum development of 40 horsepower is reached. The pistons are of lightweight cast iron.

Willys-Overland officials declare that the new Whippet will easily reach a speed of 60 miles an hour and claim that the sturdy construction of the car throughout is such that a high rate of speed may be maintained without working injuries to the car or creating a strain.

The speed development of the Whippet six is due not only to the type of motor and its performance, but to the Whippet style of body and chassis construction, and the general low lines throughout. The Whippets are built with a low center of gravity, thus adding to the speed and power development. With this type of body the weight is low to the ground giving it unusual road stability. The streamline effect of the body, with a narrow radiator acting as a windbreaker, is another aid in reaching a speed not possible in light sixes built along other lines.

In the development of the Whippet six power plant, Willys-Overland officials see a rising demand from the motoring public for this type of motor.

NEW CLOSED CAR FOR DODGE LINE

Dodge Brothers, Inc., announces the addition of a new sedan to the present line of closed cars. It is called the Special All-Purpose sedan, and is designed especially for the man who needs a car which can be used in the day time for business and at night for recreation.

The new car is unique in that, while it is to all appearances a standard production sedan, it can be quickly made over into an ideal commercial vehicle suitable for carrying light merchandise, salesman's samples, tourists' luggage or other articles.

When used as a passenger car it presents a roomy and attractive interior. It is upholstered in deep, comfortable, Spanish grain, hand-buffed, genuine leather that can be easily cleaned and has excellent wearing qualities.

Conversion into a business car is accomplished easily and quickly as it is only necessary to open a spacious, snug-fitting door in the rear to permit removal of the cushions. With these out, a hinged, steel braced floor can be dropped forward, affording perfect protection for the carpet on the sedan floor and giving a load space 44 inches wide and 48 inches long. The false floor and aluminum skirted upholstery eliminate the possibility of marring the interior.

A heavy, nickel-plated bar, mounted on the spare tire carrier brackets, protects the gasoline tank and facilitates loading and unloading heavy commodities. The spare tie is mounted well forward on the left running board, permitting ready opening of the front door on the driver's side.

The unique arrangement of the Special All-Purpose sedan allows loading and unloading through the side doors of the rear compartment as well as through the rear door. The arrangement is especially convenient when the car is loaded with a number of articles, some of which are not readily accessible for unloading through the rear door.

The uses to which this unique type of car can be put are practically unlimited. The salesman selling from samples finds it ideal for his purpose—a commercial vehicle in business hours and a pleasure sedan for his leisure time. He is able to cut his automobile investment in half because of the double purpose of this car.

Tourists find in the compartment at the rear an excellent place to carry their luggage on long motor trips as it makes it easy to carry even trunks or complete camp equipment.

The merchant whose delivery requirements are limited also finds the Special All-Purpose sedan admirably fitted to his needs. The car is of great value to farmers, who, instead of driving a slow moving truck to town with their lighter produce, can make the trip much more quickly and conveniently with this type of sedan.

Because of its greater utility the Special All-Purpose sedan has a higher resale value than the ordinary pleasure car.

G. O. P. IN KENTUCKY ADOPTS PRIMARY PLAN

Louisville, February 12.—(AP)—The republican state central committee, in session here this afternoon, voted 25 to 6 in favor of a state primary to be held next August 6 for the purpose of selecting candidates for state offices. It has been a practice in the past to select candidates on the convention floor.

HUPP '8' WINS ARGENTINE CONTEST

Traveling over 1,000 miles at an average speed of 55 miles per hour, a Hupmobile eight set what is believed to be a new stock car record for high speed driving over a long distance. The car, driven by Antonio Gaudino, Argentine racer, won first place in a road race from Buenos Aires via Rosario to Cordobia and return. This race, always of considerable importance, attracted unusual interest this year because of the large number of entries—28 in all.

At the finish of the race the winning driver was enthusiastic over the performance his car gave throughout the race. He was especially pleased with its smoothness and absence of vibration at high speeds which enabled him to take full advantage of the open stretches. Also, its perfect balance and efficient spring suspension made it possible to maintain a good speed on curves and even on the many hazardous turns.

"We are especially pleased with this Hupmobile victory over such a large field," says Fred B. Sides, Hupp export manager, in commenting on the race. "Although we have not emphasized high speeds in the past we have always known the car was capable of as high an average as is possible with other cars. And this is true for any distance. Furthermore, the three cars that trailed the winner were American-made six-cylinder cars of reputed high speeds. To obtain a 55-mile per hour average it was necessary for the car to travel much of the distance at a rate in excess of 70 miles per hour. The fact that the Hupmobile eight can be driven without strain to either driver or car mechanism is adequately demonstrated by this recent victory in a gruelling 1,000-mile race. Both driver and car are to be commended."

CUT OPEN CHASSIS IN CADILLAC EXHIBIT

Improving upon a feature which has attracted increasing attention since its introduction in 1907, the Cadillac Motor Car company is this year again including in its exhibit a cut-open chassis, the present model being cut away so as to expose more thoroughly than ever before every moving part.

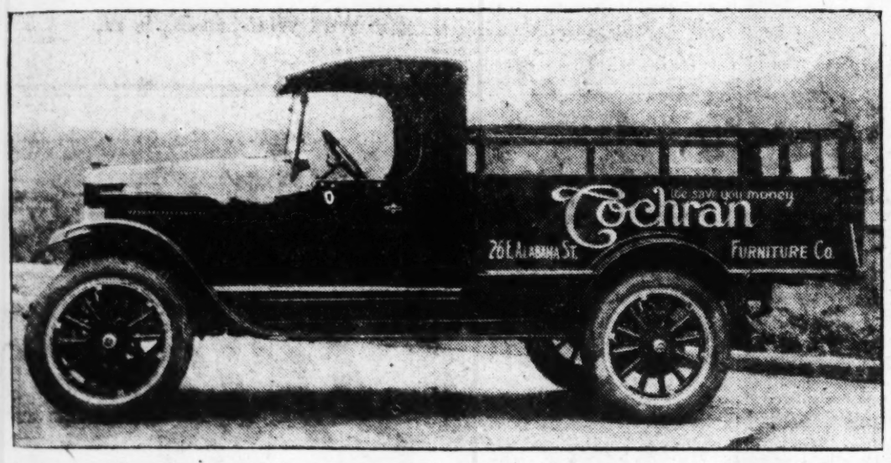

The company was the pioneer in the use of cut-away chassis and the display has been a center of growing interest each succeeding year. Those previously built are today in use for demonstrating purposes at the University of Michigan, the University of California, the Smithsonian institution, Washington, D. C., and many other places. One was on display at the Paris show this year and one has been presented to the technical high school, Charlottenberg, Germany.

At the show not only the technically trained but many who know little of mechanics and to whom the enclosed parts have been a complete mystery, are in the throngs which surround the chassis and listen to the demonstration.

Three new chassis have been built and are being shown in the east, central and western portions of the country. They are finished in black, with the combustion chambers and the inside of the exhaust pipes and mufflers done in red. A storage battery concealed in the gasoline tank provides power so that all parts of the engine, transmission and rear axle assembly may be seen in operation.

From the front of the crankcase to the first universal joint behind the transmission case, nearly one-third of the casing has been cut away. A complete and clear view is given of all working parts, from the oil strainer in the bottom of the crankcase even to the spark plugs and carburetor, which are also shown in cross-section. The four pistons in one block are shown complete with their connecting rods and the bearings which hold them in place on the crankshaft. So great is the cut on the transmission case that every gear is shown, explaining, better than words, the story of Cadillac workmanship and the transmission of power from the engine to the rear wheels.

IMPERIAL VALLEY SHAKEN BY QUAKE

Calexico, Calif., February 12.—(AP) A series of earthquakes, starting after midnight and recurring at intervals of about a half hour until 6 o'clock, rocked the Imperial Valley today.

The first tremor, described as the sharpest of the series, was felt at 12:58 a. m. It caused some damage to buildings here and in Mexicali, across the international boundary line in Lower California. Damage was confined to buildings, under repair or condemned as a result of last New Year's day tremors which caused extensive loss.

The initial disturbance was followed a half hour later by two others which were light and a few seconds apart. Each successive quake diminished in intesity.

El Centro and Brawley, respectively 12 and 29 miles north of here, reported the quakes, the first being the severest. No damage was reported in the two localities.

In Calexico the damage in nearly every instance consisted of plaster being shaken down. The Virginia hotel, condemned as a result of the January 1 quakes, was damaged further. A cornice fell into the street. A few bricks were knocked off the rear wall of the Overland hotel, which was undergoing repairs.

Mexicali reported that bits of adobe plaster were broken from several buildings.

MILE A MINUTE AVERAGED BY CHRYSLER

What is believed to constitute a new record for winter driving over rough, icy roads in the mountain states was recently established by a Chrysler Imperial "80" phaeton in a night trip which covered 109 miles of treacherous going in exactly 109 minutes.

The route taken by this stock Chrysler car between Cheyenne, Wyoming, and Denver, Colo., was over highways on which ice and snow with plenty of mud thrown in made the trip hazardous, yet mile after mile was clicked off at the rate of considerably more than a mile a minute. In fact, mile after mile was covered at speeds of 75, 76, 77 and even up to 82 miles per hour.

The trip was taken in conjunction with airplanes to transport photographs to a Denver newspaper.

The time established by the Chysler Imperial "80," in addition to setting a new motor car record between the two cities, clipped 71 minutes from the scheduled time of the fastest express train between these two points.

The Imperial "80" phaeton was the same Chrysler that last summer established a new record for cross-country driving for 500 miles or more by a standard stock car, when it covered the 702 miles between Kansas City and Denver in the phenomenally short space of 13 hours and 56 minutes. Previous to the Cheyenne-Denver mark this Chrysler car had more than 30,000 miles of service registered on the speedometer.

Blind Man Kills Wrong Woman For Sweetheart

Mexico City, February 11.—Blind Thomas Carranza stabbed a woman to death in a room in the Guadalupe hotel here Friday because he thought she was a former sweetheart, trying to deceive him regarding her identity.

Carranza was mistaken. Not even the police who broke in the door a few moments later knew who she was, and she was too near death to tell.

The story came from Carranza, whom police found on his hands and knees on the floor, groping for the key with which he had locked the door.

Turning his sightless eyes toward his captors, Carranza explained briefly:

"I met her in the barroom. She sat down at my table and spoke. I invited her to drink. We talked. I knew who she was—had we not lived and loved before she left me? But I kept up the pretense that she was a stranger. I invited her to this room. She came, and then I turned the key in the lock and accused her of her faithlessness. When she said I spoke of another, I became furiously angry."

Carranza paused.

"Afterwards," he said, "I couldn't find the key."

The police glanced at each other significantly. They had found it, under the body of the woman.

SUMTER FARMERS SELL TWO CARS OF HOGS

Americus, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Two carloads of hogs sold by Sumter county farmers this week netted the growers $2,952.05, according to H. A. Cliett, county agent. The shipment weighed a total of 30,175 pounds.

The Hall Commission company of Moultrie, purchased both cars.

Another cooperative hog sale is to be held here next Tuesday.

WITH GOLDSMITH-BECKER COMPANY

E. I. WESTMORELAND.

Mr. Westmoreland, who recently joined the sales staff of the Goldsmith-Becker company, local Hudson-Essex distributors, has been connected with the automobile industry in Atlanta for the past 10 years and his achievements have been outstanding. His personality together with a natural ability fits him well for his new line of endeavor.

Man Who Took Calf To Please Wife Is Jailed

Martinsburg, W. Va., February 12. (AP)—Milton Berkowitz, of New York city, was a prisoner of Frederick county, Virginia, authorities today, charged with stealing a calf. Berkowitz claimed it was a prank, but the man who lost the calf charged Berkowitz used force in taking it.

Berkowitz, returning from a honeymoon tour of the south, decided he wanted to take back a souvenir. The complainant said Berkowitz tried to buy the calf, and when he refused to sell, the New Yorker appropriated the animal and made away with it in his automobile. Berkowitz said that later he was forced to give the calf away because he and his wife did not like to travel with it.

Berkowitz was willing to pay for the calf, and the owner was willing to accept the settlement, but the Virginia authorities, who ordered his arrest here, decided to take him back to face a charge of highway robbery.

COW, HOG AND HEN PROGRAM SUCCEEDS IN BEN HILL COUNTY

Fitzgerald, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Two hundred and fifty head of cattle and 500 hogs are killed here each month by local butchers to supply the retail demand, according to a survey made for the city by Dr. A. B. Griner, who is advocating a system of meat, milk and food inspection for the city.

It is estimated that local butchers pay out over $100,000 annually to Ben Hill county producers for cattle and hogs. In addition to the local consumption, Ben Hill farmers have been shipping cows and hogs by the carloads to packing houses in Georgia and Florida this past season. Florida has also furnished a good market for poultry, of which thousands of pounds are shipped every month.

The county is developing into a poultry center, large poultry farms dotting the immediate section around Fitzgerald, largely supplied with chicks from the local hatchery.

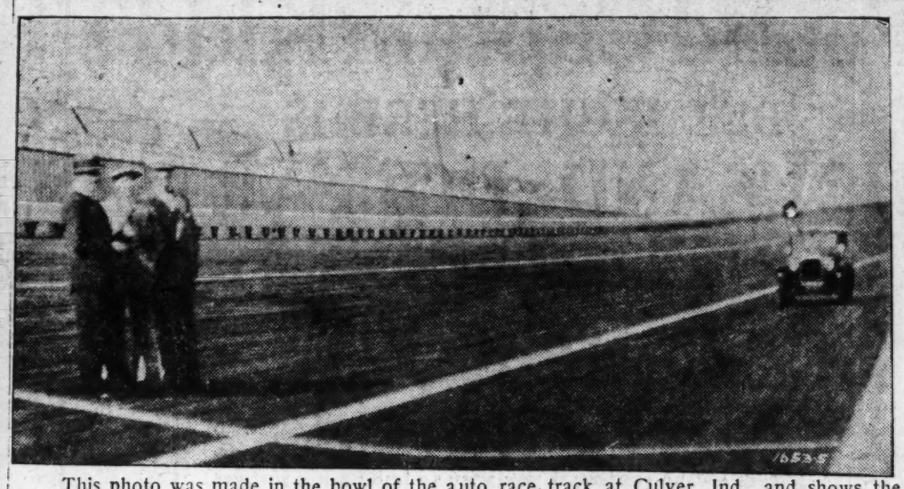

LAND THEFT PLOT SEEN IN THREAT OF NIGHT PROWLER

Chattanooga, Tenn., February 12. (AP)—Terrorized by a night prowler, John Igou, farmer-preacher residing in the north end of this county in a sparsely settled neighborhood, has appealed to the sheriff and a deputy nightly stands vigil at the home. Mystery surrounds the identity and motive of the marauder, who, for the past three weeks has appeared each night at the Igou home, pounded on the door with a heavy club and left notes threatening to kidnap the seven-year-old Igou girl.

Mrs. Igou was attacked on her porch early last Tuesday morning, her screams bringing her husband, when the prowler fled.

Deputy Ed Rickett has been placed at the Igou home and keeps vigil each night. The officer is of the opinion that the miscreant is employed by some person or persons desiring to get possession of Igou's land, said to be very valuable. It is thought the purpose of the night visits is to frighten Igou into disposing of his land, but he has expressed a determination to "stick it out." The threatening notes were written in pencil and in an almost undecipherable hand.

This photo was made in the bowl of the auto race track at Culver, Ind., and shows the new Essex "Super Six" on the long grind to which it was subjected. In this test it averaged over 50 miles per hour for 24 hours and, according to reports, was in almost perfect condition at the finish.

L. F. M. STORE HEAD SEES BETTER BUSINESS

W. B. Jones, general manager of the L. F. M. store, who returned recently from New York, where he attended the annual managers' meeting of the L. F. M. chain stores and received congratulations of company officials for having led the entire southern chain of 10 L. F. M. stores in increased sales during 1926, is optimistic concerning the outlook for the coming year.

"The year 1926 was indeed the greatest since the opening of our Atlanta store, sales surpassing all previous records," Mr. Jones said. "The Atlanta store led the entire chain in increase of sales, both in volume and percentage, which, no doubt, is a convincing fact that Atlanta is the great metropolis of the south. The L. F. M. chain covers practically all the larger cities of the south, having other stores in Birmingham, Montgomery, and Mobile, Alabama; Jacksonville and Tampa, Florida; Macon, Georgia; Knoxville and Winston-Salem."

Mr. Jones feels confident, he said, that the most important factor in the large increase last year was due to a great extent to advertising, giving the public desirable, seasonable merchandise at popular prices. He anticipates the year 1927 being far greater than the past year, due to the fact that this store is better equipped from a service standpoint, being more familiar with the class of merchandise that the general public of Atlanta would want.

The L. F. M. organization has made wonderful progress in the past 10 years in the department chain store field, starting in Montgomery, Ala., in a very small store in the year 1916. The company now has 10 stores covering the principal cities of the south.

LEGION AUXILIARY TO AID CHILDREN

Bainbridge, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—Child welfare work with the children of disabled soldiers of Decatur county will be the main business of the auxiliary of the Bainbridge post, American Legion, for the year, plans incident to the relief having been made at the February meeting of the auxiliary Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Hawthorne, president.

Meetings will be held on the first Tuesday afternoon of each month for 1927.

TEXAS CALENDAR CLERK ADDS SPICE TO SENATE'S WORK

Austin, Texas, February 12.—(AP)—A little fun mixed with legislative business was the idea of Garland Porter, calendar clerk of the Texas senate, and he "got away with it."

Jokes and wise cracks inserted in the calendar by Porter have chased gloom from the corners of the senate chamber and wreathed in grins the faces of the most grouchy or "hard-boiled" of its members. Thereby, Porter has become the official humorist of the upper house.

Some time ago Porter began to write jokes into the daily calendar. Some of them he credited to Aesop, and some he originated himself. The first one caused something of a stir. Some senators frankly said they thought it funny. Pretty "stenos" were more outspoken and said the idea was "cute." So Porter kept it up.

Porter, a student at Texas university, said he started the idea because he thought the senate needed a little fun mixed into its deliberations.

Keith Treasurer Dies.

Medford, Mass., February 12.—(AP) John P. Gorman, 68, since 1913 general treasurer of the B. F. Keith vaudeville circuit, died suddenly at his home here today. He was administrator of the B. F. Keith estate and one of the executors of the estate of A. Paul Keith.

WHEELER CHALLENGES BUTLER'S STATEMENT

New York, February 12.—(AP).—Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, in a statement dealing largely in personalities, today challenged Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University "to make good on his declaration that the eighteenth amendment must come out of the United States constitution," leaving each state to deal separately with the liquor question.

"Dr. Butler's declaration that the eighteenth amendment has no place in the constitution is as amusing as his assumption of the post of spokesman for the white house," the statement said.

Mr. Wheeler declared his belief that neither Dr. Butler "nor any other apologist for the liquor crowd will ever occupy the white house" and as an example of what he declared to be "political astigmatism" he pointed out that the "states cited by Dr. Butler as hopes of the wets, have elected dry governors, senators and other officials."

SANDERS INDICTED IN KERVIN SLAYING

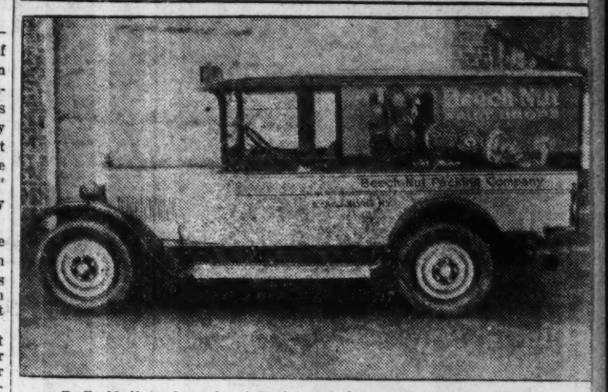

An indictment charging the murder of Henry Sanders, 29, of 630 Stewart avenue, to Tyson Kervin, has been returned by the Fulton county grand jury.

Sanders was shot and almost instantly killed on February 3, near the intersection of Stewart avenue and Glenn street during a pistol duel, while Kervin received a bullet in his right thigh and was taken to Grady hospital. Three shots took effect in Sanders body.

Kervin told police that Sanders, his brother-in-law, instituted the fight after accusing him (Kervin), of having stolen some whisky, the alleged property of Sanders.

Kervin also was indicted on a charge of carrying a pistol without a license.

DEFENSE PLANS COUNTER ATTACK IN MELLETT CASE

Canton, Ohio, February 12.—(AP)—A bitter counteroffensive against the state's case in the trial of Ben Rudner for the murder of Don R. Mellett, crusading Canton editor, is planned by defense counsel when the hearing is resumed Monday.

Details of a fight to have Judge Abram W. Agler rule that the prosecution has failed to establish a case against Rudner, alleged to have hired the gunmen who killed Mellett last July, were being formulated today by Rudner's attorneys.

All the testimony of Steve Kascholk and William Bitzler, the prosecution's aces, has been admitted over objection of the defense with the provision that the court may order it disregarded if a conspiracy against the editor's life is not proven by other testimony.

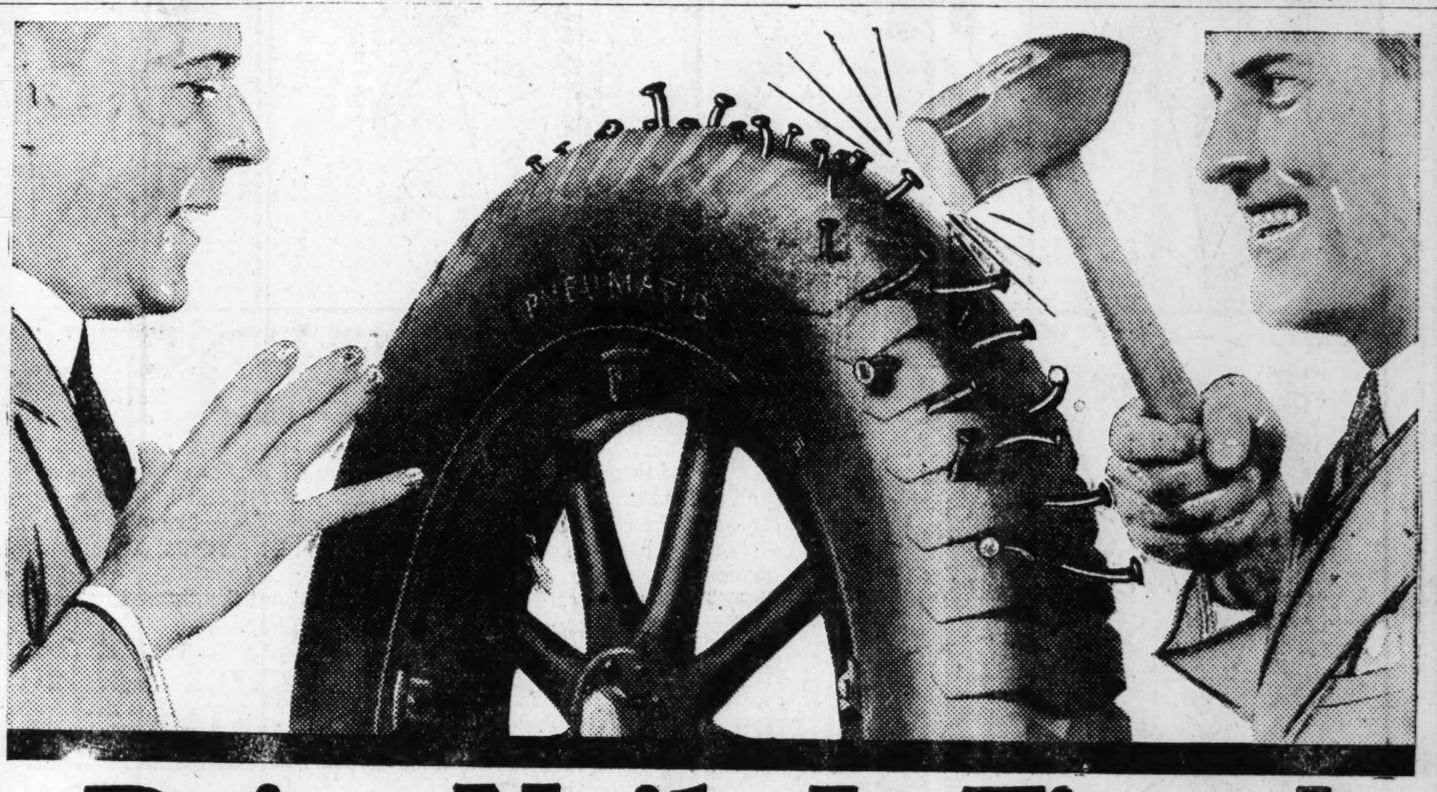

It is expected that the state will rely on an alleged exchange of telephone calls between McDermott and Rudner to establish its charge that a conspiracy existed. And in turn the defense will endeavor to prove that the calls were "framed" by a detective who sought Rudner's arrest.

NEW POTATOES SHOWN BY ARLINGTON FARMER

Arlington, Ga., February 12.—(Special.)—As evidence that growing seasons in southwest Georgia are second to none anywhere, Dr. P. C. Simmons, of Arlington, was exhibiting two sweet potatoes here this week that were grown this year. The tubers were about the size of a hen egg and were of the Porto Rican variety.

In plowing up his crop of potatoes last season one of the vines became covered and took root and it was in this way that the potatoes were grown.

Dr. Simmons has a large patch of the potatoes and figures they will be ready to eat by April 1.

Drive Nails In Tires! —and Make $150 A Week

Simply Pound Nails Into An Old Tire in Front Of Astonished Crowds And Make $10-$18 An Hour! Most Sensational Demonstration You Ever Heard Of. And No Matter How Many Times You Puncture Your Tires—They Can't Leak A Pound Of Air! No Wonder This Amazing Invention Brings Demonstrators and Spare-Time Workers The Biggest Money Of Their Lives!

Mystic Fluid Heals Punctures

987 Punctures Yet Leaks No Air

"I tested out the sample sets you sent me a few days ago and the results were amazing. I drove 987 nails into one tire without the loss of one single pound of air.

"Now I want to sell AIR-STOP. Please send me 100 sets at once and hold four counties for me."

J. W. SIMPSON.

2,000 Miles With 4 Punctures

"I have a friend who drove 2,000 miles with 4 nail punctures. The pressure was just as high at the end of the trip as when he started. This AIR-STOP is the best thing I ever saw."

E. R. MILLER.

IMAGINE being able to drive as many as 987 nails into an ordinary air-filled tire without a single leak! Imagine getting 2,100 miles out of a porous tube that was so bad the owner was going to throw it away! No wonder experts say that AIR-STOP is the most surprising auto discovery of recent times!

Self-Acting—Works While You Drive

AIR-STOP—the amazing new tire fluid—seals punctures automatically while you drive. No matter how many nails you run over, it doesn't make a bit of difference. You just keep spinning along as if nothing had happened. And that isn't all! AIR-STOP not only seals punctures, but slow leaks, valve leaks and porous tubes as well. It even prevents cracked sidewalls and rim cuts and triples tire mileage because it eliminates driving with semi-flat tires, which is ruinous to any casing!

Just think what this marvelous discovery really means. No more changing tires on hot, dusty roads—in driving rain—or on pitch dark nights. No more patching tubes. No more vulcanizing. And think of the economy!

How It Works

AIR-STOP is a simple, harmless fluid you just inject into the tire with a common grease gun. Non-injurious to tube or casing. Actually helps PRESERVE rubber. Never hardens in tire or becomes thin. Does its work equally well in summer or winter—whether the thermometer registers 10 below zero or 100 in the shade! AIR-STOP never fails and a single application lasts the lifetime of any tube!

Wonderful Money Maker

So astonishing is the effectiveness of this new invention that agents and demonstrators everywhere are simply coining money for a few hours' work. Some of their profits are really astonishing. L. B. Watson made $337.00 in two weeks. And J. H. Rosser made $22.95 in 1½ hours! Hundreds of others are doing as well or better—in full or spare time.

All you have to do is hammer nails into an old tire in front of auto owners, crowds on main streets, etc. They simply can't believe their eyes when you pull the nails out and the tire doesn't leak a bit! But you don't have to have a car to make money with AIR-STOP. Just an old casing mounted on a rim for demonstration is all you need to take in $10-$18 an hour. And think of the prospects! EVERY owner is intensely interested—whether he drives a Chevrolet or a Rolls-Royce—because he hates the delay and inconvenience of changing tires.

Free Sample Offer

And now to introduce this amazing invention, the discoverer—Mr. W. S. Hill—offers to send you a full size sample FREE! And more than that, he actually offers to PAY you for your co-operation in testing it, if you are not surprised and delighted with results. Did you ever hear of such an open-handed offer? Of course, we can't afford to continue it indefinitely—and are limiting it to 30 days only. So act at once. Take advantage of this opportunity to see for yourself how astonishing AIR-STOP really is! Clip the coupon now! Mail it today!

$20 to $40 A Day

"I want 50 sets of AIR-STOP right away. It sure sells easy. People will buy it as soon as they see it demonstrated."

A. S. O'REILLY.

$22.50 in Half Hour

"I sell enough AIR-STOP in 30 minutes to make my profit $22.50. I want 25 more sets immediately and please hold my county."

D. H. SCHLEUTER.

$157 in 2 Days

"I want 100 sets. I will sell these in 2 days. I want to tell you that test was great. Every one who saw the test wanted me to fill his tires. I am with you, for I know I can make more money handling AIR-STOP than I ever made before in my life."

A. OTIS.

Stromberg-Carlson Will Take Over Station WHAM; Power To Be Increased

New Control of Rochester Station Announced. Will Seek Hook-up With Chain Stations.

Announcement is made today by the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle and the Rochester Times-Union of the transfer of ownership and operation of broadcasting station WHAM to the Stromberg-Carlson company. The transfer is made with the consent and approval of George Eastman and Dr. Rush Rhees, who were largely instrumental in having the station placed on the roof of the Eastman School of Music when it was opened nearly five years ago. Continuance of the close relations that have existed between the station and the Eastman School of Music and the Eastman theater was a point on which the Stromberg-Carlson company was insistent before it would close the negotiations for its purchase.

W. Roy McCanne, president of the Stromberg-Carlson company, hopes through the operation of the station by this concern, and the cooperation of the community, to give Rochester a bigger place in the radio world.

"The Democrat and Chronicle and the Times-Union," said Mr. McCanne, "deserve a great deal of credit and appreciation for the five years of pioneer work they have done in the broadcasting field. As the result of the splendid programs originating in the Eastman School of Music and the Eastman theater and broadcast through WHAM, additional attention has been called to Rochester as a musical center and broadcasting has enabled these fine programs to be enjoyed by a much larger audience than could otherwise be reached.

"These newspapers recognize that radio broadcasting is outside their field, and desire to be relieved of the ownership and operation of the station. On the other hand radio has become an increasingly important part of our business. We are aware of the importance of good broadcasting and feel an obligation to begin doing our part.

"For some time past we have realized that station WHAM has not had all the advantages of the great improvements that have been developing in broadcasting equipment since this station was established in 1922. We have believed that the power of the station should be increased so that its programs might be heard for greater distances. We have also wished that arrangements might be made to interchange programs over high-grade toll lines with other fine broadcasting stations of the country in one of the chains of the National Broadcasting company, so that WHAM would not only receive from the chain and distribute to radio listeners in this vicinity programs of national interest, but that the programs of such exceptional quality originated here might be made available to listeners in far parts of the country. The excellent programs of the Rochester Philharmonic orchestra, the Rochester Opera company, smaller instrumental groups and vocal and instrumental soloists would be appreciated by listeners everywhere.

Aim for Better Hook-up.

"These are some of our aims in taking over the station. We feel that the station has been a big asset to Rochester and we desire to make it an even greater one. For the present the policy of WHAM will be the same as heretofore, its most important programs originating in the Eastman School of Music and the Eastman theater, the remainder to be received over the present hook-up from Schenectady, Buffalo and Syracuse.

"Our first step towards the improvement of the station will be to purchase and install a Western Electric company thousand-watt transmitter of highest audio quality and have it ready for operation on or before the opening of the school of music next fall. Increasing the power of the station from one hundred to a thousand watts will greatly increase its sending radius.

"As soon as the quality and power of the station has been brought up to the desired point, our effort will be to send out an increased amount of high-grade programs. This will include the broadcasting of as much more of the programs originating in the school of music and the theater as Dr. Howard Hanson, the director of the school, is willing to make available for us. In addition it will be our aim to obtain a better and more complete chain hook-up and to enlarge our scope by bringing to Rochester an increased amount of programs originating in other cities, particularly events of national interest.

"When this wider chain hook-up has been arranged a splendid opportunity will be provided for community cooperation in making available for the outside world the fine musical programs which Rochester is enjoying and the broadcasting of which will carry the fame and reputation of Rochester as a great musical center to the far corners of the country. Undoubtedly there will be many Rochester corporations of national and international range of business who will welcome the chance to share in this mission of spreading the advantages and the attractions of our own city."

Eastman School to Cooperate.

Dr. Hanson was enthusiastic over the opportunities which a broadcasting station of increased power and modern equipment will bring to the community.

"With the abundance of excellent material for radio mroadcasting which we have here," he said, "Rochester should be one of the most important stations in the country. Our musical activities are so broad in scope that we are in a position to provide programs of such various types as the performances of the works of American composers, our new ventures in operatic production, the Rochester Philharmonic orchestra, the Little Symphony, the Kilbourn quartet, various instrumental ensembles and soloists. All are available and would undoubtedly be welcomed by that great army of radio listeners who are clamoring for something a bit better than the average program."

LANDOWSKA PLAYS ON MAXWELL HOUR

New York, February 12.—Promising one of the most unusual programs that has yet entered the realm of radio, station WJZ, New York, has announced that Wanda Landowska, the world's greatest harpsicordist, will be the feature artist on the Maxwell House Coffee concert program Wednesday evening, 8-9 o'clock, Central time, broadcast through stations WBZ, Springfield; WBZA, Boston; KDKA, Pittsburgh; KYW, Chicago; WSM, Nashville; WHAS, Louisville; WSB, Atlanta, and WMC, Memphis.

"The Coffee Cantata" by Bach will be the outstanding selection of a program which will be both antique and modern. Madame Landowska will be supported by Eva Gauthier, American soprano and interpreter of folksong music. The Maxwell House Coffee concert orchestra will accompany.

COLLIER'S REVUE ON AIR TONIGHT

New York, February 12.—St. Valentine's day will be the theme of the next national weekly revue to be broadcast by WJZ and the stations of the National Broadcasting company's blue network, WBZ, KDKA and KYW at 8:30 central standard time on Sunday night, February 13. This will be the second radio presentation on this feature, which is sponsored by Collier's, the National Weekly.

CHURCHES UNITE FOR RADIO SERIES

New York, February 12.—Working in cooperation with the National Broadcasting company the Greater New York Federation of Churches is planning for the year 1927 a program of religious broadcasting larger in scope than anything heretofore attempted by this radio pioneering organization. Being one of the first religious broadcasters of the country the Federation of Churches in New York has had an experience in broadcasting over 1,200 services during the past four years, which is a record probably unprecedented in the United States. The aim of this church federation from the frist was to send out to the people of the country, via radio, a helpful noncontroversial message and sacred music that could be accepted by an audience made up of men and women of all religious faiths.

The Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York, through its managing director, Augustus Nulle, has placed at the disposal of the committee its empire room, from which will be broadcast programs over the Red and Blue circuits. At 2 to 3 o'clock, central time, each Sunday aftenoon a program known as the "Young People's conference" for the youth of the country, will go on the air through WEAF, and at 4:30 to 5:30 o'clock each Sunday evening a "people's radio vespers" will reach the radio audience through WJZ. To both of these broadcasts the public is cordially invited, and the Waldorf-Astoria management is making every effort for their convenience.

MARY LEWIS TAKES AIR AGAIN TONIGHT

New York, February 12.—Mary Lewis, prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera and well-known concert artist, who made her radio debut last season, will broadcast again Sunday night, February 13.

Miss Lewis says her radio debut placed her before the American concert public more quickly and effectively than could have been accomplished in any other way, and believes that a judicious amount of broadcasting is helpful to any singer's success.

"I think radio will never eliminate the concert," said Miss Lewis. "In the final analysis, personality is the thing that counts, and personality can best be felt and 'gotten over' when a person stands in the flesh before an audience."

Miss Lewis' program, beginning at 8:15 central time, follows:

Aria, "Deh, Vieni, Non Tardar," from "Marriage of Figaro," Mosart—Miss Lewis and orchestra.

(a) "Wiegenlied," Bach; (b) "Wohin," Schubert; (c) "Si Mes Vers Avalent Des Ailes," Hahn; (d) "Bergere Est Leger," Weckerlin—Miss Lewis and accompanist.

Aria, "Waltz Song," from "Romeo et Juliet," Gounod—Miss Lewis and orchestra.

(a) "La Colombia," Schindler; (b) "The Night Wind," Farley; (c) "The Second Minuet," Beaty; (d) "Annie Laurie," Old Scotch—Miss Lewis and accompanist.

"Ave Maria," Bach-Gounod—Miss Lewis with violin obligato.

Famous Harp Trio To Broadcast From Atlanta on Monday

Atlanta, Ga., February 12.—The famous Zimmer Harp Trio, known as "Concerts' Greatest Novelty," will be presented over The Atlanta Journal station, WSB, next Monday night, February 14, from 8 to 9, central standard time, under the auspices of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Appearing on the program with the Zimmer Harp Trio will be Miss Erna Korn, contralto, who has scored before large audiences in Carnegie hall and the Hippodrome, New York, and has given several European concerts.

The Zimmer Harp Trio, directed by Miss Nellie Zimmer, is the oldest harp trio in America and is now on its eighth concert tour of American cities. The music of the harp is rather unusual on radio owing to the comparatively few harpists, but it is particularly adapted to broadcasting. The trio will offer a program of tuneful and familiar tunes to appeal to all classes of people.

The Agricultural Foundation sponsors the 8 to 9 hour on WSB each Monday night, in addition to R. F. D. programs for farm folks each Monday, Wednesday and Friday noon. A special feature for Monday night, February 21, will be an old-time radio production, entitled, "Do You Remember?"

MARY GARDEN WILL SING ON FRIDAY

New York, February 12.—The fourth radio program in the 1927 series of the Victor Talking Machine company will be presented on the evening of February 18, through eight stations, by three distinguished artists of concert and opera, assisted by the Victor Concert orchestra. The artists are Miss Mary Garden, soprano, of the Chicago Grand Opera company: Emilio De Gogorza, baritone, and Hans Barth, pianist, Rosario Bourdon, one of the musical directors of the Victor company, will direct the orchestra.

Beginning at 8 p. m., central standard time, the concert will be heard through stations of the "blue" network of the National Broadcasting company, and four affiliated southern stations. These stations are WJZ, New York; WBZ, Springfield and Boson; KDKA, Pittsburgh; KYW, Chicago; WHAS, Louisville, Ky.; WSB, Atlanta; WMC, Memphis, and WSM, Nashville.

The program to be presented by these artists is as follows:

Intermezzo, from "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; "Anitra's "Dance," from "Peer Gynt," Grieg—Victor Concert orchestra under direction of Rosario Bourdon.

"Mother o' Mine," Tours; "In Old Madrid," Bingham-Trotero—Emilio De Gogorza.

"Polish Dance," Scharwenka; "Rustle of Spring," Sinding—Hans Barth.

"Depuis le Jour," from "Louise," Charpentier; "At Dawning," Cadman—Miss Mary Garden.

"Amaryllis," Ghys-Seredy—Victor Concert orchestra.

"Teresita Mia," Nieto; "O Sole Mio," Capurro-di Capua—Emilio De Gogorza.

"Narcissus," Nevin; "Flatterer," Chaminade—Hans Barth.

"At Parting," Peterson-Rogers; "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton," Burns-Spillman—Miss Mary Garden.

ELEANOR PAINTER WILL MAKE RADIO DEBUT WEDNESDAY

Eleanor Painter, the noted musical comedy and operatic star, is the latest addition to the ever increasing ranks of radio performers, states an announcement issued by the theatrical producers, J. J. and Lee Shubert and verified by the National Broadcasting company, incorporated. She will make her American radio debut in a special concert presentation of songs from the operetta, "The Nightingale," in which she is now appearing at the Jolson theater. This feature will be broadcast by WJZ at 6 o'clock, Wednesday night, February 16.

Set Building Made Easy

Operating the Bremer Tully Power Six

BY CHET WORMSER.

Builders of the Bremer Tully Power Six, if they have followed construction details as outlined in these columns recently, will find that the tuning up and operation of the set is extremely simple.

The set that the writer has just completed from parts secured from the Alexander-Seewald company, of Atlanta, "percolated" at the first trial and, with a few simple adjustments, brought in Pacific coast stations clearly.

In addition to power, the set has wonderful selectivity and a tone that can hardly be surpassed. The tandem condensers, with their trimmers, it will be found, are extremely efficient and easily operated, bringing into absolute tune the four coils necessitated by the three stages of radio frequency amplification possessed by this set.

After all wiring has been completed, carefully check all connections by referring to the graphic illustration. Make those corrections which are necessary and then connect a 6-volt "A" battery to the proper terminals and insert the tubes in their respective sockets. Test all tubes as to operation; observe whether they are controlled by the proper rheostat or resistance. Put the "A" positive battery wire to each of the other terminals. If the tubes do not light up except when "A" battery is applied to the proper terminals, it is safe to connect the "B" and "C" batteries. However, if any of the tubes light up it is an indication that something is wrong and a mistake has been made in the wiring. Carefully recheck all connections until the mistake is found. Repeat the "A" battery test and connect the other batteries, the antenna and ground and plug in the speaker.

The receiver should respond as soon as it is placed in operation. In tuning, rotate the dials together and continually "cross" one over the other until a signal is heard. Then proceed to adjust the trimmers as follows: Set the rear trimmer on the right-hand condenser fully enmeshed and then rotate panel trimmer back and forth rapidly as the selector is moved slowly a few degrees to each side of the point of maximum signal intensity. Try to get the position of greatest volume on the front trimmer when it is near its central position. If the position of maximum signal strength does not occur at or near the center point, adjust the rear trimmer until this condition occurs. The front trimmer is especially helpful in tuning in weak signals, and therefore a full range of adjustments must be allowed.

Next balance out the stages of radio frequency amplification. Adjust volume control to greatest volume and disconnect either the positive "A" or negative "A" filament lead of the third radio frequency amplifying tube socket. The signal should still be audible. Then turn the adjusting screw on the balancing condenser next to the socket until the signal is weak or disappears. Now retune the right-hand dial until the signal again is loudest, using also the trimming condenser. Again adjust the balancing condenser until weak or inaudible signals are found. Replace the filament lead and carefully retune the set. Repeat the balancing procedure with the second and first radio frequency tube in order. In adjusting the first and second tubes, detune the third and detector until volume is fairly weak. This will make the point more exact.

With these adjustments completed, the set is ready for operation and should prove a revelation even to the experienced radio fan.

More Power

Only in recent months has the radio public begun to realize the full importance of supplying adequate power to the loud speaker.

When the power tube was first placed on the market, radio buyers were under the impression that MORE POWER meant MORE VOLUME alone. The power tube is, and always has been, concerned with TONE QUALITY. Without a power tube, CX-112 or CX-371, in the last audio stage, your receiver is incapable of delivering modern radio reproduction at its best.

Records Broken Daily In Investment Market

Chicago, February 2.—The boom in the investment market has reached a point where records are being broken almost daily. Financing in January was by far the greatest of any month in the history of this country, and this month has started out at a pace that, if maintained, will eclipse even those unprecedented figures.

An insight into the pace of the present market is furnished by the monthly review and compilation for January made by Lawrence Stern & Co., Chicago investment bankers. Offerings of new bonds and notes to the public last month aggregated $782,811,990.

This is an increase of $195,000,000 over the total of $587,847,320 for January a year ago, an expansion of approximately 33 1-3 per cent. Compared with the previous month, December, 1926, the increase is nearly 42 per cent.

	January 1927	No. of Issues
Real estate	$ 75,710,500	103
Industrial	180,115,000	46
Public utility	209,485,000	36
Railroad	8,896,000	4
Tax exempt	187,711,600	—
Foreign	121,093,890	17
Total	$782,811,990	200

The average yield on new corporate securities at their offering prices continues downward, standing at 6.06 per cent last month, against 6.17 per cent a year ago.

During the year the average yield on new railroad bonds has dropped from 5.37 per cent to 5.18, public utilities from 5.88 to 5.57, industrials from 6.23 to 6.13, real estate from 6.30 to 6.22 and foreign, excluding Canadian, from 7.37 to 7.01.

Average Yield.

This is in line with the upward movement in prices of listed bonds, which have been working forward practically without interruption. In the listed market the average yield on 60 high-grade corporate bonds has dropped from 4.68 per cent in January, 1926, to 4.54 per cent last month.

A summary of the average yields follows:

	January 1927	January 1926	December 1926
Real estate	6.22%	6.30%	6.18%
Industrial	6.13%	6.25%	6.10%
Public utility	5.57%	5.88%	5.75%
Railroad	5.18%	5.37%	4.95%
Average	6.06%	6.17%	6.02%

Lawrence Stern & Co.'s survey comments as follows on the decline shown in the yield of security offerings:

"During the last few years general wages have been the highest of any time in our history. Workers have been able to save a larger percentage of their total income, and much of this surplus has gone into investment channels, increasing greatly the supply of investment funds.

"On the other hand, industry no longer feels the need for large inventories, since the efficiency of the railroads and other factors have permitted the growth of the hand-to-month buying policy. This probably has reduced the demand for funds in relation to the total business of the country.

Commodity Levels.

"Another factor that enters into the trend of yield is the commodity price level. The trend of commodity prices is definitely downward, and probably will continue in that direction for some time to come. Normally, the relationship between yields and commodity prices is a close one. When the prices of goods go down there is a corresponding downward trend in yields, maintaining a balance as regards the purchasing power of the dollar.

"As a result of the plentiful supply of capital, we are now in a seller's market for securities. Funds seeking profitable investment are in excess of the number of new issues being offered. This relationship between supply and demand has produced a lowering of security yields.

"As long as the supply of American investment capital exceeds the demand the trend of yields on investment securities will continue downward."

Last Month's Summary.

A summary of last month's offerings of new investment securities, divided into six classifications and compared with the previous month and a year ago, follows:

	1926 January	Issues No. of	1926 December	Issues No. of

The Day in Finance

Revival of Speculative Interest in Rails Recalls Day of War When Bethlehem Steel Ran Wild.

New York, February 12.—This week's revival of speculative interest in railroad shares under the leadership of Wheeling & Lake Erie recalls the sudden outburst of speculation in industrial stocks during the early days of the war under the leadership of Bethlehem Steel until the big outside public, familiar with railroad stocks, knew very little about industrials. The present generation, well posted on industrials, know little or nothing about the real value behind railroad stocks.

Bethlehem Steel during the early days of the war was known as one of the small independent steel manufacturers struggling to get a start from financial readjustment. Charles M. Schwab, executive head of Bethlehem, who was the first president of the United States Steel corporation, was known long before the war as a prince of salesmen. When the war broke and the bottom dropped out of the steel trade Schwab, sensing the possibilities of obtaining war orders, started for Europe with Bethlehem Steel selling around $25 a share.

He returned after a brief trip abroad with his pockets bulging with orders. Bethlehem Steel then began to creep upward. So little was then thought of the proved earning power of Bethlehem, however, that many people watching the advance in the price of the stock went short of it.

Fritz Kreisler was one of these. Before starting out on an extended trip Kreisler happened to ask one of his Wall street broker friends how some money could be made on the stock market, receiving the reply: "Sell Bethlehem Steel short." Instructing his broker friend to sell some Bethlehem short, Kreisler started on his fiddling trip. Before it stopped advancing Bethlehem went to $700 a share. Before he was finally located Kreisler was in so bad stockmarketwise that George F. Baker, James Speyer and some other prominent Wall street men took over his affairs, allowed him so much spending money and after a long period of careful management worked him out of his hole.

In a way the sensational advance that has just occurred in Wheeling & Lake Erie in a few weeks from below $30 a share to above $130 advertised low priced railroad stocks just as the advance in Bethlehem during the early days of the war started speculation in the low priced industrial shares known as "war babies." How far this speculation in low-priced rails is going in the immediate future Wall street was undecided at the close of this week.

New Construction Records Expected During This Year By American Contractors

Careful Analysis of National Conditions Made in Statement by Associated General Contractors.

Construction operations in the United States promises to equal the record-breaking activities of last year. This is the opinion of more than two thousand of the leading contractors of the country as expressed in a statement issued at the eighth annual meting of the Associated General Contractors of America held at Asheville, N. C., recently.

The prediction is based upon observations made in virtually every state of the union.

"We are convinced," the statement declares, "that a large number of economic and sociological influences are currently at work to create a steady demand for conservatively financed, well-designed, and soundly built structures of various types. The annual increase in population requires a large amount of construction of all kinds.

Modernization Trend.

"There is an increasing tendency of population to drift from farms to cities, as well as an increased desire for speed, safety, and service, in transportation and communication.

"While some cities may not need immediate additional hotel, office, or luxuriant apartment floor space, all types of construction activities are feeling the effect of the trend toward 'modernization.' Obsolescence of office and factory buildings, theaters and schools is constantly making a call for new structures, as is also the necessity for widening the main arteries of traffic in metropolitan areas.

"Railroads are undertaking elimination of grade crossings, elevation of tracks and new mileage to meet newly developing conditions. The vast volume of automobile traffic is demanding not only thousands of miles of paved highways, but that roads be widened, an operation virtually identical with the construction of new roads. A large number of garages are being required to offset 'no parking' ordinances in cities; and toll bridges are springing up all over the country.

"Public utilities corporations are being forced to meet demands for increased service by making large additions to their plants. Subways for city transit and tunnels for lighter railway grades are now being constructed. Projects financed by federal, state, county and municipal governments will require a large volume of construction materials and labor, and river and harbor work, irrigation and hydroelectric projects are under way.

"Creation of new industries, the construction of branch houses and enlargement of old factories will help hold demand in that field of construction at a high level.

"Revision and expansion of educational methods are requiring new community, vocational and high school buildings. America is on a higher plane of demand for satisfaction of what may be termed its 'personal desires' which are manifested in the creation of palatial movie houses, country clubs and apartment houses, libraries and waterworks, and sewer systems which provide the latest improvements.

More Funds Available.

"Only three years ago the report of the Regional Plan association of New York city, stated that 663,000 persons in the nation's metropolis were 'poorly housed.' It is conservative to assume that similar conditions existed at that time in other large centers of population. The record-breaking activities of the past three years have not held sufficient volume to correct these conditions for modern housing, and at the same time meet the demands of 'modernization' in old homes.

"Banks and mortgage-bond houses, which handle the financing of construction, operations should not depend upon the volume of building permits in the cities for their information in drawing conclusions concerning the trend of future construction. These building permits statistics do not form a true barometer of the activities of the construction industries, for they failed to include the vast volume of construction of public works, highways, railroad improvement, and much public utility work. There is also a time lag between issuance of permits and the financing and completion of buildings.

"The increased volume of saving and insurance funds which seek investment, the fact that there is no reason for expecting an increase in the wges of construction labor, the tendency toward lower interest rates, the general prosperity of the country, the large volume of farm and mine production, the increasing demand for electricity, gas, water and transportation facilities all tend to confirm the general view that 1927 will be an active construction year.

"Comparison of post-war costs with pre-war prices forces the conclusion that the American construction program is on a normal basis."

HOME BUILDING PROVES STABILITY OF CITY'S FUTURE

With more than 20 homes now in the process of construction by the Atlanta Realty and Construction company, officials of that organization feel justified in citing real estate conditions in Atlanta as outstandingly healthy and as presaging a future for Atlanta second to that of no other section of this country.

"If any one factor affords an index to a city's development, it is certainly the growth of a permanent population," officials declared. "In this respect it is gratifying to see Atlanta's constantly increasing home construction program. As far as our company is concerned our residences are built directly for the customer upon specific order. With this in mind, the fact that since the organization of the Atlanta Realty and Construction company a year ago we have not experienced a single dull month has an added significance."

At present the company has under construction two brick veneer bungalows on Piedmont road, a two-story brick stucco residence on East Paces Ferry road, a bungalow on Maple drive, two-story house in Brookwood Hills on Brighton road, a brick veneer bungalow at Camp Gordon, three two-story homes in Druid Hills, two bungalows in Sylvan Hills, three bungalows in West End, one on Barnes street, another on Rock Springs road in Morningside, an eight-room bungalow on South Boulevard facing Grant park, a two-story residence on Ponce de Leon heights, a bungalow on Woodbine avenue, and a series of other homes nearing completion. In addition to this a number of contracts with purchasers have been completed which call for the building of dwellings in the near future.

Realty Company Head Sees Big Development Ahead for Atlanta During Present Year

Enthusiasm for the business outlook for 1927 was expressed recently by L. C. Wheeler, head of the Wheeler Realty company, which just rounded out a good year in real estate activity.

"All conditions point to steady development and growth of Atlanta, which is always a good sign in the real estate market," Mr. Wheeler stated. "There is no indication that the city's expansion has been one-sided, instead developments have proceeded on a substantial basis, leaving the market in a healthy condition."

Mr. Wheeler's experience in the Atlanta real estate field has covered a period of 10 years. In addition he was in the midst of business developments for 15 years prior to having entered the realty profession. Mr. Wheeler, who is a native of Georgia, came to Atlanta more than a quarter of a century ago. He has seen Atlanta in process of its greatest growth and for that reason understands his field thoroughly. When first coming here he engaged in the mercantile business for 15 years, since then he has operated in real estate.

With Mr. Wheeler are associated some of Atlanta's well-known real estate salesmen, including W. B. Adams, M. C. Rowland and H. R. Brady. The company specializes in sale of homes and home sites, and since being organized about a year ago, has been responsible for the transfer of a large volume of this type of property.

Annual Banquet Of Real Estate Board on Friday

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate board will hold their annual banquet at the Capital City club on Friday night, February 18, it was announced Saturday by Dana Belser, president.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the banquet consists of Jesse Draper, chairman; E. M. Chapman, Charles E. DuPree, Joseph G. Blount and H. H. Robinson. Members of this committee, according to Mr. Draper, are using every effort to provide an evening's entertainment that will meet with the approval of all attending, and give to the members "a type of annual banquet entertainment that they have never had before."

The banquet will start at 7:30 and dinner will be served in the Capital City ballroom. One of the leading orchestras of the city has been secured to furnish music for the occasion and preparations are being made to provide for an attendance of 125.

Announcements and all details regarding this event have been sent to all members of the Real Estate board, asking each to mail in his reservation at once so that proper steps can be taken to adequately prepare for all attending.

The members of the board are also privileged to invite as their guests their clients and personal friends. From the reservations received from the members to date the attendance promises to be well over one hundred.

Mr. Draper and Mr. Belser, in discussing the event, stated that it is the only social activity of the board for the year, and is most helpful, as it allows all members to get together, forgetting their business cares and responsibilities and to mingle as friends in a manner that is conducive to closer cooperation in the conduct of their business.

Business Woman Added to Realty Company's Staff

Miss Gussie T. Wofford, leading young business woman, has recently joined the sales staff of F. P. and MISS GUSSIE T. WOFFORD.

George J. Morris, to handle the sale of residential property in all sections of Atlanta and vicinity, it was announced Saturday by officials of the realty concern.

Miss Wofford is a native of Atlanta and for the past ten years has been in the employ of a prominent loan company. Her experience in that closely allied line is expected to stand her in good stead in working out the details of real estate transactions.

If the old saying that a woman's place is in the home is true, Miss Wofford's instinctive understanding of what a home should be is likely to be of particular advantage to her clients. That, coupled with her experience and pleasing personality, is the base of the enthusiasm expressed by officials of the Morris company in securing Miss Wofford's services. A similar gratification with the connection was indicated by Miss Wofford as she familiarized herself with her new desk in one of the city's most active real estate offices.

HOLDERS OF STOCK TO FIGHT MERGER

Richmond, Va., February 12.—(AP)—It was "authoritatively stated" here this afternoon, the Richmond News-Leader said, that minority stockholders of the Chesapeake & Ohio railway will fight "the latest merger plan of the Van Sweringens" on the grounds "that the Chesapeake & Ohio should first care liberally for its own stockholders before seeking to go into speculative purchasing."

Plans for the purchase by the Chesapeake & Ohio of controlling interest in the Erie and Pere Marquette railroads were filed with the interstate commerce commission in Washington yesterday. Members of the minority stockholders' committee of the C. & O. in Richmond today would not discuss for publication, the News-Leader said, "their plans until they had obtained a full copy of the merger plan and had studied all of its details."

Conflict Is Seen.

"Unofficially, it was stated," the paper added, "that there would be objection to the linking of the Erie with the C. & O. under any conditions, because the road has not been a paying proposition, while the price of stocks of the Erie and Pere Marquette, which the C. & O. would acquire to control the two roads, is also expected to be contested.

"In renewing their fight against the desirability of the C. & O. purchasing other railroads, the minority will have to face the question of a possible conflict between their rights and the public interest, which question, if raised, will be finally determined by the interstate commerce commission. In acting on the former merger, the commission's decision was indecisive on the point. In the new plan the Nickel Plate has been dropped and now the question of public policy must be determined."

Bryan Resigns.

John Stewart Bryan, publisher of the News-Leader, resigned from the board of directors of the C. & O. at the meeting of the board in Cleveland Monday at which the plan filed with the commerce commission yesterday was decided upon. Mr. Bryan then said his resignation was due to the pressure of business in connection with his paper and the American Newspaper Publishers' association, of which he is president. He explained today that he accepted membership on the board in the hope of bringing the minority and majority groups together, and "after a year of fruitless endeavor I saw it was impossible to get the minority and the majority to see eye-to-eye."

"It seemed plain," he added, "that I could no longer perform any real service had I continued in the position of director."

ORIGINAL COCA-COLA HOME CHANGES HANDS

With the sale of a parcel of property on the corner of Edgewood avenue and Coca-Cola place by the Massell Realty company to C. A. Matthews, the original home of the now famous Coca-Cola company changed hands for the third time.

The unromantic details of the sale as announced in The Constitution some time ago involved the transfer of property measuring 105 feet on Edgewood avenue and 79 feet on Coca-Cola place and improved with a three-story building. It was sold for a consideration of $65,000, the transaction being handled by H. E. Craig of the Adair Realty and Trust company.

The lot was purchased by the Coca-Cola company in 1897 for a consideration of $5,500. The company erected a handsome structure on the property, which was used as headquarters and main office of Coca-Cola for a great number of years.

In 1909 the Coca-Cola company sold the property to Mrs. Bessie Draper McKeldin, John F. Murphy and others for a consideration of $50,000. Later it was purchased by the Massell Realty company and then resold to Mr Matthews for $65,500.

SECURITIES MARKETS ARE CLOSED ALL DAY

New York, February 12.—(AP)—Securities and commodities markets and banks were closed today.

SEABOARD ASKS TIME TO FINISH EXTENSION

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—An extension of time until June 1, next, for completing the Seaboard-All Florida railroad construction in southern Florida was asked of the interstate commerce commission today by that corporation.

The company is a subsidiary of the Seaboard Air Line and has been engaged in building southward from West Palm Beach under a commission authorization which expired in January. It has been found impossible to complete the section of the line between Fort Myers and Labelle, it was explained, before the later date.

"If you are going to be an artist you must turn yourself inside out and show your emotional lining," says Mme. Blanche Marchesi, Revue actresses do their best by under-dressing and over-smiling.

TWO ROADS LOSE PLEA FOR RAISE IN GRAIN RATES

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—An increase in grain rates, sought by the Rock Island and Frisco railroads between Oklahoma and Kansas points, was denied today by the interstate commerce commission.

New schedules which the railroads proposed to put into effect, but which the commission had suspended until March 17, were ordered cancelled, and the present charges will be maintained.

The railroads proposed to cancel joint through rates on grain moving from Kansas and Oklahoma points to Wichita and other milling centers in Kansas, for subsequent re-shipment as flour. The cancellation would have left group rates to cover the movement, and this would have resulted, the commission said, in increasing by amounts as much as 16 cents per hundred pounds the present charges.

The commission's investigation sustained the protests of Kansas millers and the Wichita board of trade.

TWO NEW HOUSES NEAR COMPLETION IN HAYNES MANOR

Two houses are nearing completion on Manor Ridge drive in Haynes Manor, both to be occupied very shortly. Earl Greene and O. I. Freeman recently purchased home sites in this new northside subdivision and at once set about building these homes.

"The spring-like weather that has been with use recently," said Eugene V. Haynes, owner and developer of the subdivision, "has quickened folks' interest in home building and has been reflected in the sales out at Haynes Manor. Our sales of lots have averaged practically one a day since the first of the year, promising well for the real spring that lies ahead."

Haynes Manor now has two sales offices, one on the property and the other on Peachtree street, across from the Howard theater.

FINANCING CHANGE IS SOUGHT BY FRISCO

Washington, February 12.—(AP)—The St. Louis-San Francisco railroad sought permission from the interstate commerce commission today to amend financing proposals which it has recently brought forward.

The company desires to sell to its present stockholders $15,096,240 in new stock, but explained today that market conditions may make it desirable for the issue to take the form either of preferred or common shares. The commission was asked to allow the road to issue either class of securities in accordance with conditions that might exist at the time of marketing.

N E W APARTMENTS ON ROSEDALE DRIVE N E A R COMPLETION

Management of the handsome Rosecrest and Rosemont apartments being constructed on Rosedale drive, near Highland avenue, will be in charge of Wynne-Claughton, incorporated, it was announced Saturday by A. J. Maxham, official of that company.

The buildings, which are nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy by March 1, will consist of two wings with 16 five to six-room units on a lot measuring 150 by 150 feet. The structure represents an outlay of $90,000, it was stated by O. T. Hennessee, well-known contractor and builder, who is also owner of the new apartments.

The apartments will be of the latest efficiency type, containing every modern built-in feature. There will be both front and rear porches and garages built in the basement.

KEWANEE

The One Outstanding Boiler

A good many heating-boilers have come and gone in the past twenty years, and some are in existence still. But of the whole crew, there is one outstanding boiler which has the confidence of smart architects and heating engineers.

That's the Kewanee All-steel (riveted) Firebox Boiler. The primary reason for its outstandingness is honesty.

When any man tells you he can sell you a boiler "as good as the Kewanee," ask him to prove it. Ask the Kewanee to prove that the others can't prove it, and Kewanee will be tickled pink to do it.

Thousands of fine buildings in America are standing proof of Kewanee's Quality. There's nothing so convincing as the word of a man who uses one. Testimonials are strong advertisements even if they were started by the patent medicine business. Ask us for our stock of testimonials. Or ask any user of a Kewanee why he is a user.

Don't fool with your profits. You pay for a boiler only once, but you buy coal or fuel every year or every month.

For rigid details, drop a line to The Old Man Behind the Boiler. No one knows any better than he does.

Must Sell His 18½ Ares
THE finx has caught him and he's got to turn loose at a big sacrifice. Means $2,000 to $3,000 sure profit or more to some one with horse sense who will pick it off at once. Not a scintilla of doubt. My absolute judgment behind this statement.

OFFICERS OF ATLANTA PARENT-TEACHER COUNCIL—Mrs. C. J. Foster, president; Mrs. W. L. Schell, first vice president; Mrs. R. L. Cliett, second vice president; Mrs. W. L. McCalley, Jr., recording secretary; Mrs. H. T. Loehr, corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. C. Byers, treasurer.

News Notes of Georgia P.-T. A.'s Issued by State Headquarters

The following news is issued by publicity headquarters of the Georgia branch, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and is of interest to all parent-teacher associations throughout Georgia:

California Convention.

Special rates and an official itinerary have been arranged for the national convention at Oakland, Cal., the week of May 23, with a stop-over at Grand Canyon and other interesting points, the Santa Fe designated as the "official" route, fare from Atlanta for the round trip $111. Any Georgians contemplating a trip to California at this time should communicate with the state president, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, before the next board meeting, which will be held in Macon April 12.

Toomsboro P.-T. A.

The Toomsboro P.-T. A., just two years old, recently put over a most enthusiastic "daddies night," featured with a talk by Professor I. E. McKellar, of Wesleyan, which was full of wit, but left the parents with much excellent food for thought in regard to the service through work of the P.-T. A. and particular encouragement to the daddies to share in it.

Summer Roundup.

The executive board of the Georgia branch recently indorsed and recommends to local associations the following program of the Georgia May day committee, cooperating with the state board of health and education and the American Child Health association. 1. Each community to have an active May day committee representing organizations interested in health, education and welfare. 2. Each baby on reaching six months of age to be given toxin-antitoxin to prevent diphtheria. 3. Each child to present birth, medical, dental and vaccination certificates on entering school. 4. Each county, either singly or in combination with other neighboring counties, to have a commissioner of health, public health nurse as provided by the Ellis health law, and a home demonstration agent. 5. Each citizen to know of reduced rates on railroads, and hospital treatment for indigent children. Arrangements to be made through the state board of health, Atlanta. 6. Each citizen to know that but 3c per capita is appropriated by the Georgia legislature for all health work. A progressive program of health conservation calls for an adequate appropriation to our state board of health. We must appreciate that absence from school, because of preventable illness or physical defect, is a large item of waste in school administration, and that health for our entire state is to be had only through a reasonable expenditure of money. Full enjoyment of good roads, good schools, good churches depends upon good health. Cooperate in this program, which makes this objective possible.

May day is also the time designated to launch the "summer roundup" to provide 100 per cent perfect entrants to the first grade in the fall. But registration for this campaign must be with the state president before May 1. Local associations should enroll at once. Address, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, state president, Decatur, Ga.

Physical Education.

The national chairman of physical education, Dr. C. Ward Crampton, announces two new chairmen who will be associated with him in plans for parent-teacher work, Daniel Chase, executive, Sportsmanship Brotherhood, Inc., 342 Madison avenue, New York city, and James Edward Rogers, director, national physical education service, Playground and Recreation Association of America, 315 Fourth avenue, New York city.

A Thrifty Generation.

January has come and gone with its special effort to teach the child to save with some definite purpose—for a college education, a much desired vacation, new clothes, new books, some big things he desires, and it is interesting to know the totals in school savings for the year ending June 30, 1926. Pupils in this country who participated in school savings numbered 3,403,746 and they deposited $20,469,960.88. Over twenty millions!

Abuse in Advertising.

An impostor, a woman, has been operating in Florida, Georgia and Tennessee, seeking advertising, without authority, "for a parent-teacher year book." No advertising has been authorized by the Georgia branch, except by Mrs. J. D. Miller for the cook book, and this upon written authority of the state president, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, and all local associations and councils should be on guard against having the name of the organization used in this connection without such authority and backing.

Parent-Teacher Institute.

A Parent-Teacher institute will be conducted at the University of Georgia June 28-July 1, during the term of the credit course in parent-teacher work, which is a regular feature of the summer school session. The institute is designed to bring together the state executive board and a number of state and local leaders in parent-teacher work for intensive training and study of problems.

Maternity Aid.

The Sheppard-Towner act has been renewed, the extension of the appropriation for maternity aid passing the senate in January. This means thousands of babies helped. Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton, national legislative chairman, sends up three cheers and thanks for the good work of legislative chairmen, state bulletins and individual letter-writers.

Seventh District New P.-T. A.

Organization activities in the seventh district are not confined to the district president, who has set a rapid pace in this field. The secretary of the district, Mrs. Richard Wilson, of Cartersville, upon invitation, recently went out and organized a new association for the rural schools at Euharlee with 18 charter members, who will affiliate with the state and national congress at once. Mrs. Wesley Roberts was elected president of the new organization. Mrs. Wilson, besides being secretary of the seventh district, is president of the Market Street P.-T. A. of Cartersville, and the wife of Rev. Richard Wilson, formerly of Macon.

New Leaflets Available

The following leaflets, recently printed by the national office, are available from the state president: By-laws (national); "Art, Education and Life," "Know the Child," "Know Your School," "The School Plus the Home," "Safety," "Safety First," "Street Safety."

Kirkwood Book Shelves.

The Kirkwood P.-T. A. has gone to work to establish book shelves for every grade in the school. Donations are being given by mothers of the various grades and an old-fashioned book party is planned for the near future. The preschool, citizenship and other committees are also actively at work and this association is also doing a special piece of work for the motion pictures of the community, attendance at the children's matinees being encouraged.

125,000 Children Immunized.

A letter from Dr. Joe P. Bowdoin, of the state board of health to Mrs. P. H. Jeter, state president, estimates that 125,000 children have been immunized from diphtheria in Georgia in the campaign in which the P.-T. A. participated, probably 50,000 of this number treated privately. But the state laboratory distributed 76,555 c.c. and at the same time distributed 7,650 Schick tests to determine the immunity the child might have against diphtheria.

Dr. Bowdoin asserts that "the state board of health is under many obligations to the P.-T. A. for its assistance in this campaign," and is "quite sure it is one of the most successful we have ever put on."

Prize Offered.

At the national convention in Oakland in May a gavel will be presented to the state reporting the largest number of superior parent-teacher associations according to the standards of excellence as given in the national handbook. A banner will also be awarded to the state having the largest number of standard associations. But the information must be sent in by the state president before April 1. The Georgia branch has been working toward a standard of excellence for several years and it should not be difficult for many associations to qualify. Local associations are urged to consult the handbook and report to the state president as soon as possible in order that this state may make a creditable showing at the national convention.

New P.-T. A.'s Organized.

Mrs. Guy Wells, of Statesboro, fifth vice president of the Georgia branch, has organized three new parent-teacher associations since the first of the year: Rocky Ford, Mrs. B. W. Millen, president; Pulaski, Mrs. J. A. Garner, president; Leefield P.-T. A. of Statesboro, J. H. Bradley, president.

Griffin P.-T. A. Celebrates.

The Parent-Teacher associations of Griffin, recently organized by Mrs. Jeter, the state president, will celebrate Founders' day on February 15, when they will be addressed by the national vice president, Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, of Macon, who will give the history and growth of the parent-teacher movement.

Sixth District News.

Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, president of the sixth district, who recently organized a new P.-T. A. for the Pepperton school at Jackson, will next go to Jenkinsburg and Towaliga, where she has been invited to organize new associations.

Moving Picture Machine?

Any P.-T. A. contemplating the purchase of a moving picture machine should communicate with the Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. of Atlanta, Mrs. W. B. Colby, 392 Boulevard, N. E., which has a machine in splendid condition for sale.

Joseph E. Brown P.-T. A.

Joseph E. Brown P.-T. A. of Atlanta has succeeded in directly reaching 1,500 mothers by the following method: The president, Mrs. J. H. Savage, entertained all her grade chairmen at luncheon and each chairman in turn entertained her mothers and the advisory teacher in her grade. In this way 1,500 mothers became acquainted with each other, their teacher and parent-teacher work. This P.-T. A. also secured 750 books in a recent "book shower," and is purchasing the educational films, "Chronicles of America," and "Pictorial America." Health is also being stressed in the following lectures: "Physical Hygiene—Health an Aid to Education," "Mental Hygiene—Adolescence: Its Peculiarities and Dangers," "Social Hygiene—Building for Tomorrow."

Prize Offered.

Mrs. Arnold D. Gregory, fifth district bulletin chairman, 389 Altoona place, Atlanta, is offering a prize for the most practical and original helps for P.-T. A. workers. Local associations in that district should send her their ideas. Many of them have suggestions which are worthy of consideration in awarding this prize.

Grove Park P.-T. A. Features Program.

The Grove Park P.-T. A. held its meeting Wednesday afternoon in the assembly room, Mrs. R. A. Carmichael presiding. "Sleeping Beauty" was rendered by pupils of high third grade under the direction of Miss Anne Austin. A candle lighting pageant, given by the girls of high and low fifth grade, celebrating the 30th anniversary of the Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations, directed by Mrs. Carl J. Dodds and Mrs. Cook, was given as the entertainment feature of the regular monthly meeting of the P.-T. A. The color scheme of yellow and blue was carried out in detail—in costumes, candles, etc. The candle lighting procession was colorful and impressive, bringing before the association the children themselves as torch bearers and candle lighters of the future.

Mrs. Newton Wing, better films chairman, made a very interesting talk on the importance of children attending the Saturday morning matinee at the Howard theater.

Mrs. Carl J. Dodd's room won the dollar for having the highest percentage of mothers present.

A benefit party will be given February 25.

William A. Bass P.-T. A. To Sponsor Bridge Party.

The P.-T. A. of William A. Bass Junior High school will sponsor a bridge party Friday afternoon, February 18, at 2:30 o'clock at the Ansley hotel. Tickets may be secured from Mrs. Harry Baker, Mrs. William Kingdom or any member of the executive board. Those desiring to play at home may do so and a table prize will be furnished, also they will have an opportunity of drawing for the other prizes. About 150 tables have been engaged.

S. M. Inman P.-T. A. To Give Banquet.

There will be an appreciation banquet given by the S. M. Inman P.-T. A. under the direction of Mrs. E. T. Albright, in honor of scouts of the school on Friday, February 18. Scout officials have been invited and 125 guests are expected to be present.

Georgia Ave. P.-T. A. Honors Memory Of Frank L. Stanton

The Georgia Avenue P.-T. A. held its meeting in the school auditorium Thursday. The program was planned to honor Frank L. Stanton and also Mrs. Theodore Birney and Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, founders of the P.-T. A.

Miss Greer, teacher of music in those grades, presented the high fourth and high sixth grades in a group of Frank L. Stanton songs. Mrs. Charles Foster, president of the Atlanta council, spoke in a most interesting way of founders' day. As an introduction Mrs. Foster spoke of her personal interest in Georgia Avenue school. Mrs. Foster exhibited a program of a meeting of the mothers' congress 30 years ago and told some interesting incidents in connection with these pictures. Since then this mothers' congress has been changed into the Parent-Teacher association.

Mrs. Foster spoke of the lamentable fact that teachers were not included in this first organization and read a beautiful tribute to the work of teachers at this time.

Mrs. Robinson, president, invited the high sixth grade girls to light the birthday candles on the large birthday cake which represented the 13 years that Georgia has had a P.-T. A. Mrs. Cumbea, secretary, gave a tribute to the late Frank L. Stanton.

Mrs. Otwell, president of the Formwalt P.-T. A. and the membership committee of the League of Women Voters, appealed to the mothers to "join the league and vote." Mrs. W. C. Slate is the chairman of this part of the work here.

Parent-Teacher Meetings

The W. F. Slaton School P.-T. A. will hold its regular monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon, February 16, at 2:30 o'clock. Founders' day will be observed and an interesting program put on by the students will feature the afternoon. All patrons of the school, whether members or not, are earnestly urged to attend.

Founders' day will be observed by Crew Street P.-T. A. February 16 at 2:30 o'clock in school auditorium. This is sixth anniversary of Crew Street P.-T. A., also thirty-first birthday of the national organization. Mrs. John W. Rowlett, past state president, and present state historian, will be the speaker of the day.

The February meeting of the Joel Chandler Harris P.-T. A. will be held at the school, Tuesday, February 15, at 2:30 o'clock. Dr. Floyd Field, of Georgia Tech, will speak on "Child Psychology." A rare opportunity will be offered the mothers to learn more about the problem of handling children from one of the south's leading students of child psychology. It is hoped that every member of the association will be present.

The P.-T. A. of the Williams Street school will hold the February meeting Thursday, February 17, at the school building at 2:30 p. m. An attractive program celebrating Founders' day has been arranged and every patron of the school is urged to be present. A speaker on child welfare will have a prominent part on this program. The executive board will hold a meeting in the office of the principal at 10:30 a. m. the same day. Mrs. Clifford Walker Issues Article on Founders' Day

Mrs. Clifford Walker, chairman of pre-school circles for the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, issues the following article, appropriate to the celebration of Georgia day and Founders' day of the National P.-T. A.:

"Coming so closely together there is a peculiar relation between Georgia day and Founders' day of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Georgia day recalls names and characters of founders of our national life who wrought not alone in the building of our own state, but were called into council concerning national questions. Mrs. Theodore Birney, founder of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, was a Georgia woman who lived the greater part of her life in this state and moved to Washington in time to receive the financial aid of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, enabling her to launch the national congress before her death, making her a figure of state pride. Neither one state or one nation, however, could hold a boundary for her vision; it crossed the ocean and reached all countries of the world.

"Mrs. Birney's suggestions were always practical. From a well-ordered home of her own she stated to the world that there was a trinity of parental duty in home life—parents' duties toward each other, toward their children and toward themselves—and while outside claims were not to be ignored, home duties should always have precedence over these. In her address before the first national congress of mothers, she said that the congress gathering was to be in no sense a sex movement, nor should the appeal to take up this child culture and its kindred topics be made to mothers alone, hoping the whisper of this first meeting in Washington would grow into a mighty shout throughout the land, until all mankind should take it up as the battle cry for the closing years of the century. Her greatest desire was that mothers, fathers, nurses, educators, ministers, legislators, and mightiest of all in its swift, far-reaching influence, the press, would make the child the watchword and ward of the day and hour, that all else might become secondary and coming generations behold a new world and a new people.

"While her main appeal was made for study on the part of every mother, Mrs. Birney stood for the cooperation of both parents, because they held in their combined possession the priceless material of which the future civilization would be wrought. Her especial word to the fathers was this: 'We need your sympathy, your aid in this movement which revolves about the home, for in that home your influence makes for weal or woe; your ignorance or your indifference is as fatal in its way as that of the mother, and without your cooperation her most earnest efforts must fall far short of the results she may be striving to obtain. No true-hearted man will shirk his duty in this crusade for the children, a warfare as glorious, I think, as any men ever waged on a field of battle.'

"Mrs. Birney recognized that the teachers were also needed and stated that she would not be satisfied until the fathers and teachers had both become a part of the final organization. With many of her ideals already realized, and the attention of nations now being focused upon child life, it remains for us to cooperate with the best of all these movements and use the most far-reaching methods we can find to see that no parent in any home is left untold as to the best methods of rearing the child therein. It is not the mere producing of children upon which the premium is to be placed, however worthy that may be, but the final test of honor should lie in how many are saved as to both body and soul through intelligent handling. For a wide distribution of information upon this subject, our state may be doubly proud on Georgia day and on Founders' day that the woman of such great vision, Alice McClelland Birney, was a Georgian!"

Ohio Observes P.-T. A. Day.

In Ohio, February 17, has been proclaimed Parent-Teacher day. The following extract is taken from the Ohio governor's proclamation of January 31, 1927:

"Ohio has always stood in the front ranks of educational progress. The home is the foundation upon which civilization has been built. The first teachers were our mothers. With the advent of the organized school system, the trained teacher assumed a part of the instructional duties formerly performed by the mother. But the responsibility of the parent has not ceased. The teacher's work is most effectively conducted only when he is in direct and intimate contact with the family of each pupil. I look upon the Parent-Teacher movement as one of Ohio's great civic and educational institutions. Let us not forget that a father bears toward his children a responsibility equal to that of their mother. The Parent-Teacher movement should receive the equal support of fathers and mothers.

Therefore, I, Vic Donahey, governor of Ohio, do proclaim February 17, 1927, the 30th anniversary of the founding of the Parent-Teacher movement, as Parent-Teacher day, and I urge that it be so observed throughout this state."

—Agreeing that nothing is so lovely as the shape of a woman's head, the designers have selected supple materials for spring. Deftly they have manipulated and moulded them into folds and creases as intricate as they are numerous.

Besides the crochet, Balibuntle and straw there is the tailored felt, whose secret of smartness is brevity. Newcomer among the straws is the linen-like weave "Baku." In the small tailored hats the brims practically cease to exist at the back. The large hat with sweeping brim is in evidence—often of hairbraid. Our hats express all the new features in authoritative detail—from New York's foremost makers.

TWO CITY BULWARKS.

While petty politics have for many years hampered and obstructed some of the service departments of city government—more the fault perhaps of the system, built around an antiquated charter, than of the official personnel—the citizens of Atlanta have a right to feel secure in the two bulwarks of defense and protection that have been set up through citizen commissions.

One of these bulwarks is the bond commission. The other is the recently established citizens' school commission.

These boards, cooperative with the service functions but otherwise divorced from any of the political machinery of city government, are composed of outstanding citizens of affairs. They are giving unselfishly of their time, without remuneration, in order that full protection, along financial lines, may be accorded all the people, and that a higher degree of efficiency, through coordinated efforts, and the experienced counsel of business men, may be reached in the administration of great sums of money in services and in developments.

The citizens' bond commission, through which the funds from the issue of a few years ago was administered, did its work in a masterful and commendable manner. Every dollar of the fund was properly safeguarded, business methods were employed in the building programs, wise economies were practiced, and the audit showed not only a correct checking to a penny of the disbursements, but a system of bookkeeping and of records that reflected not merely the integrity of the commission, but the efficient methods employed in all its services, including the accounting.

The present bond commission, composed of business men who command the confidence of the people, will make the same satisfactory record when the $8,000,000 bond issue of 1925 is unleashed from obstructing litigation.

The citizens' school commission is the safety valve on the city's school machinery. When the board of education, with reckless disregard of its obligation to the citizens, overdrew the 1926 budget to the extent of $800,000, and the city schools faced a crisis such as never known in Atlanta, the clearing house banks—having served notice a year before when they relieved a $500,000 deficit—demanded a citizens' board as a disbursing agency before a dollar would be advanced.

The financial administration of the school system was accordingly taken over by the citizens' board, acting in the virtual capacity of a receivership.

The banks could not have done otherwise, as they felt the necessity for the employment of business methods, rather than for the further functioning of political machinery, in a matter that struck so close to the interests of all the people and involved the absolute necessity for immediate saneness instead of a continuation of proven recklessness.

The citizens' school committee is composed of leading Atlanta citizens who are not fired or urged or caught in the cataclysm of political factionalism—such as has practically destroyed the efficiency, and certainly the usefulness, of the board of education.

Recent events have again shown the wisdom of the action in setting up this commission.

These two bulwarks stand out as towers of strength, and for them the people of Atlanta have a reason to be grateful and breathe easier.

NEWS PROPERLY TOLD.

In the news columns today are resolutions passed by the Woman's Missionary society of the Inman Park Methodist church, and by the missionary society of the First Methodist church of Marietta, commending The Constitution for excluding from its columns the vulgar and revolting details brought out in testimony in divorce and other trials and public proceedings that revolve around sex problems and alleged immoral practices and perversions.

It is gratifying that public sentiment has so overwhelmingly sustained The Constitution in this position, evidenced by large numbers of letters, telegrams and other expressions of groups and individuals. And yet this could have been expected. The average person thinks right and "shoots straight." Right thinking men and women do not want salacious reading brought daily to their homes.

There is no occasion, no good reason, indeed, that such reading, certainly in newspapers, should be carried into the homes.

The Constitution first of all is a newspaper. It prints the news fairly, without bias, and fully. It is not a restriction of that primary function of a newspaper to keep its columns clean.

The readers of The Constitution did not miss any of the facts in which the public could possibly have had an interest in the recent Browning separation case. But in publishing those facts the gutters were not swept and the sewers were not drained to find language that could appeal with favor only to the socially diseased, and to the morally unfit.

The Constitution will always publish the news. It will go, even in such cases as the Browning hearing, if public interest warrants the publication, as far as decency will permit. When it reaches that limit it will stop.

If it loses a subscriber for refusing to carry indecent language into his or her home it will welcome such a loss. A subscriber who prefers a newspaper with sordid, unwholesome, character-destroying reading, and the lurid picturization of immorality, prefers and should have some other newspaper than The Constitution. All news can be properly and decently told.

Appreciation for the overwhelming sentiment of approval of this position is gratefully acknowledged.

OFFERS PRACTICAL RELIEF.

The Norbeck drouth-relief bill which passed the senate Tuesday, with the amendment offered by Senator George, of this state, is an exceptionally good measure, and entirely different from any of the politically-inspired credit extension propositions that usually glut the hoppers at every session of congress.

In brief, it sets aside a fund of $8,600,000 to be loaned, in sums not to exceed $300, to those farmers in the northwest and in the sutheast who suffered from the severe drouths of several months ago, and who therefore are yet handicapped in buying necessary seed and fertilizers for pitching their 1927 crops, and who must buy feed until the next harvest season.

For the southeast a sum of $2,500,000 is allocated, of which $1,500,000 is set aside for fertilizer purchases, and $1,000,000 for feed and seed. The latter provision—which is the saving clause of the bill—was added upon amendment by Senator George.

The drouth area of the southeast included 30 or more counties in northeast Georgia, perhaps half of South Carolina, and several counties in western Alabama. The allocation therefor is not to be administered through any banking agency or with any undue red tape. The department of agriculture is to handle the matter in its own way, systematically, of course, but without the usual federal delays and complications. The loans are to be predicated upon evidences of necessity in order to operate in 1927 with adequate facilities, and the necessary degree of personal encouragement. The fund, though comparatively small, will go a long way in relieving local banks in the drouth communities, many of which are necessarily burdened now with agricultural paper.

The whole tendency of congress for the past few years has been to get farmers hopelessly in debt through land mortgages, and much of the so-called relief that has been offered has been of no practical benefit. That is to say, it has been so directed that existing debts have been merely brought up to date, or one group of lenders paid off by the substitution of another group. Until the intermediate banks came into existence farmers, for actual purposes of "carrying on," found little practical help in any of the credit channels offered.

The Norbeck bill is different and entirely practical. It does not seek to inveigle the farmer into deeper morass of debt, but to help him—if in need through the drouth conditions which overtook him—to cultivate this year with an intensiveness that may bring him out of his troubles.

THE MARKETING PROBLEM.

On this page is a communication from the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association, of which R. V. Bergen is secretary, commending a recent Constitution editorial on marketing, and setting out sound, unanswerable views on that vital problem in farm economics.

Six primary elements are discussed in the communication. They are quality production, proper preparation for market, preserving facilities, regulated distribution, advertising and financing.

In these are embraced the primary marketing essentials that have been vigorously and consistently stressed by The Constitution for years—standardization, and organized, systematic distribution. Cooperative marketing is theoretically right. But it can never reach a fullness of success until there is a fullness of cooperation. To this end the product, and not the producers, need to be organized.

In standardization necessarily are incorporated quality, pack, package. With such standardization there must be trade-mark exploitation, and this means advertising.

In a nutshell, marketing is merchandising. It is a highly-specialized feature of the farm problem. It requires, therefore, the strictest of proven business rules. The farmer should be a specialist in production. To him the quality equation must appeal. If he does that properly—raises quality commodities—then the other links in the chain should be taken up by other specialists. All should be coordinated—must be to succeed.

The communication of the Retail Food Dealers' association is not only instructive, but it is so sound that it ought to help materially in bringing about definite action.

THE HOMICIDAL TIDAL WAVE.

The homicidal wave recently sweeping over Atlanta will continue with increasing force unless the perpetrators of these crimes, or at least a reasonable percentage of them, are brought to justice.

Not only is it true that our laws are framed for the protection of criminals—especially in felonies—more than for the protection of society, including the victims of criminals, but our system of enforcement—in Atlanta—while efficient enough in misdemeanors, and petty offenses of one kind and another, is alarmingly inefficient in the crimes of murder, banditry and other major offenses of that nature.

We raise the roof off the police station because officers assigned to "investigate a party" return without a modicum of evidence, when all the "evidence" perchance had been previously consumed, but we let murderers slip through the meshes of the nets like minnows through a salmon seine.

It is only necessary for any observing reader of the newspapers to run back over the homicide record in Atlanta and environs for the past few months, and check the crimes against the arrests and the penalties for such crimes.

We make enough noise about the apprehension of "the assassin who fired the fatal bullet," and all that sort of rubbish, to keep public indignation appeased until the crime is forgotten. And then the attention of the public is focused upon another homicide, perhaps more revolting and again the same old story of the murderers "soon" being "in the clutches of the law" is handed out like rations thrown to a flock of persuing wolves to satiate their appetites while escape is effected.

There is no occasion, nor disposition, to indict the enforcement officers who are assigned to homicide and major felony cases. It is the system that invites and encourages escapes from justice, and that, therefore, invites and encourages crime, that is to blame.

We have more homicides in Atlanta in the course of a year than in all of England, including London with its population of nearly 10,000,000 souls. Why? A murderer in London never escapes arrest. And if found guilty—which is inevitable, if guilty—he pays the death penalty within from 30 to 60 days after the crime. There are no avenues of escape along which lawyers can scrap through long and indefinite periods of delays. There is no maudlin sentiment to obstruct and embarrass and heroize crime. There is no respecter of persons by reason of wealth or position. The law is a mandate. It is inescapable.

In the great Canadian frontiers, where the English system of enforcement is employed, the "red coats" never fail to "get their man"—and the system of police efficiency appeals to the admiration of the world, and has immortalized the "mounted."

How is it here?

It is only necessary to make an unbiased appraisal of the records. The answer is there.

THE SURPLUS CONTROL BILL.

The passage of the McNary-Haugen bill in the senate, through a complete break-down of all party lines, is a victory for former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois. No man in America has been so instrumental in creating sentiment for legislation to control the surpluses of basic commodities. He has traveled from coast to coast for more than two years speaking to groups of citizens, farmers, business men, bankers, women. He has addressed various legislatures, among them the Georgia legislature in 1925.

The movement to set up, for the stabilization of agriculture a board similar, in a way, to the federal reserve board, which was created for the stabilization of banking, has had his active leadership. At first he found the people indifferent, skeptical. Gradually sentiment began to swing in its favor. Today the people of America, of every group, are overwhelmingly in favor of the general purposes that the measure, as passed, seeks to accomplish.

There have been and are yet serious differences as to some of the features—particularly to that provision that imposes an equalization tax upon the embraced commodities to meet the expense of marketing such surpluses as there shall exist. This feature of the McNary-Haugen bill has been vigorously fought by the administration. The president and his secretary of agriculture favored the Curtis-Crisp bill which provided the setting up of the same federal machinery, the same revolving fund, the same plan of marketing, through cooperatives, etc., but eliminated the flat equalization fee, substituting therefor a provision for meeting such expenses from the products only as sold.

A majority of the southern senators favored the latter measure, and voted for its substitution for the McNary-Haugen bill. This failed, however, and following the failure some of them voted for, others against, the measure as passed. Both of the Georgia senators voted against it.

The amended bill, as it passed the senate Friday is different in practically all essential respects from the original bill, presented three years ago. It is less radical, less paternalistic.

The bill in its original shape was voted down a year ago. Even Governor Lowden, who led the fight for public sentiment along the general lines sought, opposed the extreme features that were finally elliminated or modified.

The house will vote on the measure Monday or Tuesday, and its passage is forecast. If there are any differences in the house and senate measures they will be ironed out in conference.

The question of most concern now is whether or not the president will approve the measure. If he vetoes it, it is agreed that it cannot be passed over his veto.

While party lines were completely obliterated in the senate vote, colleagues from the same state frequently holding opposite views, as in North Carolina with Senator Simmons voting for the bill, and Senator Overman against it, it is conceded by practically every student of political causes and effects that the action of President Coolidge will have wide, perhaps controlling, political significance. If he vetoes the measure it will perhaps force the candidacy of Lowden for president.

The bill is a decided departure from anything ever attempted by this government before. But it does seek to benefit the farmer along constructive lines, rather than to get him further in debt, as has been the effect of most farm legislation.

The necessity for some such legislation is vital. The Constitution had favored the Curtis-Crisp bill because it sought the same results without the equalization fee, which is a direct tax to which we objected.

As it is, however, if the McNary-Haugen bill is passed by the house, as is almost assured, and is then approved by the president, it will be the duty of every citizen to encourage and strengthen the government in its undertaking, and to show a spirit of earnest, helpful cooperation that it may be given a fair and unhampered test.

We don't know who ordered this raise in gasoline but we do know who has got to pay for it.

Hereafter lynching bees will be a very unpopular amusement in Coffee county. All glory to its judiciary!

The good-will fliers in their Pan-American flight are not having plain sailing. They are encountering heavy air pressure swirling over the mountain peaks down to the sea.

They may be gray-haired and matured in congress, but they get a lot of fun playing with their blocs

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

A Look Through the Revolving Horoscope for Next Year's Campaign.

If and when the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill is passed by congress we are told that it will put a severe and unwelcome test problem up to President Coolidge.

Maybe so, but this observer does not believe that it will puzzle the president seriously.

If he is still fixed in his opinion of farm relief frequently expressed, he will promptly veto the bill and clearly state why he objects to its chief provisions, or to the whole bill on constitutional grounds.

If he is going to abandon his convictions in the interest of party expediency and is looking now to placating the agrarian republican elements in the wheat, corn and cotton belts, he will find plausible reasons for signing the bill.

Between those alternatives there is no twilight zone for any hesitancy.

There are those who play close to the president who assert confidentially that he will veto the measure when it is laid before him. That he has the courage to do it, in spite of the success of his western party friends in pushing it over in congress, is not doubted. But sometimes courage yields to strategy and compromise, and in this particular case the closely-calculating president may find it convenient to see ameliorative merits in the bill!

* * * *

What the Coolidge Men Claim.

When asked their views as to what would happen to the president's chance of renomination in the event of his vetoing the farm relief bill, the Coolidge men claim there would be no killing effect.

They say that anything like the McNary-Haugen measure is almost solidly opposed by the great majority of the potential republican voters of the country; that a veto of that bill would not alienate a vote from the president in any state east of Ohio; and that it would not take from the republican national ticket the electoral vote of any state between the oceans that is now relied upon to assure its success in 1928.

They have a table of figures already prepared which shows 24 states whose delegates they say "no man can take from Coolidge" and those delegates total 559, or four more than the necessary majority to nominate. This table does not include a single state west of Pennsylvania, but takes in all the southern states except Oklahoma.

It is a remarkable tabulation and to one who understands political conditions, as they exist today, the conclusion from it is irresistible that Coolidge can be renominated, if he wants to be, without consulting the wishes, demands, or oppositions of the midwest or far west politicians of his party.

* * * *

Reelection Is Something Else.

Granting that he can so surely get his renomination the question of getting himself reelected takes on quite another complexion.

Thirteen southern states that would give him 224 votes in convention for renomination would most certainly not give him a single electoral vote for reelection, unless it should be West Virginia with her eight electoral votes. So that 40 per cent of his convention majority would be missing at the election.

The other 11 states in his above figured convention majority could only give him 152 electoral votes. Add the eight of West Virginia to give him 160 of the 266 necessary to elect a president—and whence, then, must come the other 106 necessary electoral votes?

That looks easy to the Coolidgeites. They say that when he is renominated the party can safely count on getting the electoral votes of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Utah, Nevada, California, Oregon and Washington—115 in all—and those added to the 160 in the eastern division will give Coolidge 275 electoral votes, or nine more than the necessary majority!

Those are their minimum calculations for convention and election and inspire their confidence that Coolidge can survive the effects of a McNary-Haugen bill veto.

* * * *

Anticipating Democratic Confusion.

The regular republicans are also relying confidently upon seemingly inevitable democratic confusion, growing out of the Smith-McAdoo fight for control of the party.

They look upon that as a strictly "wet and dry fight," with an undertow of religious prejudice capable of becoming virulent and fatal to democratic solidarity.

If either Smith or McAdoo should get the nomination they figure upon such widespread disaffections in democratic ranks as to make the election of either of them a foreordained impossibility.

Figuring all the possibilities that they believe the Smithites could claim they find only 116 other votes, which added to 145 would give Smith, at the highest allowance, 261 votes, or five less than a majority of the electoral college. And, mind you, that estimate includes Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Illinois and Wisconsin. More than one of them is a risky inclusion.

It is figured that McAdoo will go into the convention if a candidate, with a less vote than that of Smith. His nomination is regarded as an impossibility, but even should he have following enough to dominate the convention and dictate the nominee, the republicans see the wet democrats of the eastern states "laying down on the party" and allowing it to go down in defeat, as they have done in other national campaigns. And who can say the republican leaders have not reasons for that vision?

Why Not a Southern Man?

Apparently the only hope of democratic success is in the nomination of some other candidate than either Smith or McAdoo—and the question naturally arises, why not make the selection from the democratic south?

It is cowardly to fail to claim this right any longer, and if a man like Angus McLean, the progressive governor of North Carolina, should be presented by his state the other democratic states of the south should be glad of the opportunity to support him.

Religion, Science and Legislation.

Last week the Missouri legislature, by a vote of 82 to 62, refused to pass a bill which would have prohibited the teaching of evolution in the state supported schools. Of course there are a great many good people who are so sincerely convinced that the belief in evolution will destroy one's belief in the Christian religion, that they command a very genuine sympathy. From their standpoint, the state is taking a part of their tax money and paying it to people to destroy the faith of their children. It is a truly pathetic position to be placed in. It all grows out of a false conception of religion, and a false conception of physical science.

Physical science, properly taught, has nothing whatsoever to do with the teaching of religion. It ought to be said, with equal emphasis, that the teaching of religion has nothing whatsoever to do with the teaching of science. It is perfectly true that a fuller and more accurate knowledge of the universe, revealing its orderly processes, must help one, who believes in a God, to a clearer definition of his God. On the other hand, a religious faith will certainly illumine with beauty the scientist's outlook upon the universe, as in the case of the great astronomer who, looking through his telescope, declared, "I think Thy thoughts, after Thee, O God!" But it must be remembered that the source of man's religion is not to be found in science, nor must he depend upon religion for the source of his knowledge of physical science.

Evolution and Faith.

Take for example the present controversy, which so sorely troubles many good people. The faith that God created the universe is a purely religious faith. The method by which the universe came into existence is a purely scientific inquiry. Religion, having drawn its faith from other sources, that "in the beginning God created," may well wait in patience and expectancy for all the information, which the laboratory and the observatory can contribute as to "how" the universe was created. Science may reveal a story of countless centuries, through which, with patience and order, electrons and protons builded the infinite variety, wonder, and beauty, of this universe. But there science stops. It cannot answer, and does not pretend to answer the question, what is in, or back of, this electric energy, which gives it such intelligent direction, and permeates it with such miraculous power, that it blooms into the beauty of a rose, or gets itself born into the personality of a Plato?

Religion believes that God created the universe. But to make its faith in that God dependent upon any theory of how, or when, He created, is to invite disaster. The church for centuries taught that the earth was the center of the universe, and that sun, moon and stars revolved around it. It taught that the universe was made 6,000 years ago. When the careful study of scientific searchers after truth made their revelation of almost limitless scope and time, religion was not called upon to give up its faith in the God of creation, but had simply discovered a larger God in the expansion of time and space.

Quality of Faith.

From this standpoint, what folly it is to seek by the authority of the state to direct the teachers in our schools what science they must teach. It is not discounting our legislators, to say that they are utterly incompetent to determine these questions, on which only the most learned scientific scholars can speak with any degree of authority. On the other hand, we can say with still more emphasis, that we are unwilling to grant to any legislative body the authority to speak for us in the vital questions of religion. If they are given the right to interpret the book of Genesis, and make their interpretation a law of the land, then they would also have the right to interpret the gospel of Matthew, or the epistle to the Romans, and make these interpretations legal.

It is time we should question the quality of our faith. Is it of such a feeble nature that we need to have it backed by the authority of the state? My deepest faith is in the presence of the living God, as revealed in Jesus Christ. I believe that He is in the movement of the planets, and in the germinating seedling. I have a faith that He reveals Himself through the minds of His children, and that we need not fear to search for truth in any realm of the universe. It is true, and always will be true, that the forms of our faith, and our interpretations of God and His universe, will change with the larger discoveries which we may make, but the God of this universe will become clearer and dearer to us with every discovery.

Life's Sunset

I

Ah, swift the years have passed away,
Life's sunset shines on me today;
And yonder now I see afar,
The glory of Life's evening star,
Slow melting into coming night,
Veiled by sunset's lingering light;

II

How fair the sunset sky appears!
How soft the twilight of my years!
Surely yon evening star must be
The star of Love's eternity—
For me, therefore, death means not night.
Which follows sunset—Love is light.

Sullivan Reiterates Prohi Question Will Be the Chief Democratic Issue

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, February 12.—(Special Correspondence.)—William G. McAdoo's speech for enforcement of the prohibition law and specifically against nullification, before the Ohio State Bar association at Toledo, has given rise to two weeks of political discussion. This has been of a kind and amount not paralleled in this generation at any time so distant from the actual business of selecting a presidential candidate. One would suppose this is February, 1928, four months before the democratic convention, instead of February, 1927, 16 months before the convention. The digging up of old figures about the relative strength of McAdoo and his great rival, Smith; the making of new estimates, the discussion in the senate, the quantity of editorial discussion—and especially the heat of it, has been like the eve of a convention. All of which has its own meaning.

The New York Times used a page of its space to print McAdoo's speech in full, and the following day devoted another page to discussion of the relative strength of McAdoo and Smith, including dispatches from The Times' correspondents in all the important state capitals about the feeling of democratic state leaders throughout the country. The net of this information was summed up by The Times in a statement which said in part:

That there is "a dwindling of the strength of William G. McAdoo";

That there is "a marked increase of the strength of Governor Alfred E. Smith";

That there is "a growing belief in some sections of the country, the belief neither Mr. McAdoo nor Governor Smith should be nominated, but an end made of the McAdoo-Smith feud for the sake of party harmony"; and

That "prohibition will be a leading issue in the next national convention of the party."

The fourth and last of these conclusions rather negatives the hope portrayed in the third as being held in some sections of the country, the belief that "an end should be made of the McAdoo-Smith feud for the sake of party harmony." If dry vs. wet is to be the leading issue, it will follow pretty surely that McAdoo and Smith will be the leading candidates. It is just because Smith symbolizes the wets and McAdoo the drys that the McAdoo-Smith feud exists.

The purpose of those who want to retire McAdoo and Smith from the race is to find a compromise candidate. The compromise would be, not between Smith as a man and McAdoo as a man, but between wet and dry. On that no compromise is possible. Who can name a man that can be put forward for the democratic nomination satisfactory at once to the wets and the drys? It would be possible to name prominent democrats not conspicuously identified with either the wet or the dry side; but the instant such a man is proposed for the democratic nomination, his present convictions and past affiliations will be searched minutely. Aside from his past record, he will be asked how he stands as of today. To decline to answer, or attempt to straddle, would make him a laughing stock.

Nevertheless, The Times' conclusions and its information are sound—with some probable exceptions where they deal with the relative strength of McAdoo and Smith. The only information that can be assembled quickly about the democratic situation must come necessarily from party leaders, and the party leaders are, as they are here represented, overwhelmingly in favor of a cessation of the McAdoo-Smith feud and the nomination of another man. The Times, in the brief period it had, could only query its correspondents in state capitals. Those correspondents, in turn, had only time to see the local party leaders; and these were certain to report sentiment in favor of a cessation of the feud. Any poll taken of all the democratic officeholders in the country, and all the democratic party officials, would be overwhelmingly in favor of the retiring of McAdoo and Smith and the naming of a third man. This is because officeholders and party officials are concerned mainly with victory, and the offices that attend victory. They think the McAdoo-Smith feud is a bar to victory as against the republicans—hence it should be ended.

"The Times" feels justified in making, from the reports of its correspondents, a summary which says that "the most notable feature of the canvass is the apparent collapse of the McAdoo machine, which carried him to a peak of 530 votes in the 1924 national convention." A table, state by state, printed by "The Times" under the heading, "Indications for 1928," gives Smith 490 votes in the convention and McAdoo 54 votes. This summary and these figures are likely to be more serviceable as a source of comfort to New York than as a forecast of actual results. The judgment of the writer of the present article is that as of today the relative strength of McAdoo and Smith does not vary as much as 10 per cent from what was their relative strength in the 1924 convention, when McAdoo had about 430 steadily dependable delegates, and Smith about 320.

Smith's strength is the easier to analyze, and "The Times'" analysis of it, up to a certain point, is indisputable. Smith, it is practically fairly certain, will have all of New York's 90 delegates. In the 1924 convention there were two defections from Smith to McAdoo. Even if they should be duplicated in 1928, as probably they will not, they would be negligible.

To New York's 90 add New Jersey's 28. These also Smith had in 1924. To New York and New Jersey add approximately 80 of the 88 delegates from the six New England states. Massachusetts, with its 36 delegates, will undoubtedly be for Smith. In the 1924 convention two or three of the Massachusetts delegates voted from time to time for McAdoo. The sufficient answer as to how the Massachusetts democrats felt about this is that the delegates who went to McAdoo have since been in a practical sense, repudiated by the Massachusetts democratic organization. One, the only woman delegate ever elected to the Massachusetts legislature, was defeated when she ran for renomination. Another saw his political fortunes ruined. The Massachusetts democrats are overwhelmingly wet and over-

Controlling Elements That Must Enter Into Successful Marketing

Editor Constitution: Your admirable editorial, "The Marketing Problem," in Wednesday's Constitution inspired by a letter from W. E. Bobo, has been read and digested by the writer who considers both the editorial and the letter most sensible discussions of a very important topic—the satisfactory disposition of the Georgia farmers' products.

To jump into waters already so muddied by indecisions, and apparent ignorance of the vital essentials of marketing, may seem foolhardy, but, for the good of Georgia, here's my little contribution to the cause.

There are six primary elements, in my mind, to be considered in disposing of the Georgia farmers' food products (food distribution is my business) which are: 1, Quality production; 2, proper preparation for market; 3, preserving facilities; 4, regulated distribution through established channels; 5, advertising, and 6, financing.

1. Quality production is solely a problem of the farmer. If all other factors inform the farmer on their needs and requirements, he will produce the kind of goods needed.

2. Proper preparation for market is an element of which the Georgia producer shows an appalling ignorance, due possibly to his inexperience in marketing. Modern and practical methods of packing and preparation for market of food products is one of the biggest needs of Georgia food producers. The U. S. agricultural department and the Georgia agricultural department could make their service to the farmer really worth while by investigating these methods and by disseminating the practical knowledge thus acquired to the producers. The failure of Georgia producers to use such methods is an assurance that the agricultural departments have been lax thus far in dispensing this very necessary knowledge.

Georgia food producers would have their eyes opened if they could visit a modern commission house and see for themselves just how other producers pack and care for the products they ship. They would then realize why Georgia food products of real merit—when they are shipped—do not bring as great a price as similar products from other states.

Grading and standardization all come under this heading and, until the Georgia producer learns how to standardize, grade and pack his food products properly, he cannot expect to have preference shown to his products, even by Georgia distributors and consumers.

3. Preserving, in the sense meant, has little to do with the distribution of the raw, quality product, but some outlet needs to be found for the food products that do not quite come up to standard or for the surplus products that may have been kept off the market to prevent glutting. Canning and preserving plants and dry kiln process plants should be erected in the producing centers to supply off-season demand. Such plants are operated on a cooperative basis in many states. Why not Georgia?

4. Regulated distribution through established channels is the big essential for the disposition of Georgia food products. It can be done; it is being done in other states, and it brings prosperity to the producers and the entire state. Why should the retailer purchase a Georgia food product at a respectable price when he knows the producer will glut the market with that product as soon as it can be shipped to the peddlers in the town or city where the retailer does business? Why should the retailer or jobber attempt to build sales on a Georgia product when he has no assurance that the supply on it will be regular. Steady, regular supply of a consistent quality product is one of the demands of the trade. A famine today and a glutted market tomorrow makes a market unreliable and means loss to the producer, to the distributor who depends on that market, and to the great consuming public. Here is the big job for a real cooperative marketing association.

5. Local or state-wide distribution of a product is insufficient to fulfill the production of a state with the great agricultural possibilities of Georgia, and the best means whereby markets can be created in other states is by advertising. The right kind of advertising properly supported in invaluable to the producers.

6. Financing is another great problem. Possibly it has no place in this little dissertation, but it seems so vital to the Georgia bankers that their state-wide organization has a permanent committee striving to aid the producers of Georgia. Without doubt some means needs to be found to help the farmer get away from the land-owner-demagogues who will not permit diversification and to be freed of the unthinking or very selfish small-town bankers who, from information gathered, will not back the farmer in anything except on a straight cotton crop basis.

Now, here's a suggestion for The Atlanta Constitution. You've done a lot of fine editorial writing; why not start something concrete and practical to help Georgia's food production grow and prosper?

Commence in Atlanta with a committee of business men who are considered experts in their respective lines and let them work out a workable solution for the present muddle. Don't make the mistake of selecting men solely because they are public-spirited; too often such men permit their zeal to predominate over logic when they have no great knowledge of the subject and make glaring mistakes of judgment.

Choose a committee to be composed of one representative producer each of three or four different food products—producers who have the confidence of other producers; a representative or two of the Georgia Association; a representative of the state department of agriculture; a representative of one or more of the railroads; two wholesale commission men and three local retailers; a couple of bankers; a couple of advertising experts and representatives of the press. Choose public-spirited men to represent each factor necessary to help put Georgia on the map as a prosperous agricultural state and, if any of them are too selfish to give of their time and knowledge, replace them with others. The woods are full of men in each branch of food distribution and every type of industry and commerce who are anxious to do what they can to help Georgia and the Georgia producer.

Let's quit talking so much about what we can do, or what we should have done, and do something. Let's show the rest of the world that Atlanta isn't the windbag so many jealous cities consider us to be by starting something concrete and definite that will be of lasting benefit to our state. Let's make Georgia a food producing state, second to none other.

If The Atlanta Constitution leads the group of practical business men mentioned in the suggested committee to open the Atlanta market to Georgia food products, the leading newspapers of other Georgia cities will quickly follow suit and the ultimate aim of bringing prosperity to Georgia and Georgia producers of food products will quickly be reached.

The organization represented by the writer is ready and eager to aid in any constructive, practical plan or movement along this line.

Sunday Health Talks

OLD FOGYISM AT WORK.

One of the two physicians in a backwoods hamlet in what I believe is the most illiterate state in the union, tells a bereaved husband and father that the little wife and mother, who has gone where there is less superstition and ignorance, let us hope, in all probability contracted tuberculosis in the following manner:

"The house was entirely new when we moved in, except one room, and my wife was not satisfied with that room, so one day when I was at work she tore the wall paper off and scraped the walls and repapered it herself. Now some years previously that room had been occupied by two persons who had TB. Others had lived there since, and did not get TB, just previous to our occupancy, but they never scraped the walls or repapered the room. My physician thinks that my wife in all probability contracted the disease while removing the wall paper. He has since advised me to be very careful when I undertake any personal work in that room. This has caused me no little grief, both as to the past and as to the future, for this house is to be my home, come what may. The doctor's opinion makes myself and my home more isolated, for most of the people think it is a dangerous place to live . . . In our community there is a good dwelling which it has been impossible to rent for years, because sometime ago a victim of cancer lived there. . . . But I feel a kind of remorse, even though my wife renovated the room without my knowledge that she intended to do so. I would give all I possess or will ever possess to know she did not contract TB in this house. . . . But I can't see how else she could have contracted it. When she was in her teens she nursed an aunt who had it, but that was 30 years ago. . . ."

Well, my friend, I'll tell you that your wife certainly never contracted tuberculosis from that room or from anything she did in the way of renovating the room, and I tell you further that the physician who thought that your wife "in all probability" got the disease in that way is an awful old fogy to be saddled with, but I guess they don't believe in evolution back there in the hills anyway.

If we know anything about the cause of tuberculosis today we take a different view of the way in which the disease is commonly contracted. There isn't any evidence worth worrying about that tuberculosis is ever conveyed through or by wall paper or any such inanimate object or material or surface. The ordinances or health board regulations which have been adopted here and there, relating to the occupancy of rooms which have been occupied by patients with tuberculosis are mere hysterical bits of pseudo sanitary hokum conceived and applied under the urge of these new fangled social service hounds who take a course six weeks in a so-called summer school or an oil magnate's subsidized university and then settle down in a comfortable berth at a snug salary to tell the poor ignorant folks how to live.

Ordinary soap and water house cleaning is absolutely adequate preparation for the occupancy of a room which has been occupied by a tuberculosis patient, in any and all circumstances. No renovation is necessary unless this would be desirable irrespective of sanitary considerations. Any stinks or smokes or frightful colors the alleged health authorities may prescribe as essential disinfection or fumigation of such premises are a sinful extravagance and a distressing kind of hoodwinking and blinding of the people vitally concerned, a blinding of the people to the real sources of danger. Any health board or department which insists on such performances in the case of premises that have been occupied by a tuberculosis patient is a board of ignoramuses or political highbinders and a disgrace to the community afflicted. I can't understand just why it is, but it seems that the most egregious old fogyism in many communities is to be found on the local board of health, if any.

Infancy and childhood or early youth is the time of infection in tuberculosis (your wife was in youth when she nursed her aunt); later youth or adolescence is the time of super infection, activity, or lighting up of the latent or smouldering focus of infection.

Many of us get our dose of tuberculosis in infancy or early childhood, and peter along rather uncertainly and not only survive but eventually grow up in pretty fair health, though we harbor the latent focus of tuberculosis somewhere in the body, as a von Pirquet or other tuberculin test shows.

Some of us go on through quite along life without any alarming manifestations of activity of the tuberculosis. Some of us have such manifestations at 30 or 40 or 50 but we ascribe the disturbed health to almost anything rather than tuberculosis, especially in view of the obvious fact that we don't waste away or cough our heads off. Maybe we even find a wonderful cure of some kind, for whatever we imagine ails us. Then a few of us, a remarkably small proportion of those of us who have latent or smouldering tuberculosis, considering the shamefully unhygienic lives we lead, finally develop active tuberculosis when we are old enough to know better, yet not too old to let the old imagination have a free reign and blame it on the wall paper or something.

If that house you mention, friend, where somebody had cancer, is left vacant because people are afraid to live in it, your community is indeed to be pitied. Does the old fogy physician lend his immoral support to that superstition, too? He must be beloved of the benighted people, that bird. Few myths or superstitions have less to rest upon than the one that cancer is in any way communicable. There is precisely the same danger in living with, caring for, nursing or associating with a person afflicted with an ordinary boil or a festering thumb or an "ulcerated" tooth as there is in coming into such contact with one who has cancer. Ordinarily soap and water cleanliness is ample sanitary precaution to take against the slight danger of contracting ordinary septicemia (blood poisoning) from the case of boil or the case of cancer.

That old fogy physician fairly represents a class of just about his caliber in the medical profession everywhere, in the cities as well as the backwoods towns. How unscientific, illogical and cruel his attitude is, should be clear to any thinking person. If there be any risk or danger involved in doing any work in or upon that room, it is certainly the physician's duty to lay down explicit directions about the proper removal of that danger, instead of trying to frighten this poor man and his family and cater to the popular scare by advising the man to "be careful." That advice is very much like the absurd advice old fogy health officers and some popular medical practitioners give about fresh air—be sure to get plenty of it but bewore if it happens to move. Yet some people are fond of such advice and even pay money for it. I have handed out plenty of hokum myself in my day, but I never could get the kick some physicians get out of telling patients to be careful about drafts. I can imagine how it feels, though, for every little while I have occasion to admonish Tony, the Irish Wop, about carelessly thrusting his curious nose between the jaws of some of these dinosaurs the neighbors around here keep: "Some day, you little son of a gun, you're gonna lose your head entirely!" But of course I don't charge the terrior anything for this advice.

When tuberculosis is transmitted from one person to another it is transmitted directly, as a respiratory or spray infection (or by kissing), and for such infection to occur in sufficient amount to establish a focus of disease in the victim it is necessary that the contact or association between patient and victim be (1) intimate or frequent or habitual and (2) prolonged. Nurse and patient, husband and wife, companions, fellow workers, roommates, parents and child, lovers, brother and sister, are instances of the kind of contact which presents an opportunity for infection with tuberculosis. Aside from the carrying of tubercle bacilli in such foods as milk, this is practically the only way the disease is likely to be transmitted and the only way that need ever concern anybody who wishes to avoid contracting the disease.

A tuberculosis patient who has had the great advantage of a sojourn in a tuberculosis hospital, sanitarium or camp knows how to take all necessary precautions against the possible spread of the disease to those who come in contact with him, and if such a patient is fairly intelligent, fairly conscientious and fairly able to help himself there is no danger involved in neighborly or friendly intercourse with him, that is, for adults. Children should never be permitted to come into intimate contact with a tuberculosis patient unless under the strictest supervision of physician and for some very exceptional reason.

Spray infection, in ordinary conversation, cannot occur if the visitor remains not less than five feet away from the patient. Of course the intelligent conscientious tuberculosis patient employs his handkerchief or other barrier to prevent spraying persons at a greater distance when he coughs or sneezes.

No tubercle bacilli are present in the expired air of a patient in any stage of the disease. The bacilli are carried only in the droplets of moisture or secretion in the spray which is given off to a distance of less than five feet in conversation, or to a distance of 10 or 12 feet in coughing or sneezing if a screen, handkerchief, or other barrier is not used to prevent it.

Books, clothing, flowers, musical instruments, toys, magazines, things of cloth or paper made by patients, none of these objects carries any danger whatsoever.

GEORGIA'S MOTTO

(Note—On the first colonial seal of Georgia was the expression, in Latin, "Not for themselves, but for others.")

No surer, finer foundation could be known
Than the unselfish spirit of the men
Who dreamed and planned and sacrificed and then
Builded the Colony; for rights their own
They cared but little; this and this alone
Inspired them: They would make and guarantee
An opportunity for those who, free
To live and labor, reaped where they had sown.
Thus founded, set between the older lands
And threatening southern foes, the Colony
Became the buffer, bulwark for the right,
Fending the menace with courageous hands,
Saving an infant nation—soon to see
Unselfish service reach its shining height!

Contract Bridge---The Newest Game

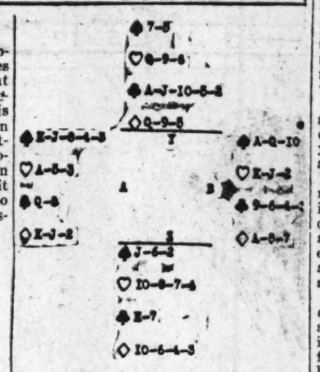

BY E. V. SHEPARD

(Bridge Authority and Author of Textbooks on the Game)

VIII. A DISADVANTAGE OF CONTRACT BIDDING.

Sometimes partner's feeling of obligation to show game probabilities causes him to assist so strongly that he prevents being shown a better declaration for the joint 26 cards of his side. This most commonly occurs when the original declarer holds a two-suiter. His partner is well able to support the suit first shown, but is even better able to support the second suit could it be shown without bidding too high. The following hand well illustrates this unfortunate happening:

An unfortunate lead of clubs gave A's adversaries five immediate tricks, after which the declarer won the remaining tricks, but he was penalized for going down one trick.

At auction it is probable that B would have jumped his partner's bid; at least he should not have done so; the final result at auction would have been 2-odd made at no-trump. But at contract there was a pretty chance for an advantageous shift to spades, had B been less strenuous in his raise. It is legitimate at contract to at once raise partner's unopposed no-trump one trick, although honors are not held in all suits, but it is unwise to follow the custom of giving two assists, unless reasonably certain that stops are held to all suits.

Had B bid only 2-no trumps, A's overcall with 3-spades would have said: "The backbone of my no-trump is spades; help them if you are strong there, otherwise shift me to 3-no trumps." The cards must be made to talk.

The bidding went: Z, 1-diamond; A, 2-clubs; Y, 2-spades; B, no-bid; Z, 4-spades. Y lost 2 trump tricks and a single trick each in clubs and diamonds, thus going down one trick. Had Z bid only 3-spade, Y could then have bid 4-hearts, at which declaration he could readily have gone game.

On the next hand Z passed; A bid 1-no trump; although unopposed, B bid 3-no trumps. Had B gone only 2-no trumps A would have bid 3-spades, but his partner's super-exuberant raise to 3-no trumps made A believe that B must hold honors in all four suits, so he let the bid stand.

Everyday Questions

ANSWERED BY

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman

Atlanta, Ga.

I am a Friend and my wife is an Anglo-Catholic. We cannot agree about a place of worship because I prefer a non-ritualistic service and she is attracted to a highly-ritualistic one. What do you advise us to do?

Cultivate the receptiveness of soul that worships in any sanctuary where reverence and sincerity are found.

The eternal speaks in divers ways to men and women. Its power pulsates in the Sistine Madonna. Its radiance shines through the storied windows of Sainte-Chapelle, in Paris, or St. Gudulph, in Brussels. Its harmonies are heard in the devotional music of the masters. Its messages are transmitted by the princes of prophecy who have kindled their torch at the central flame. The reticence of the Friends' meeting house and the vocal splendors of high mass alike invoke the divine Presence.

Three concrete instances of this statement are among my fixed recollections. The first was a Salvation Army service conducted by Mrs. Catherine Booth, the "mother" of the Salvation Army; the second occurred in a Quaker conventicle, where John Bright was present and the silence was eloquent of religion's sublime mysteries; and the third was a service at Westminster Abbey led by its incomparable choir and with Phillips Brooks in the pulpit.

Inspiration and strength are derived from the manifold sources which these and variant types of worship contain. It should not be difficult for you to agree upon their mutual benefit. The husband can remember that the Friend's approach to the Ancient of Days may be aided by those appeals to the senses which enrich the spirit. The wife can remember that it is a facile transit from pure adoration to mere asthetic pleasure. The religious conditions prevailing in both of you determine the values of different forms of worship.

Tilton, N. H.

What encouragement can you give to a man of fair education but reduced in circumstances who has to endure the neglect or—still worse—the patronage of those more fortunate in temporal affairs? I am sensitive and suffer keenly from a sense of personal injustice and the detestable snobbery around me.

Your discord may be due to a divided self, in which case its unification will lessen your consciousness of the neglect or the patronage of others. No person is negligible who is harmonized within. Why not locate this disturbance in your own heart rather than in your surroundings?

So long as you regard external conditions or other people as the sources of your trouble it will increase rather than diminish. But once you obtain self possession and self control follows, you can handle your circumstances to far better account and smile at the ways of snobs and parasites.

Think of the genuine impartiality of Jesus. He discarded conventional classifications and listed all men and women as human beings and children of God, while emphasizing the distinction which character and character alone creates. It was His purpose to release the imprisoned splendor in every soul. He pursued this purpose not as an impractical visionary but as an inspired idealist. Follow His example and teaching. Establish right relations at the center and neither social barriers nor bugbears will vex you. Self-respect without self-conceit insures respect for and from your fellow men and women.

Paris, France.

I wonder if you can name a book written by a layman for laymen of the thoughtful type who are troubled by doubts about matters of belief? I do not find what I want in the average volumes produced by preachers or theologians, because they usually assume more than I am able to concede as true. A word of advice will be greatly esteemed.

Why not try your British neighbor, Clutton Brock? His latest brief and unpretentious volume of essays supplies nutritious meat for the hungry inquirer. It was written by one who, knowing he was near death, was bent on an open confession. Its gist is that revelation must be personal to be real, something one sees and owns for himself because it is verifiable in his own experience.

The author insists that the present difficulties of religious faith are its opportunities, and that these must be met, not by repeating discredited traditions, but by restating the claims of the spiritual life in terms which commend themselves to minds molded by scientific methods.

I will not anticipate your pleasure in reading these essays, except to add that they are packed with suggestive ideas weightily expressed. The book goes far to sustain the claim that the simple verities of religion are complementary to those of science, that they furnish their counterpoise, and like them, can be universally apprehended when clearly thought out and presented.

SULLIVAN REITERATES PROHIBITION IS ISSUE

whelmingly in favor of Governor Smith.

With Connecticut it is the same. The Connecticut democrats are divided between those who are crazy for Smith and those who are merely for Smith. Connecticut's 14 delegates will be for Smith. So will Rhode Island's 10. So, probably, will Vermont's eight. New Hampshire and Maine will be divided. To say that Smith should have 80 out of New England's total of 88 is a fair estimate of present conditions.

The next state claimed by Smith's friends as a large source of strength is Pennsylvania. That state has 76 delegates. In the 1924 convention about half of them were for Smith, the number varying on different ballots. But whether Smith will have half the Pennsylvania delegates in the next convention remains to be seen. It is true that the two big cities in Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, contain many democratic voters of the type likely to be strongly for Smith. Some of the several smaller cities in Pennsylvania are the same. The head of the democratic organization in Pennsylvania, the democratic national committeeman, Joseph F. Guffey, is one of the principal Smith supporters in the country.

As against all this, it is to be remembered that in the election last November an outstanding democratic dry, William B. Wilson, former secretary of labor in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet, almost defeated the republican candidate, William S. Vare, for the senate. But for the vote in Vare's thoroughly controlled republican stronghold of Philadelphia this democratic dry would have come to the United States senate from a state which ordinarily is as republican as Mississippi is democratic.

"The Times" reports that "Ohio, with 48 votes, is generally expected to present Governor Donahey, but, according to a dispatch from Cleveland, the state will really be for Governor Smith."

A democratic delegation from Ohio that would be first for Governor Smith, of New York, and then for Governor Donahey, of Ohio, or the other way round—would be a marvel of political dexterity. And that kind of dexterity is the sort that is going to be difficult to practice in the growing intensity of the fight between wets and drys. Governor Smith, of New York, of course, is the outstanding candidate of the wets. Governor Donahey, of Ohio is, next to McAdoo, the outstanding candidate of the drys. If McAdoo should not be a candidate, Donahey would be the leading dry candidate and the beneficiary of much of McAdoo's dry following. Donahey, as governor of Ohio, and as one who has shown himself a sturdy vote-getter, should be expected to have some influence in the selection of the delegation from Ohio. To the extent that he has any such influence, and to the extent that the Ohio democrats really want to put forward this favorite son of theirs, the Ohio delegation should be dry.

Another expression more kin to the hot hopes of the wets than to the cold facts, comes from California. The dispatch from that state quotes Henry H. McPike, described as chairman of the state democratic organization, as saying: "The democrats here do not want a repetition of 1924, and there is sentiment for an uninstructed delegation."

If McAdoo is a candidate it would be unheard of for his state to fail to give him a delegation instructed for him and loyal to him.

The fundamental fact that determines most of the other facts is that there is a nation-wide fight between drys and wets. That fight grows in intensity; it will express itself wherever opportunity offers, and the arena for one certain opportunity is the race for the democratic presidential nomination. The wets have made the challenge. Necessarily they are in that position. Since "dry" is in the constitution and in the law, those who propose a change are in the position of challenger. If the wets had been artful they might have restrained themselves from forcing the fight. The senatorial investigation which the wets brought about last April, and the newspaper polls that accompanied it, was, as respects many parts of the south and west, the first information the drys had that a fight was on.

In the absence of an open fight the delegates to the national convention might have been chosen perfunctorily. In that case, many delegates would be local party workers and leaders who look, above everything else, to victory over the republicans. Delegates of that kind would have been partial to compromise, or even susceptible to arguments that Smith, being so apparently capable of carrying New York and other large eastern states against the republicans, would be the best nominee.

But there is no complacency, and no quiet. It was hardly possible for the conditions to be such as to let a perfunctorily chosen convention assemble. In any event, the wets followed the other course. Every dry voter got warning a year ago that the fight is on. McAdoo's Toledo speech was a forceful reminder of it. The cleavage is as celar as anything in politics can be. Every delegate to the next democratic convention will be either a dry, or else a wet, known to his constituents as such, elected as such, and bound to act in good faith on pain of the sort of resentment his neighbors would visit upon him.

It does not follow, necessarily, that every dry delegate will also be a McAdoo delegate primarily. The main tug-of-war between drys and wets, between the leading dry candidate and the leading wet candidate, will be attended by decisive roll calls on platform, on adopting or rejecting the two-thirds rule, on choosing the chairman of the convention. On all that the drys must be united for the excellent reason that divided they will perish.

This Is Sunday the 13th; Are You Fully Protected

Superstitious or not, you'd best give a little thought to the growing accident wave that threatens your life, your earning capacity and the lives and health of your wife and children.

Bad luck or carelessness or just a natural outgrowth of a complex civilization—it makes no difference what causes the thousands of accidents that are sweeping this land from end to end. They are happening every day; and there seems to be no way of avoiding them.

Will you become a victim; does death or loss of health and limbs await you? You cannot foretell, but if you are wise, you'll protect yourself financially against privation that follows disaster.

Are your properly insured; are your loved ones safeguarded against this sort of thing?

Get your protection now; and get it cheapest and best through The Constitution's great offer.

This $7,500 travel, $2,000 auto and $1,000 pedestrian accident policy is issued only to subscribers of the daily and Sunday Constitution and immediate dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 15 and 70 at $1.25 per policy per year. Open to both old and new subscribers.

One who is now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, or will subscribe for same through carrier in Atlanta and suburbs, or through an out-of-town carrier or dealer, paying for the paper weekly, monthly or otherwise, is a subscriber, and is eligible.

Those taking the daily and Sunday Constitution by mail either through a post office or rural route delivery, and all those subscribing through the twin word building contest for one year are eligible by paying $1.25 per year per policy above the subscription price.

CONVENTION-A-DAY MARK SET FOR MONTH

A convention for every day will be the average established for February in Atlanta, it is announced by Fred Houser, executive secretary of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau, which is working with various organizations to complete arrangements and stimulate attendance.

Among the most important February meetings will be the Southern Students conference on international relations, set for February 24-25, which will assemble about 1,000 students from southern colleges. David Lockmiller, of Emory university, is president of the organization, and arrangements for the conference are in the hands of W. H. Jones, of Emory, head of the Atlanta unit.

The conference of southeastern representatives of the Chevrolet Motor company, on February 28, is expected to bring nearly 1,000 dealers and salesmen for business discussions.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance company will hold a convention of 200 representatives on February 25.

About 50 visitors are expected to attend the district conference of the American Business clubs, to be held at the Henry Grady hotel Saturday, February 19, with an elaborate entertainment program. E. E. Ruffin, of Atlanta, is governor of the district, which comprises Georgia, Florida and North Carolina.

Numerous small meetings, drawing an aggregate of hundreds of visitors, make up the one-a-day average. Secretary Houser also announces the booking of the interstate oil mill superintendents' convention and exhibit for June 6, to assemble about 250 visitors at the auditorium.

DRUGGISTS WILL MEET WEDNESDAY AT ANSLEY

Walter O. Foote, president of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, will be principal speaker at monthly meeting of the Atlanta Retail Druggists' association, Wednesday night, at the Ansley hotel, on the subject "Cutting Retail Operating Expenses."

In addition to Mr. Foote's address A. R. Munn, Sinclair Jacobs and T. C. Marshall will deliver 10-minute talks on the subject of "Cutting Retail Drug Store Operating Expenses."

Valentine

Buried deep down in her trunk, with bits of yellow lace,
And ribbons from a party dress, and fragrantly, a trace
Of lavender and old perfumes, a crimson velvet rose.
Forget-me-nots the color of the summer twilight's close . . .
Hidden deep with treasured things and mellow memories,
Of girlhood days and happy ways
and youthful ecstasies,
I found a yellowed Valentine, mellowed now with tears—
A Valentine her heart had kept through all the toiling years!

A tiny heart of crimson hue, the glory of her lips,
A lovely row of lace as soft as her pale fingertips,
A spray of valley lilies sweet, and purple fleur de lis
And roses crowding on the heart
a crimson melody!
And now through tears I finger it,
this Valentine of hers,
As though I tread on holy ground, and in my heart there stirs
A memory of long ago, a dream of love divine,
When tenderly I asked her heart to be my Valentine!

—DANIEL WHITEHEAD HICKY.

The Harder Task.

I

I do not stint and save and dole my sweetest,
Most gracious manners for the casual guest,
To lavish then upon him that completest
Rich courtesy that waits on each behest;
If I am little tendernesses giving.
If I have little loves to gladly share,
They are for these, here with me daily living—
For home is best for sweet attentions rare.

II

If there's a deed that's full of stress and dangers
Which takes the best that I may have to give,
I scorn to dare before a host of strangers
In far-off fields where only aliens live;
My greatest task, my finest, choicest
labors,
I would essay before my dearest friend,
And I would choose that for my loving neighbors
Might be my best achievement's aim and end!

DEBONAIR MR. MENJOU IN HOWARD PICTURE

Hailed as one of the cleverest and most sparkling dramas ever offered, "Blonde or Brunette," a Paramount picture, starring Adolphe Menjou, comes to the Howard theater tomorrow.

The eternal triangle, that perennially popular motif of the drama, has in this instance been adroitly made fun of by no less a personage than the ultra-debonair Mr. Menjou, with Greta Nissen and Arlette Marchal, as his chief assistants.

The French have always been clever in making froth of a domestic oppressiveness and a neat Gaulic touch is much in evidence in this offering, which was adapted from the Parisian stage success, "An Angel Passes," by Jacques Bousquet and Henri Falk.

Menjou is the prosperous Paris barrister who tires of friends who make his apartment a free roadhouse. He decides to marry and settle down. Greta Nissen is the lucky girl.

The settling down is of brief duration. And Arlette Marchal, a brunette, decides that perhaps the gentleman doesn't fancy blondes after all. Thereupon a gay war ensues between both women and Adolphe's affection. The hilarious and farcial climax arrives when Menjou, divorced from one charmer and married to the other is marooned with both at a country estate where his hosts, unaware of the separation, insist on his staying in the wrong room. It takes two divorces and three marriages to get things straightened out to everybody's satisfaction and the straightening procedure from an audience's standpoint makes a delightful farce comedy highly preferable.

The stage attraction this week is the Publix presentation, "Barnyard Follies." This production was devised and staged by Paul Oscard. "Barnyard Follies" is described as a particularly clever fantasy in which nearly all the participating players are costumed to represent the most utilitarian of all birds of the feathered kingdom, commonly known as chickens. Staging his show in a typical rural setting, Mr. Oscard has contrived, it is said, a most unique and genuinely merry entertainment.

Other subjects on the program will include a delightful overture by the Howard Symphony orchestra under the direction of Joseph Littau, an organ specialty entitled, "How Do You Like Your Opera?" by Melvin P. Ogden, at the golden voiced Wurlitzer, a Pathe News reel and selected comedy.

ROCHE CROOK STORY FEATURED AT RIALTO

"Wolf's Clothing," starring Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller and with a smart supporting cast; "The Fighting Spirit," the sixth episode of the series, "The Collegians;" Pathe News, which changes to a new release on Thursday; and a musical score under the direction of Frank Turner, are on the program opening tomorrow at the Rialto theater for the week's entertainment of Atlanta theater fans.

Some extremely clever effects were obtained by Roy Del Ruth, the director, in filming "Wolf's Clothing." One of the most remarkable is the sequence in which the hero and heroine walk the clouds in the midst of a swirling crowd of revellers, on New Year's eve, along the great white way. The beauty of the scene suggests the Arabian Nights. It is open sesame to O. Henry's Bagbad-on-the-Subway.

The hero of the story, the ranting, roaring Barry Baline (played so zestfully by Monte Blue) is subway guard. He arrives at the highhat ball by way of a madman, a hurtling car, humor, nerve and some other things. And there it is that he meets fate, in the person of the pretty and preposterously magnificent Minnie Humphrey, a society girl who has escaped her chaperon and is seeking night club thrills. Each falls in love at first sight. But what wicked genii are to be met along the way—before the cross-grained old crook captain marries them at the point of a revolver.

It is on the event of the couple's first stroll in raucous, riotous Broadway when they metaphorically "walk on air" that Del Ruth's brilliant technique—makes their mental state so beautifully and amusingly tangible. "Wolf's Clothing" is adapted by Darryl Francis Zanuck from the Arthur Somers Roche story.

Movies

Hot dog! "Battling Butler" is now a ferocious fireman. Our old friend Buster Keaton (top left) is seen at the Grand this week in "The General." Well, we knew Adolphe Menjou was good, but two at one time; and a blonde and brunette at that, who are ordinarily about as friendly as the average cat and dog. Whew! Adolphe is seen in "Blonde and Brunette" at the Howard. Ben Lyon is seen at the Metropolitan in his latest, "The Perfect Sap." Evelyn Brent, top right, is starred in "Love's Greatest Mistake" at Keith's Georgia. Middle row left, —who's "agin" dancing? Monte Blue and Patsy Miller, for two, are not. They are seen at the Rialto in "Wolf's Clothing." The gent surrounded by Boy Scouts, and hist! a girl, is Fred Thompson, featured at the Palace in "A Regular Scout." Florence Vidor in "You Never Know Women" is the Cameo feature. Ha! who wants to be buttonholed? Greta Garbo is doing just that to Tony Moreno in "The Temptress" at the West End. Right—Buck Jones and Madge Bellamy, featured in "Lazybones" at the Tudor. Bottom row, left—Mildred Harris in "Wandering Girls" at the Alamo No. 2. Marie Prevost is seen in "Three Women" at the Tenth Street. Lon Chaney is featured in "The Road to Mandalay" at the Fairfax theater.

'MOTHER' OF SCREEN ELIMINATES MAKE-UP

The question of "make-up," usually the bane of screen players, has been solved by Belle Bennett, famous interpreter of maternal roles—she doesn't use any!

Miss Bennett, formerly of the Forsyth Players here who achieved world-wide fame by her work in "Stella Dallas," and who will be seen shortly in F. B. O.'s presentation of Kathleen Norris's well-known novel, "Mother," explains this by giving the credit to her remarkable natural coloring.

"As any photographer will tell you, the camera is the greatest liar in the world," says the noted star. "Due to the fact that certain shades and colors are not accurately represented on the film, most actors and actresses must use a certain amount of make-up to prevent their skins from appearing 'muddy' and dark, as does that of a person in an ordinary news-reel, for example. But in my own case, there is some peculiar quality of coloring in the skin that makes the use of make-up superfluous—although that's no especial credit to me. I must have been born that way."

'BOOB' ROLE FOR BEN IN BURLESQUE AT MET.

Ben Lyons has another "boob" role at the Metropolitan this week in "The Perfect Sap," an appealing mixture of burlesque and drama, which pokes a good bit of fun at the mystery plays of the stage.

As the tortoise-shell adorned son of a wealthy family, who wants to be a detective and "do things," Ben again places himself in the list of favorites.

Thrills, Too.

But "The Perfect Sap" isn't all comedy. There are as many thrills as the most melodramatic "Western" in it and all the sumptuous settings of a fashion show, as well.

"The Perfect Sap" is one of those rare combinations of comedy, mystery, drama and romance that the picture producers turn out once in a blue moon.

The story is taken from "No Herbert," Howard Irving Young's stage success, and has lost nothing and gained not a little, in its transition from the stage to the screen.

Lyon as Herbert Alden takes up a correspondence course in Sherlocking, breaks in a house "to see how criminals work," meets up with some real burglars there, is mistaken for "The Colonel," a notorious safe-cracker, and falls in love with a pretty girl, played by Pauline Starke, whom he believes is a member of an underworld gang.

How Ben outwits a "brains-behind-the-gang" crook, posing as a society man, and wooing his sister, and wins the hand of Polly, the pseudo-crook, forms the plot for one of the most entertaining pictures this town has had for many a month.

Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra will present Suppe's "Beautiful" Galathea" for the overture. The musical theme for the feature photoplay is neutral in character with "I Found You" by Goodman as the principal theme. The extra screen attractions will include a new Whirlwind comedy featuring Charles Bowers and titled "Now, You Tell One," and the latest issue of the Metropolitan News and Views. This typical Metropolitan program is certain to prove attractive to Atlanta playgoers and it is expected that large crowds will be in attendance at every performance throughout the week.

Following the completion of "Who Goes Where," Frank Griffin, who also wrote this comedy, will turn his attention to a new picture entitled "Maid to Order."

'DON JUAN' FILMED AFTER MUCH RESEARCH

Only those who were actively indentified with the actual writing and filming of "Don Juan," Warner Brothers' film drama, starring John Barrymore, which is billed at the Metropolitan theater, for showing soon, can have any adequate conception of the research, care and attention to details that marked every step taken in the project.

Before Bess Meredyth, who wrote an original screen version of the legend, began work on her script there was carried on by the research staff of Warner Brothers an exhaustive investigation into the customs, fashions and foibles of the Spaniards and Italians of the fifteenth century.

The impressive sets used in the production were as carefully designed and built as if they were going to be permanent structures. The reproduction of the Spanish-Moorish castle hall followed a careful study of the classic architecture of the Renaissance. Even the doors, which convey a feeling of strength and solidity, are the real thing. Fifth-three of these great doors were made for the play, varying from a height of seven feet to a height of twenty feet and in width from three feet to seven feet. These are carved in the manner of the period.

Copy Borgia Palace

Some of the most striking scenes of "Don Juan" are taken in faithful reproductions of the Borgia palace and its approach and courtyard. The luxurious villa of Don Juan is copied from that of a gentleman of the period who enjoyed a reputation of a similar nature. The greater part of the prologue is enacted in a castle modeled after an historic old Moorish edifice in Spain.

Many acts of daring occurred during the filming of the various scenes besides those which register on the screen. In the filming of a love scene in the dressing room of Adriana (played by Mary Astor), as Don Juan came through the tall recessed window, the enormous pane of glass shattered, showering over him. Barrymore went right on with the scene as if nothing were happening, while the cameraman ground away steadily. It was just luck that Barrymore came through the scene without harm.

Wid Cunning will be production manager on Babe Ruth's initial First National starring vehicle, "Babe Comes Home,' in which Anna Q. Nilsson will have the leading feminine role.

PRODUCTION STARTS ON BABE RUTH FILM

Babe Ruth, idol of American baseball, is to take his place upon the screen. Contracts signed recently give Ruth's services to First National Pictures as co-star of "Babe Comes Home," according to announcement by John McCormick, general manager of west coast production.

Anna Q. Nilsson will be co-starred with Babe Ruth and a prominent supporting cast is being chosen. The picture is based on the late Gerald Beaumont's "Said With Soap" and will be produced for First National by Wid Gunning.

Production has already started, so that Ruth may have plenty of time to join the New York Yankees for spring training. It is further announced that Ted Wilde, who directed Harold Lloyd's current comedy, "The Kid Brother," will wield the megaphone for "Babe Comes Home." Wilde was for years one of the principal comedy-constructors for Lloyd's organization and has an intimate knowledge of the essentials to successful direction, especially along comedy and human interest lines.

Coming?

All of the very new has worn off the Vitaphone, and it has become permanently settled as an amusement feature in New York. Before long the Vitaphone should invade the "sticks," which is, theatrically, anything outside of New York.

STAGE

Square 'round; move up to the fire, ladies and gentlemen, and meet "The Judge's Husband," (top, left) the William Hodge success at the Erlanger theater this week. The two ladies all decked and bespangled up are Edith and Bee Capps, featured in the Publix stage unit, "Barnyard Follies," at the Howard. Well, whoozis? Must be Hello Aloha, but no, her name's Carmen Rooker, and she's featured at Keith's Georgia this week. Lower left—Lawrence Keating, of the Forsyth Players, who offer this week "Going Crooked." The next scene in which two young ladies are seen pirating or pirouetting (all from the point of view) about the couple is taken from the Music Box Revue, which comes to the Erlanger week of February 21. Clinton Rooney and band (lower right) are headliners at Loew's Grand.

BIG TIME PROMISED AT KEITH'S GEORGIA

A big time vaudeville show which contains a sprinkling of all the elements that make a good program opens at the new Keith-Georgia theater Monday. The stage offerings will be supplemented on the screen by a Paramount film production of Liberty magazine's great serial story, "Love's Greatest Mistake."

Joseph E. Howard, famous composer of more than a hundred songs, and producer of several revues, will top the show with his 1927 musical and dancing revue. Howard's company of principals includes Pauline Zenova, the DeFay sisters and the Laster brothers, all dancers of note. The company is said to be one of the best on the circuit and a worthy headliner for a bill of star acts.

Bert Rome and Henry Dunn sing songs in a real vaudeville manner. One has a clear, fine tenor voice while the other is a resonant baritone. Both have appeared in musical productions; have been members of well known quartets and each is a musician of ability.

Jimmy Conlin and Myrtle Glass are up near the top of the list for comedy entertainers. Conlin is a writer and producer of sketches and his present vehicle, "24 hours in 15 minutes" is filled with funny situations which portray the courtship and marriage of two love-sick youngsters. The offering is presented in four scenes and is teeming with laughs.

Cromwell Knox is an English humorist who is making his first American vaudeville tour. In the halls of Europe Knox is a recognized headliner with a brand of humor which appeals to every audience and his success in America was assured on his opening night in New York.

Many and varied are the musical instruments used in the presentation of the McKenna trio offering of mirth and melody. They play and sing and have an unusually clever musical act.

Colleen in Capital.

The national capital will furnish the background for the action in Colleen Moore's forthcoming First National picture, "Naughty But Nice." The story is laid in a fashionable finishing school on the outskirts of Washington, D. C.

Reproduce Fight.

The historic "Dempsey-Through-the Ropes" scene in the Dempsey-Firpo fight has been reproduced for the screen in "The Patent Leather Kid," Richard Barthelmess' new First National starring picture, which Al Rockett is producing with Alfred Santell as director.

William Hodge Comedy Featured at Erlanger

William Hodge, characterized by a New York reviewer as "the dry, easy-going, likable, lazy old thing you've admired for years," will come to the Erlanger theater Monday, February 14, for an engagement of three nights with a matinee Wednesday, in his Chicago, Boston and New York comedy success, "The Judge's Husband." The New York supporting company and production will be seen here intact.

It is said that wherever the attraction has played it has delighted all classes of theatergoers and even hardened and ultrasophisticated New York critics placed their stamp of approval on Mr. Hodge's laugh-compelling play. A number of metropolitan reviewers, including the captious Allan Dale, have declared Mr. Hodge's opus to be Gilbertian and Barrie-like in its whimsical and satirical quality.

The story, in brief, deals with a woman judge, her husband in the enforced role of housekeeper and what happened to their flapper daughter. The female judge institutes divorce proceedings, accusing her husband of infidelity and the action culminates in the superior court where the husband acting as his own counsel appears before his wife who presides as judge at the trial—a unique scene made legally possible in accordance with one of the present laws of the state of Connecticut.

Many who have viewed the performance are struck with the careful attention to detail and the rounding out of each character, no matter how small. This is due to the direction of Mr. Hodge, who not only is the star, but author and director as well.

The star's acting method reveals a general deliberation of movement, an unstudied and natural way of doing things, a drawling voice, a habit of gazing humorously or sentimentally from eyes half closed and sleepy, and other equally distinctive characteristics. Yet in spite of this and in spite of his success and great popularity, no one of the theater has imitated him, consciously or unconsciously. Hodge is in a class by himself—he is inimitable.

Conspicuous in the supporting cast are Gladys Hanson, Ruth Lyons, Richard Gordon, Philip Rhodes Thorn, Marie Haynes and others.

Alamo No. 2.

Why do girls wander—and where do they go?

This is the problem of modern and rebellious youth which forms the plot of "Wandering Girls," the Columbia picture showing Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Alamo No. 2 theater.

Lovely Dorothy Revier plays the leading role of Peggy Marston, the small-town girl who runs away to a dance and finds herself in a breathless series of thrills. This role affords Miss Revier an opportunity to do some excellent dancing, for it was from the success of a professional dancer that the films won this popular actress.

Ralph Ince, the director, has selected an able supporting cast for "Wandering Girls," which includes Mildred Harris, Robert Agnew, Eugenie Besserer, William Welsh and Armand Kaliz. Dorothy Howell, who wrote "Remember" also wrote "Wandering Girls"

'Going Crooked' To Enthrall Stock Lovers at the Forsyth

Literally reeking with a wealth of color, deep-laid machinations and interwoven into a theme of human courage and perseverance rarely depicted, "Going Crooked," a great Golden play, will hold the spotlight this week at the Forsyth theater, with the famous Forsyth Players in presenting roles.

A summary of the fine story would be to betray the plot and lessen interest in it for the audience. Then, only enough is necessary to emphasize that the author has added another tremendous success to his long string and that Atlanta stock lovers will have an unusual opportunity to see a truly great show this week.

"Going Crooked," is nothing less than another smashing John Golden success, a play of humanness, deep-laid, will balanced and jammed with the eccentricities of fate, of the glamor of human kindness, of the appeal of a down-and-outer and his love for a helpless pal.

If these aren't elements that will strike a chord of responsiveness in a human heart, then one-half of this nation has been groping about and imagining they've been seeing things.

This week's play is one that has combined the best features of modern play material. It runs the gamut of emotions, it brings that tingle, that flush of blood to the cheek, that deep and absorbing interest, characteristic of Golden plays, that have made his offerings probably the outstanding among latter-day plays.

In "Going Crooked," the mystery holds perhaps the upper hand, although the love of a man for a faithful pal comes a close second. There is just enough of romance to punctuate its deeper moments and add the light, airy atmosphere to an otherwise strict drama.

Miss Ellis Baker, Miss Rhea Diveley, Miss Theodosia Shaler, John Warner, Gus Forbes, Alan Devitt, Lawrence Keating and others of the star cast of the Forsyth Players, will cast in roles exceedingly becoming and Atlantans will see them this week in something that is vastly different. The show should be a big success, a truly big one. Wherever it has played before enormous throngs have witnessed and fallen for its magic and deft influence. Atlantans love such plays as they will see in John Golden's "Going Crooked."

Matinees are given regularly on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at 2:30 o'clock, with nightly shows at 8:20 o'clock. The scale of prices will remain the same this week as have prevailed heretofore.

'MUSIC BOX REVUE' COMING TO ERLANGER

Irving Berlin's fourth edition of his popular "Music Box Revue," which will make its first Atlanta appearance at the new Erlanger theater on Monday night, February 21, when it will open a week's engagement at that gorgeous playhouse, is said to be filled with an abundance of good things, theatrically speaking. It offers everything that theater-goers might desire, such as a glistening variety and rapid succession of fun, dash, song, pictorial charm and kaleidoscopic color.

The "Music Box Revue" is a striking and eloquent example of the spectacular, charming and singular effects that may be obtained by a happy blending of lighting and harmonic color. The show is almost entirely pervaded with color—now scintillating, now glowing, now soft and warm, now tender and now prismatic, as it is during the finale of the first act. Some of the scenes made impressive by the effective alliance of blending lights and colors are "In Tokio," "Springtime," "The Trees," during which scene the tuneful "Shade of the Sheltering Tree" is sung; "Little Old New York," "Rock-a-Bye Baby," "Alice in Wonderland," and the brilliant finale of the show, "The Banquet."

The cast of players is a large one, numbering approximately one hundred, and includes Nyra Brown, Dave Burns, H. "Curley" Monnett, Louise Holmes, Ames Harper, Larry Beeson, Jenny Lind, Charlotte Granger, the Six Jolly Jesters, Snyder and Sifrit, the Lyon Sisters, Anita Bowles, Billie Fanning, Virginia Watson, Marie Cook, Colletta Dupont, Frank Dehaney and several others, together with a beauty chorus of 60, all under the age of 20.

The revue will be presented at the new Erlanger theater exactly as shown during the long engagement at the Music Box theater, New York. It will be given in two acts and 35 scenes of gorgeous splendor.

Matinees are announced for Wednesday and Saturday. Mail orders for the entire week's engagement are now being received. The box office seat sale starts Thursday morning.

Excellent light comedy, western thrillers, and a Lon Chaney character picture feature the screen menu at the Fairfax theater in East Point this week.

Connie in this, her latest picture, is seen as a young lady, traveling in Russia, who is mistaken for the Duchess of Buffalo, whoever that is, and the various difficulties and situations she finds herself in due to this mistake give the popular star opportunity to display a number of excellent reasons for her popularity as a comedienne.

Showing Wednesday only is "Senor Daredevil," a big-time western, starring Ken Maynard. "Senor Daredevil" is of such merit that it was widely shown in first-class motion picture houses all over the country.

Lon Chaney in "The Road to Mandalay," his latest picture, is billed on Thursday and Friday at the Fairfax theater. He has in "The Road to Mandalay," one of the most sympathetic roles of his career. RACE OF WOODBURNERS SEEN IN GRAND FILM

The famous race of "The General" and the "Texas," two noted woodburning locomotives used between Atlanta and Chattanooga during the war between the states, has been depicted on the screen, but in a delightful comic rather than tragic setting, in Buster Keaton's latest picture, "The General," which will be the feature picture offering this week at Loew's Grand theater. The picture is said to be the funniest ever produced with Keaton as star and is a massive and stupendous spectacle as well as an uproariously funny classic.

There are a thousand and one chuckles, roars and gasps in Buster's epic comedy of civil war days. For his initial feature as a United Artists star, the comedian has turned back the clock three-quarters of a century and brought the lighter chapters of the civil war to the screen.

Treating the comedy of war days without reverting to slapstick, Keaton manages to keep the action historically accurate as well as unusually mirth-provoking. He proves that battles, railroad wrecks, sky plots and war time love affairs have their laughs.

Buster has built the main plot of "The General" around an actual happening in the struggle between the states. When a band of northern raiders, disguised as travelers, stole a locomotive and penetrated into Confederate territory, creating havoc and temporarily disrupting the Confederates' military plans, a brave young southerner started out single-handed to foil them.

The frozen-faced star relives the adventures of the sixties and gets into all sorts of predicaments before he finally outwits the Federals, saves his kidnaped sweetheart and wins the plaudits of the populace below the Mason-Dixon line.

"The General" is produced on a massive scale. Thousands of troops are seen in action and real woodburning civil war locomotives and trains thunder over the rails. One of the engines in the picture crashes through a burning trestle to furnish the greatest thrill ever filmed. It is a recorded fact that this scene was made at a cost of $40,000 after the crash had been filmed in miniature at an outlay of $1,000.

"RED HOT MAMA" MIDNIGHT FROLIC FOR FRIDAY NIGHT

Boasting one of the biggest casts, and the finest talent seen in Atlanta this season, the "Red Hot Mama" company has been billed by Manager Tom Bailey at the 81 theater for a big midnight frolic for white people only Friday night at 11 o'clock.

"Red Hot Mama" is the fastest and most daring colored show of the season, according to advance reports. Gallie de Gaston that droll comedian, who has made quite a name for himself in several other appearances at the 81 last season, is featured. Gertrude Saunders, billed as "America's Colored Musical Comedy Queen," one of the big eastern stars to come south for the first time, is seen supporting DeGaston.

The entire show of "Red Hot Mama" is laid in two mammoth acts and ten gorgeous scenes. It is beyond doubt the most pretentious of the colored shows to appear this season at the 81. A large chorus, each member selected from the finest in the colored musical comedy realm, makes this feature of the show a thoroughly enjoyable. In selecting the chorus, each member was chosen with respect to attractiveness, singing ability and dancing ability, and each averages very near 100 per cent in each talent.

Other "names" in the cast include Billie Andrews, Marion Bradford, Percy Colston, Archie Cross, Alice Gorgas, Alonzo Fenderson, Gladys Scott and Wesley Hill.

All in all, it looks as if Manager Tom Bailey had an ace in the hole in the "Red Hot Mama" company, and a sell-out is expected. Tickets are now on sale at the theater and at Chess' place at Five Points.

BIG FIRE PICTURE BILLED AT HOWARD

Fire prevention is being brought dramatically and graphically to the attention of millions of Americans by "The Fire Brigade," the spectacular production which is coming to the Howard theater Monday, February 21.

"The Fire Brigade" is the gigantic picture produced with the direct aid and cooperation of the International Order of Fire Engineers, this order being personally represented at the studio by Jay W. Stevens, fire marshal of the state of California, during the making of the picture.

While the production is said to carry a powerful message in the cause of fire prevention, it is in no way a preachment, but a big entertainment. In the distribution and presentation of the big feature, the studio is receiving the assistance of the International Order of Fire Chiefs.

In accord with the size and dignity of such a production, a cast of motion picture favorites, such as are seldom seen in one production, interpret the principal roles. May McAvoy, star of "Ben Hur," and Charles Ray head the cast, which includes Holmes Herbert, Tom O'Brien, Eugenie Besserer, Bert Woodruff, Dan Mason and Erwin Connelly.

A large five-story building was erected at the studio, the burning of which is probably the most spectacular incident ever filmed for a motion picture. The Los Angeles fire department, headed by Fire Chief Scott, handled the burning of this building, bringing 32 pieces of fire-fighting apparatus into use.

In the orphanage fire, two hundred little girls from the Los Angeles orphanage appear. Consent for their work in the picture was secured after officials of the orphanage had been informed of the national importance of the picture by Chief Scott and executives of the studio.

Aside from these points of interest, other high lights in "The Fire Brigade" include a spectacular costume fete to raise money for the orphanage.

Cameo Theater.

Opening the week at the Cameo, playing Monday and Tuesday, is a delightful version of love and women, of the magic that love works in men and women, and the part it played in the lives of a portion of the almost eternal triangle, in "You Never Know Women." Starred in the picture are Olive Brook, Lowell Sherman and Florence Vidor. Rare humor, spicy love angles, and wholesome entertainment are featured.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Cameo offers Rudolph Valentino in one of his last and greatest pictures, "The Eagle," the story of a man who turned down an offer of luxury to avenge his father through banditry. Valentino, the perfect screen lover, outdoes himself in "The Eagle," which is a combination of drama, humor and the burning romance of a man who became a ruler to himself and obeyed no laws other than his own desires. Playing opposite Valentino in "The Eagle" is Vilma Banky who scored such unusual success in "The Winning of Barbara Worth," which was shown recenly in one of the larger theaters.

Friday and Saturday brings back to the Cameo Raymond Griffith in "You'd Be Surprised," one of this comedian's most delightful laugh successes. In this picture the funnny man goes through all sorts of hilarious adventures.

West End Theater.

(Four Return Features.)

Another story from the pen of the man who wrote "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Mare Nostrum" and other screen and book successes, has been transferred to the silver sheet. "The Temptress," one of Blasco Ibanez's most recent works, is billed at the West End theater for Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Greta Garbo, whose type of beauty is at once ravishing and highly original, is starred in this tale of old Spain.

Ibanez stories possess a quality and charm that is not to be found in any other author's works, and his stories are so written that they can easily be adapted to the screen without losing any of these qualities. "The Temptress" is an example of this.

Bessie Love, pretty, winsome and appealing, is featured in "Lovey Mary," which will be shown at the West End on Wednesday only. "Lovey Mary" is of that particular type of picture that made Mary Pickford famous and Miss Love portrays her character with as much skill and force as "The Sweetheart of the World" does. William Haines is seen opposite her.

Returned to the screen after tremendously successful premier, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" has scored a success rivaled only by that of the initial showing. It is billed at the West End for showings on Thursday and Friday. "The Four Horsemen" was brought back by popular demand after the death of Rudolph Valentino, and it shows that popular favorite in what many consider as his best role.

"Out of the Dust" is the feature to be shown on Saturday only.

The Tudor.

Opening the week at the Tudor is "Lazybones," starring the versatile Buck Jones, of western story fame, who appears in a picture which, while different from most of his offerings, is none the less extremely entertaining and lacks none of the pep and punch which so characterizes all his other pictures.

In "Lazybones" Jones appears as a man who had earned that nickname through shiftlessness, and who hid under a lazy exterior a heart of gold and a dauntless courage, as emphasized when he routes a band of Germans during the war, and earns for himself the name of a hero. Besides the action, the story has heart interest and real drama, with the star displaying more acting ability than was believed he possessed. Madge Bellamy, star of "Sandy" and "Summer Bachelors," also appears in this Jones production, as does Zasu Pitts and numerous other well known screen celebrities.

To wind up the week, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the Tudor offers Tom Tyler and his Pals in "Red Hot Hoofs" the story of a cowpuncher who gets mixed up with a heavyweight fighter and displays courage lacked by the man who made fighting his profession.

Showing with "Red Hot Hoofs" is the second of the series, "Bill Grimm's Progress" from the pan of America's premier doctor of slang, H. C. Witwer.

Palace Theater.

(Tom Mix Opens Week.)

Tom Mix, the greatest of all western stars, is featured at the Palace theater the first two days of this week in "The Yankee Senor," a picture replete with thrills and comedy of the pleasing kind that Tom Mix gets over. The story is unusually good and offers Tom the ultimate in displaying his bagful of stunts and tricks. Tony, the wonder horse, also has a big part in making the picture a success. A pleasing little vein of love runs through the production.

The Palace offers on Wednesday only "The Auction Block," a gripping social satire on the present-day custom of auctioning off girls in marriage to titles and wealth. An all-star cast makes the picture the last word in good performances. "The Auction Block" is calculated to please the majority of people.

Boy Scouts and others who are interested in films packed with thrills and excitement are especially urged to see the latest Fred Thompson picture, "A Regular Scout," which will be shown at the Palace on Thursday and Friday of this week. It is the biggest and best picture ever made dealing with the Boy Scouts, and it is so made that it appeals alike to young and old. It is the most popular picture yet made by that rising young western star, Fred Thompson. Thompson, himself is an interesting character, having been a preacher before he went into the movies as an exponent of all that is clean in pictures.

"Beyond the Rockies," another good picture, is billed to close the week with showings on Saturday. An excellent cast is featured in "Beyond the Rockies."

Tenth Street Theater.

(John Barrymore the Actor of Actors at His Best.)

Opening the week at the beautiful Tenth Street theater is the dramatic success "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," starring John Barrymore. In transferring the famous noval and stage success to the screen, none of the attractiveness or merit has been lost. In fact, the screen lends range to this famous story and makes it more appealing even than the stage adaption. "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" is one of Barrymore's greatest screenings and his many fans will find this picture thoroughly pleasing.

On Wednesday, the Tenth Street changes to a dual-picture offering billed for Wednesday only. "Three Women" and "Liberty" will both be shown at all performances during the day. Both are films of known merit.

Buster Keaton, that delightfully serious-faced comedian, breaks in for a run of Thursday and Friday at the Tenth Street theater with his comedy success, "Battling Butler." In this picture, Buster has the role of a rough knock-down and drag-out prize fighter. You're right, Buster's just mistaken for this real prize fighter, but when the girl steps on the scene, he becomes even worse than the real "Battling Butler." In the early part of the film, Buster is seen with his valet and a complete camping outfit, that by itself is worth a barrel of laughs.

On Saturday the feature is "Desert Gold," a Zane Grey western starring Jack Holt. Jack Holt and Zane Grey are almost synonymous in screenland now and their joint productions are always successes.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Dear Aunt, So Good, So Kind, And a Little Deaf.

One of the numerous illustrations which Gilbert K. Chesterton has contributed to Hilaire Belloc's just published burlesque on the average detective novel, "The Emerald of Catherine the Great." (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Jill—By E. M. Delafield, author of "The Chip and the Block." The author's new book is an absorbing story of post-war London. It is woven around two families—the Gilbraiths—Oliver and Jack. Everything goes along smoothly for a while, but the time comes when the break is inevitable and then Jill goes to the Oliver Gilbraiths, and as the story progresses, there is plenty of "irony and tragedy, realism and sophistication." Jill has the experience of three environments and then comes the climax. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

Waiting—By Maud Farman Kempster, who writes a story of "direct action and tense incident." (Harold Vinal, publisher, New York.)

Young Malcolm—By George Blake. Author of "The Wild Man," etc. A story that has its location on foreign soil is usually very interesting to the American reader, but when Scotland and young Scotsmen play the leading parts in a story there is added interest. So when Malcolm marries the girl of his choice and they start out with more love than bread the world is just before them and with the sun is shining brightly and the clouds which come to all are still invisible. But they start out hand in hand and the story of their struggles is told with human interest and plenty of action. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

Fantomas Captured—By Marcel Allain, author of "The Lord of Terror," and many other novels belonging to the famous Fantomas series, that the reader has already become familiar with the style of the writings. This is translated and edited by A. R. Allison. (David McKay company, Philadelphia.)

One, Two, Three—By Paul Selver, author of "Schooling." Design by Terence Prentis. A refreshing and original story about one man and three ladies of which is said: "A satire of the new school, flavored with the tenderness of the old," etc. (Doran's Book, New York.)

The Hidden Kingdom—By Francis Beeding who tells the story of how for many years the secret service departments of various European countries had been seeking Professor Kreutzemark, who was noted for being one of the greatest criminals at large, and whose activities so nearly precipitated another world war as described in "The Seven Sleepers," etc.

This is an unusually strong story, original in its plot, unusual in its settings, and so full of action that there is never a pause. It is a thrilling story and those who are already acquainted with the leading criminal in the author's former book will be impatient to make a study of his work from the beginning. (Little Brown and company, Boston.)

A Mysterious Affair at Styles—By Agatha Christie. A detective story. In the first chapter the author says: "The intense interest aroused by the publicity by what was known at the time as "The Styles Case" has now somewhat subsided. Nevertheless, in view of the world-wide notoriety which attended it, I have been asked, both by my friend Poirot and the family themselves to write an account of the whole story.

And by giving her version of the whole matter the author hopes to silence the sensational rumors that continue to be discussed.

The most interesting feature about the story is that the author wrote it as the result of a wager that she could not write a detective story in which the reader would not be able to "spot" the murderer. The author has won her bet, for in weaving her story around a Belgian, Monsieur Poirot, who has appeared in several of her stories, she wins. A compliment was paid her when it had the unique distinction of being the first book accepted for by the London Times as a serial for its weekly edition. (Dodd, Mead and company, New York.)

Flying Death—By Edwin Balmer, author of "That Royle Girl." This is another mystery story which have become popular not only with all old lovers of mystery stories but with the new ones which had become many. It is a gripping narrative and yet there is a serious touch which will appeal to the reader. (Dodd, Mead and company, New York.)

White Wolves—By B. M. Bower, a writer of novels, most of which have been located in the old, old west with which he is not only familiar, but which he loves.

He has located his new story in the glorious west by leaving his hero, an artist, who also is interested in the scenery out among the beauty of the western mountains and on the rangers, but there is a drawback to his work—he did not understand the Meadowlark cowboys, and, in disgust, he left the ranch and buried himself on an unknown and inaccessible island in the Missouri river, where he thought it would be easy to raise stock and paint pictures and dream dreams.

But an artist is somewhat of a stranger when it comes to western life and the secret haunts of its "refugees." So, after all, Lawrie Brunelle was not alone, but had such neighbors as a sheriff looking for Kid Kern, who was called the wolf, and then there's another picture which brings true admiration—it is a picture of a girl sitting on a rocky hillside playing a musical instrument—and this is where the romance begins. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

The Adventures of Mr. Joseph P. Cray, and The Channay Syndicate are two "pocket thrillers" by Phillips Oppenheim, who is called the prince of story tellers. These little volumes are perhaps for the traveler who grows tired of the moving out-of-doors scene, or the man or woman who has to wait and wait from one train to another—they are small and convenient to carry. They are termed "thrillers" because Oppenheim write them! (Little, Brown & Co., Boston, $1 net.)

ART IN MATHEMATICS.

The Elements of Dynamic Symmetry. By Jay Hambridge, the artist and writer, author of "Dynamic Symmetry Composition," "The Greek Vase," "The Parthenon," and other Greek temples. The question is asked in the very beginning "What is Dynamic symmetry?" The reply is given in connection with this work is that it is the law of proportion discovered by the late Jay Hambridge in plant and shell growth and later found to have been used by the ancient Egyptians and Greeks in their works of art.

These principles were reduced by him to a scheme for proportioning of areas and are being used with results by many artists and teachers of art.

A most interesting comment is from the Journal of Royal Institute of British Architects—Cloudesley Brereton—"The work of Mr. Hambridge in retrieving one of the most valuable principles of all the arts that work in two or more dimensions, has liberated a vital sap that will not cease to circulate till it has mounted to some of the topmost branches of human activity." Howard Giles says: "Dynamic symmetry releases effort, it does not release from effort."

This book has attracted attention in Europe as well as in the United States and as time goes on it will be more and more appreciated, for the work is to be carried on by his wife, who was Miss Mary Crovatt, the daughter of a prominent citizen of the south and Georgia—the late A. J. Crovatt, of Brunswick.

In a most interesting letter to a special friend of her father, Mrs. Hambridge says in connection with the work that she has undertaken:

"I am planning to go south this spring just for the summer, to the mountains of North Georgia and see what the possibilities are. My husband, Jay Hambridge, the artist and writer, died three years ago. I am going on with the things that we worked on together. Perhaps you have not heard of his work. He discovered dynamic symmetry of the law of proportion in plant and shell growth which he found the Egyptians and Greeks had used in their temple planning, a secret Michael Angelo, Leonardo da Vinci and many others tried, but failed to find.

"The idea is not simply a vague theory but has stirred America's most prominent artists and teachers of art to enthusiasm by the remarkable results of harmony and proportion it produces in any creation of art.

"We spent a year in Greece, where he prepared the material for his book, 'The Parthenon,' and where I learned to weave on the hand loom among the peasants. The book I send you I got out from lessons Mr. Hambridge published in a magazine, to be used as a text book in schools and for students. The cover is made of silk, hand spun by peasants in Greece, and dyed and woven by me in New York on a hand loom. The design is made on the principle of dynamic symmetry." (Brentano's, New York.)

"A Handbook for Young Judaeans," the latest addition to the literature of Young Judaea, the national organization for the Jewish youth, forms a miniature Jewish encyclopedia for the young.

In the brief 90 pages of the pocket size handbook, there is presented a resume of Jewish festivals and national holidays, epochs and comparative dates in Jewish history, brief biographical sketches of outstanding personalities in Jewish history and statistical lists of the Jewish population in the United States, and of the world by continents.

The first dozen pages of the booklet are devoted to a description of the Young Judaea organization, the story of its growth since 1909, a statement regarding the Palestine Scout fund which is subsidized by Young Judaea, and the "creed" of Young Judaea. Calendar lists, suggested books for Young Judaea libraries and Judaean songs are among the other items contained in the handbook.

A letter from Nathan Straus, noted American Jewish philanthropist, in which he strongly indorses Young Judaea, is used as a foreword to the handbook. Mr. Straus says: "The older I grow the more I see the need of a movement like Young Judaea for inspiring our young American Jews and Jewesses with Jewish knowledge, a strong and fearless Jewish consciousness and a love for the land of Israel. I regard the work of Young Judaea as one of the most important efforts in American Jewish life."

The handbook, it is stated, has been placed in the hands of approximately 20,000 Young Judaeans throughout the country.

Miss Mary Louise Stanard Weds Mr. Oliver at Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Mary Louise Stanard and William Franklin Oliver, formerly of Irvington, Va., was solemnized with impressive dignity Saturday at high noon in All Saints Episcopal church on West Peachtree street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. W. Memminger, in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends, and united distinguished and aristocratic families that have been prominent in Virginia for many generations.

Vested Choir.

A program of appropriate music was rendered preceding the entrance of the bridal party, with a vested choir singing the wedding march from Lohengrin for the processional, accompanied by the organist, William E. Arnaud, brother of the bride.

The altar was artistic in the arrangement of palms used as a background for floor baskets holding Easter lilies, alternating with candelabra holding white cathedral candles.

Bridal Party.

Dr. J. A. McGarity, Henry Clay Burr, A. P. Ramsey and W. H. Mansfield acted as ushers, and John W. Cunningham, of New York, cousin of the groom, was Mr. Oliver's best man.

Mrs. William E. Arnaud, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and she wore a gown of monkey brown crepe, richly embroidered in self-tones, and a smart hat of monkey brown horsehair, lined with French blue. She carried a bouquet of Claudius Pernet roses.

The bride entered the church with her maid of honor, Miss Bessie Langhorn, who also gave her in marriage. Miss Langhorn's gown was of hydrangea blue crepe, the skirt fashioned in tiered effect, and her hat of blue straw was bound in monkey brown ostrich. She carried a bouquet of Claudius Pernet roses.

Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful bride wore a stylish ensemble costume. The midnight blue poiret twill coat had a collar of sit for fur, while the blue georgette crepe gown was artistically embroidered in gold. Her hat was a Gage model of dark blue, trimmed with a rhinestone ornament and her flowers were valley lilies and freesia.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip through Florida, and after a tour of several weeks will return to Atlanta for residence.

Out-of-Town Guests.

Among the out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. George Oliver, of Irvington, Va., parents of the groom; Misses Julia Ellen and Mary Wooldridge, of Richmond, Va., aunts of the bride, and John W. Cunningham, of New York, the groom's cousin.

Camp Fire Girls Make Plans for Many Activities

The O'Keewapo Camp Fire group of O'Keefe Junior High school held its weekly meeting at the home of the president, Margaret Selman, the object being to have the girls working for the Fire Maker's rank, cook and serve a meal, including hot biscuits, French fried potatoes, homemade jelly and councillor's chowder.

The Winnona Camp Fire group met at the home of Mildred Grout, and after a brief business session, set out on a long hike through the woods, studying the many trees. Previous to the hike a meeting had been devoted to trail making, so several girls set out ahead of the main crowd and made a trail by piling stones, tying grass and pointing sticks, so the others could follow the trail.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Shuinala Camp Fire group of William Bass Junior High school, Miss Ethel Purcell, the guardian, explained the birthday honor for 1927 and the tree honor. The girls expect to plant a tree and take part in a tree council fire in order that they may be entitled to the honor.

The Swannanoa Camp Fire group at its meeting on Tuesday planned a program for chapel next week. A short business session was held, with Mary Margaret McGuire, the president, presiding.

The Trubekno Camp Fire Girls of Tenth Street school and their guardian, Miss Sarah Hill, went beyond Buckhead Saturday and had a lesson in fire-making. Every girl had some part, and after building a good fire, roasted wieners.

Ophee Camp Fire Girls of Kirkwood school have been having most interesting meetings in spite of the fact that they have been without a guardian. The president, Forest Hynds, and the program committee chairman, Ruby Hitchcock, have been carrying on the meetings with the help of the rest of the group. A play was recently presented, showing the care of the feet on long hikes and what to do in case of an accident at camp. When one of the players represented the girl who had broken her leg, two helpful maidens pulled off their middies and with two wands made a stretcher and took said girl off.

Kirkwood is now glad to report that they have a new guardian, Miss Elizabeth Chapman, who teaches in the Kirkwood school. Miss Chapman has planned to take the group on a week-end camp this week, assisted by several teachers and friends.

The Fair Street group met, and Miss Templeton, the school nurse, gave a very interesting talk on "Health Habits." Miss Brockman, the guardien, rendered several piano selections and played for them to sing the Camp Fire songs. A Valentine party is planned for Tuesday, and all the mothers and the faculty of the school will be invited.

The Sadahee group of Ponce de Leon school will give a Valentine party.

Muriel Pierce, president of the N. A. P. S. Camp Fire group, entertained the group at her home on Briarcliff road. During the short business session a hike was planned for Saturday week. Each girl was given patterns and materials to make aprons, with cross-logs and flame embroidered on them in brown and red. Mary Ragin won the prize for having made the most attractive apron.

Two groups of Hoke Smith Junior High school sponsored a candy pulling. The money was divided between the two groups and will be used to buy Camp Fire supplies. Miss Julia Veal's group chose for the group name "Aowakiya," which means "banded together for a purpose," the object of this group being to obey the seven points of the Camp Fire law and to be good all-round Camp Fire Girls.

A new group has been recently formed at the Highland Avenue school, with Miss Margaret Steedman as guardian. Miss Steedman was formerly a Camp Fire Girl in Atlanta, but moved her residence to Daytona Beach, Fla.

Kasha and Satin Coatings Are Fashion's Preference for Fine Spring Coats

Rich and soft and supple and graceful! That describes coats of satin and kasha. That's why Fashion has chosen these fabrics for her loveliest spring coats. But it doesn't tell how utterly capivating these coats can be with their trimming of rich fur .... monkey fur, gleaming white ermine, soft summer ermine, natural squirrel, dyed squirrel and even lynx and pointed fox. The fur is around the collar, sometimes up and down the front, sometimes around the bottom .... if it's monkey fur. Black is given the preference, but tan is extremely good, and there are other spring shades, too. A new shipment of these newest satin and kasha coats has just arrived for smart Atlanta women.

'Womanhood' To Be Paid Tribute At Woman's Club Meet, Feb. 14

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, announces that fitting tributes will be paid to womanhood, in observance of Valentine day, at the regular meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club on Monday afternoon, February 14, at 3 o'clock.

A musical program has been arranged which will be an outstanding feature of the program. Dr. W. F. Melton has been invited to speak on the "Sentimentality of Womanhood."

Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, chairman of the music committee of the club, will present E. W. Wilson, pupil of Mrs. Kurt Mueller, in a charming group of songs which will be sung in Italian, German and English. In these songs he will have ample range for his magnificent bass voice. He will sing the celebrated song, "The Two Grenadiers," Schuman (in German); "Lungi delcarobesse," Seechi (in Italian); "Sunshine and Rain," Blumenthal (in English). He will be accompanied by Mrs. Kurt Mueller, who has been prominently identified in musical circles of this city for many years. She is an instructor of voice and piano and a sympathetic accompanist.

Mrs. Price-Smith, the president, explains "that the beautiful old custom of sending valentines is the survival of a practice connected with the worship of Juno, the goddess of womanhood, who was given the titles of the different parts of a woman's life, as the goddess of birth and of marriage." It is very essential that on this day we give to womankind the respect and homage she is due. Poets through all the periods of time have had their writings infused with the virtues of women. They have written of her inspiration, wonderful generosity, her grace, her liveliness, wisdom and discretion. Tributes of respect will be paid on Valentine day to mothers, for their gifts of sons and daughters to the world, and for the upbringing of these sons and daughters to useful citizenship.

Tributes of respect will be paid to wives, for their service and loyalty to their husbands and to the sweethearts of men for their inspiration and influence. At the close of the meeting tea will be served by Mrs. M. L. Thrower, Mrs. DeLos Hill, Mrs. Victor Kreigshaber, Mrs. J. E. Miller.

The Constitution's Position Against Sordid News Praised

The citizenship committee of the Atlanta Woman's club went on record Wednesday morning at the meeting as opposing any effort on the part of city officials to put the school board back into politics by making it a committee of city council, and went on record also as heartily approving the stand taken by The Constitution to repress or refrain from publishing stories of the "Browning case" or other news of a salacious nature, expressing the desire that other papers also be encouraged to take the same stand because of impressions created on youthful minds.

Carter Whittaker Lectures Before Garden Committee

At the meeting Thursday of the garden committee of the Atlanta Woman's club Carter Whittaker lectured on "Birds and Their Habits." Mr. Whittaker made the suggestion that a strip of tin about two feet high be placed around the base of a tree in which there were built bird houses, and the tin would prevent cats and squirrels from climbing the tree and robbing the houses. While the garden committee believes that flowers are the main part of a garden, the course of lectures during the year includes talks on other points necessary to the perfect garden, the trees, shrubbery, birds, fences, seats, the making of pools.

Members of the garden committee were invited to join the Georgia Botanical society recently organized by Professor Heath, which usually meets Sunday afternoon at a given point and from there trips are made through the nearby woods, specimens gathered and discussions held on the subjects.

Mrs. Morton Rolleston was appointed chairman of the spring flower show, the exact date of which will be announced later. Tulips will be especially featured, as the garden committee is encouraging the general planting of this beautiful flower, but all other bulbs and flowering shrubs will also be exhibited at the show.

Mrs. Joel Hunter is chairman of the garden committee; Mrs. Fritz Jones, secretary; Mrs. Burr Blackburn, treasurer; Mrs. L. R. Adams, assistant treasurer; Miss May Hudson, membership chairman; Mrs. J. W. Allen, garden magazines.

Miss Cobb To Hold Lecture Course at Club.

Miss Carolyn Cobb, director of the Carolyn Cobb School of Dramatic Art, presented her first lecture on literary interpretation and appreciation at the Atlanta Woman's club Wednesday, February 9.

She said "that the study of interpretation and expression is not confined to the reading and studying of great literary masters alone, but that through this medium the individual learns to develop his own powers of expression and becomes less conscious of self and is able to express his own individuality in his particular line of work; in other words, one is able to express in playing, singing, painting, writing, etc., his inner thoughts, which, by fear of ridicule and self-consciousness, have been hidden in the mind. Even after learning to see and hear from an artistic point of view, one is often handicapped by fear and is unable to express in words the thoughts or impressions which are so beautiful or helpful to him." Miss Cobb says "the art of public speaking, stage deportment and diction become invaluable and these points will be studied in connection with the literary interpretation and appreciation."

A series of 12 lectures is being offered in this course for the price of $10 and the class meets each Wednesday at 4 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club on Peachtree street. This class is open to the public and registration is being taken by Mrs. Tom Brooke, Hemlock 5312-W.

Mrs. Spiker Gives Lecture To Club Women on 'Clothes'

"A Parisian gown can be ruined by an ungainly posture and a beautiful reception or party can be spoiled by the hostess appearing in tweeds and golf shoes. It is true that Atlanta women have the reputation of being the most beautiful and the best dressed in the country, but do they always wear the right thing for the occasion?" said Mrs. Potter Spiker, in her lecture on the "Psychology of Dress" before a large audience at the Atlanta Woman's club Wednesday afternoon, February 9.

Studying individual lines, building a wardrobe with clothes suitable for all occasions, the effect of right and wrong clothes on a person's psychology and emphasis on the quality rather than quantity of clothes were the principal points brought out by Mrs. Spiker. Beginning with Milady's hat and taking each article of apparel down to the shoes, which go to make up the correct and perfect ensemble, Mrs Spiker discussed in detail the points to be considered in planning a wardrobe and mentioned particularly that to obtain the best results the color of the eye should be considered in selecting shades for day costumes and the color of the hair for evening wear.

In speaking of cosmetics she mentioned the ludicrous "make-ups" which completely hide or destroy the natural facial expression and stressed the moderate use of rouge and powder, reserving the lipstick for evenings only.

At the close of the lecture Mrs. Spiker called for questions and many solved their personal problems by asking questions regarding their particular type.

At an early date Mrs. Spiker will give another lecture at the Atlanta Woman's club to "Women Goin' on Fifty." This will be an open lecture and the public will be invited. The exact date will be announced later.

Dr. Melton Plans To Develop Short Story Writers at Club

A feature of importance in the Atlanta Woman's club program is its interest in education. The applied education department is sponsoring many classes, in languages, journalism, public speaking, etc., but one of the most important ones, now being formed under Dr. W. F. Melton, is that of short story writing. Writing is a natural gift, coming frequently as a latent talent, from most unexpected sources.

There have been cases where a well-written letter to one interested in developing authors has caused such favorable comment as to start the writer on a literary career. According to Dr. Melton, college or university training is not necessary for this course; neither does one need previous experience. The principle worked on is that it is better to have something to tell than it is to know how to tell nothing.

Registration for this class may be made by calling Walnut 7842. It is open to the public as are all the other courses. The tuition is $10 for 10 lessons and the class is limited to 20. The lessons are given at the Woman's club on Wednesday afternoon, 3 to 4 o'clock, the first one having been on February 2.

Sizes 2½ to 9-AAAA to D

DISCRIMINATING American women were quick to realize and appreciate the far reaching advantages of the Nisley Company's Plan to give them an unprecedented and unparalleled wide range of sizes in smart, quality footwear at a popular price. It was the dawn of a new era of style, comfort and economy for women who, in the past, were forced to pay extreme prices for their footwear because they could not be correctly fitted in anything save the highest priced merchandise.

SO genuinely enthusiastic has been the nation-wide response to this innovation that the Nisley Company (encouraged by the tremendous success of their "AAA" widths and sensing a demand for even narrower footwear) have decided to add "AAAA" widths in a number of smart patterns.

THIS news, we know, will be greeted with sincere delight by hundreds, (yes thousands) of women all over America who know Nisley Shoes by reputation but who have been just outside the scope of Nisley service because of their extremely narrow size requirements.

AND to these women we want to say that these lovely new patterns are now being shown in all Nisley stores together with a host of other striking Spring styles in sizes ranging from 2½ to 9 and widths from AAA to D. All at the one price of five dollars.

The shirts are different. This Spring it is the "Galley-West" shirt that boys will wear. With a certain point to the collar, and rounded cuffs, and six pearl buttons sporting down the front. The "Galley-West" is $2 and $2.50.

The Ties for boys hit the color trail with a new pep. Boys will not wear just any Tie this Spring—but certain, elected designs that go with the smart knickerbocker suit. These Ties are in now—and range 50c to $1.50.

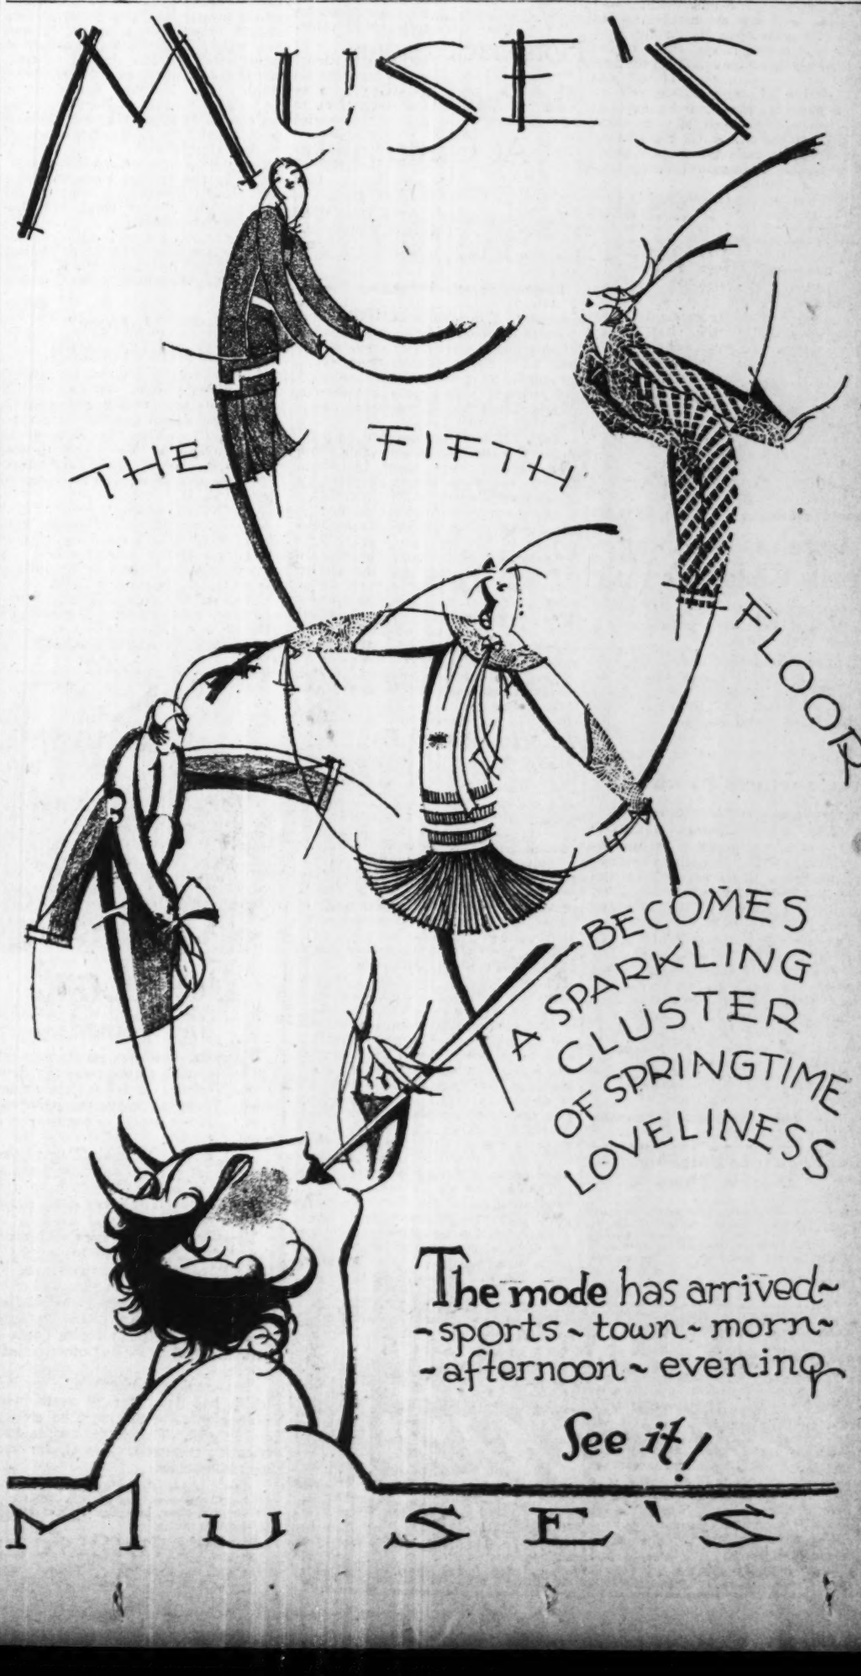

The Boy this Spring will wear The Buxom Brogue, a shoe that is as doggy and boxy as a junior prince of London. This oxford is either Banco Tan or bright black. The Buxom Brogue is $5 and $6.

His sweater must keep him in style as it keeps the winds off—bright colors; Coresus plaids; Congo and Lost Island designs are the whole story. $3.50 up.

He may not play in the Open Championship, but he keeps up to golf's bright thought in sox; they start at his knickerbockers and keep cheerful to the shoe-top! 65c up.

Boys will wear the complete suit this spring. The Lumberjack that held forth in the pitcher's box the past winter, now goes to right field, and the complete suit is the ace! It is London-cut, with man-vest, and knickers. "Every boy to the knickerbocker suit" says the style-plate. These suits are in Torone Tans, Toll Grays, Cruiser Grays, Sargent weave stripes and checked-check, the same good-looking patterns that men will be in this spring. These new suits are $15.50 up—and handsomely tailored. He carries a Topcoat when the wind is up.

News From Mrs. Armor's Meetings

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

Dr. Mary Harris Armor, of Tate, international lecturer and organizer for the Woman's Christian Temperance union, who is to begin filling speaking dates in Georgia next week, writes entertainingly of some of her recent experiences on a lecture trip through Mississippi and Florida. She said:

"I had a most enjoyable and satisfactory visit in Mississippi. Mrs. Nellie N. Somerville, the state W. C. T. U. president, is a general. She is a member of the state legislature, prominent and influential in civic and church affairs, is an active worker and holds state offices in such organizations as the D. A. R., Women's Federation of clubs, Girl Reserves, etc.

"I was delightfully entertained at a buffet dinner in the home of her eldest son, Colonel Robert Somerville, at Cleveland, Miss. It was a really charming occasion. Mrs. Somerville has two sons who are lawyers, a daughter who is a lawyer, and another daughter who married a lawyer, all living in Cleveland. They seem to be wealthy and stand high in social and philanthropic circles. I was pleased with them."

Speaks At Union Service Sunday.

Mrs. Armor spoke at a great meeting on Sunday morning in the beautiful and commodious Methodist church. It was a union service of all the church congregations and the edifice was packed, many people came from the surrounding country districts to hear "the foremost woman prohibition speaker in America." The comments on her speech were most enthusiastic and lauditory. She was officially thanked as she was leaving for Greenville to speak that evening, by a committee which also presented her with a gorgeous bouquet of pink carnations.

Mrs. Armor said of the Greenville meeting: "At Greenville I was entertained in Mrs. Somerville's home. There was a union service in the Baptist church that night that rejoiced my soul. That big Baptist church was packed to the doors and the music was fine."

"The next day," writes Mrs. Armor, "the state W. C. T. U. president and I went to a lovely little town called Liland, where I spoke at a meeting of the Federated Missionary societies. It was a splendid, spiritual gathering, and we secured 35 paid members for the W. C. T. U. and a nice offering."

At Galloway Memorial Church.

"At Jackson, the state capital, my hostess was the lovely state corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. L. Ezelle. She is the daughter of Mrs. F. M. Jackson, of Birmingham, Ala., who for years has been a tower of strength to the W. C. T. U. of that city and state. Mrs. Ezelle is 'her mother's own daughter.' She had worked up a meeting that amazed me! It was held in the magnificent Galloway Memorial church and it was full. I enjoyed speaking to that intelligent audience.

"Of course I haven't time to tell of all the meetings arranged for me. I wound up with a delightful visit with the girls at the M. S. C. W. at Columbus. They gave me a most cordial hearing. I like to talk to our fine young people.

"Was charmingly entertained in Columbus at the Faculty club. After the meeting that night the students served delicious refreshments and we had a lovely get-together time with students and faculty and Y. W. C. A."

Visits "Goodwood."

Mrs. Armor's first Florida lecture was given in the First Baptist church at Tallahassee, which was packed to the doors, many standing, and many turned away for lack of room. She was at her best for an eager audience adds to her ability to inspire and instruct. The papers were warm in their praise of her speech.

Her host and hostess were State Senator and Mrs. M. C. Hodges. "Their magnificent, historic home is one of the show places of Florida, and I have seen none more interesting and picturesque. 'Goodwood,' as it is called, is quite famous.

"The property was originally a grant from the nation to General Lafayette. He did not build so it passed to the Crooms. All the Crooms were drowned at sea and no will was left.

"The place was closed to the public for 50 years. But October, 1925, Senator William C. Hodges bought it and he and his wife entertain on a grand scale. There are seven lovely cottages on the estate all beautiful furnished, and with baths for each bedroom.

"Sometimes Mr. and Mrs. Hodges fill all these cottages with guests.

"The entire state senate was entertained by them the whole term when last called in textra session.

"Every now and then they fill all the cottages with girls from the State College for Women, which is at Tallahassee, and invite their parents too for the week-end."

Mrs. Armor is still in Florida, but she will begin her Georgia itinerary at Macon on the 20th and will speak at the sixth district rally at Forsyth on next Tuesday.

Memorial Services.

February is the month of Frances E. Willard's home-going, and on or about the 17th, the "heavenly birthday" of the founder of the World's Women's Christian Temperance union, each local union in Georgia, indeed, the more than 20,000 in the United States, will honor her memory with an appropriate program and by giving those present an opportunity to contribute to the Willard Memorial fund.

Sometimes people ask why the W. C. T. U. has never built a monument or great church in honor of Frances Willard. Instead of doing that the Willard memorial fund was inaugurated as a perpetual memorial, and each union adds at least $2 every year toward this memorial, which is used as the W. C. T. U. home missionary fund to help advance the cause of prohibition in new territory, among immigrants, negroes, Indians and on the frontier and insular possessions.

Careless Washing Spoils Children's Hair

Any child can have beautiful hair—healthy and luxuriant. It is simply a matter of shampooing.

Proper shampooing makes the hair soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.

While children's hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, fine young hair and tender scalps cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why thoughtful mothers everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust and dirt.

It leaves the hair soft and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store.

A four-ounce bottle lasts for months. —(adv.)

Don't Squeeze Blackheads—Dissolve Them

Squeezing out blackheads makes large, ugly pores. The safe and sane way to get rid of these blemishes is to dissolve them. Get two ounces of Calonite powder from your drug store, sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth, rub over the blackheads, and every one, big or little, will disappear at once.—(adv.)

Boulevard Park Woman's Club Meets Monday Afternoon

The monthly meeting of the Boulevard Park Woman's club will be held Monday, February 14, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. A. Walker, 580 Cresthill avenue, N. E. The president, Mrs. J. R. Weithington, will preside and after a short business session the meeting will be given over to entertainment and a social hour.

The program of the day will be devoted to the memory of Frank L. Stanton and the following numbers will be given:

James [illegible] Hollomon, associate editor of The Constitution, who has been closely associated with Mr. Stanton for many years, will speak to the members of the club.

Mrs. T. A. Suttles, vocal, "Mighty Lak a Rose" (Frank L. Stanton); "Sweet Little Woman o' Mine" (Frank L. Stanton); "Li'l' Feller." Mrs. George Elrod will sing "Just Awearyin' for You" and "Keep on Hopin'."

Mrs. J. R. Weithington will give readings from poems written by Mr. Stanton and Mrs. W. H. Mills, who lives in Boulevard Park, will read a poem written for her personally by Mr. Stanton.

All members of the club are urged to attend and ladies living in Boulevard Park or vicinity are invited.

Circulo Espanol Club Votes To Aid Ill Spaniard

The Circulo Espanol was entertained Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Wesley at their home, 462 West Peachtree. A letter to the Circulo Espanol from a native of Spain now living in a nearby city was read. The writer, victim of a serious malady, unable to speak English, pleaded that some Spanish literature be sent to him. The Circulo voted favorably upon this request, members pledging themselves to respond to it as individuals.

Abiladro Petit gave a talk on the Canary Isles, his birthplace, speaking in detail of the inhabitants, and of the industries pursued by them, chief among which, he stated, is the agriculture. Mr. Petit mentioned that it was from the Canary Isles that Benito Perez Galdos, prolific and eminent author of Spanish historical novels, came.

Mrs. Earl Greene sang "El Relicario" and "La Golondria," admirably suited to the richness and charm of her voice.

Mrs. W. R. Hoyt talked of her childhood in Spain, spent in a village near Madrid, where her father had gone to build a cement plant, theirs being the only resident American family. She mentioned that students from engineering schools were sent to the plant for the purpose of studying its modern methods. Here they came to know, said Mrs. Hoyt, people of all walks in life, her acquaintance being more varied, perhaps, than in any of her travels.

Mrs. J. E. Campbell read a poem entitled "Fusiles y Munecas," whose sentiment was a conception of childhood's quaint imaginings.

Mrs. Richard Morenus read an excellently prepared paper on Blasco Ibanez, the Spanish republican, whose defiant propaganda against royal rule brought about first imprisoment and then exile; and whose conquest of every phase of literature has compelled the admiration of an entire world. Mrs. Morenus named many of the most notable of Ibanez's works and concluded by reading certain passages from "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

The closing number, "Adivinanzas," put on by the Spanish class, proved a spirited and interesting contest, the prize for the winner being a miniature Spanish galleon.

The Circulo Espanol will hold its next meeting with Miss Mary Palmer Caldwell, 807 Boulevard, N. E., Tuesday evening, February 22.

Many-gaited horses are kept on hand at the Garden Hills stables, for those who do not have their individual mounts, and these horses are for hire at reasonable prices, with the addition of the many little courtesies of the club and the charming personality of Miss McLeod.

Atlantas will frequent the Garden Hills club, not only for the riding, but there will be the Venetian swimming pool that will welcome Garden Hills residents really for the first time this summer, and the playgrounds for the kiddies, and other amusements which have gone far to making this delightful north side residential estates one of the most desirable in the city.

Rev. Marvin Franklin, new pastor of the Park Street Methodist church will conduct the devotional services and the principal address will be made by Professor Willis Sutton.

Rev. Homer Thompson, superintendent of the North Georgia conference, will be another interesting speaker, and will tell about the Sunday school standard training school which will be opened in May. Miss Mary Lemons, elementary superintendent of the North Georgia conference, who has recently come to Georgia from South Carolina, will outline the program of work of the training school.

The election and installation of the new president of the council will also take place at this meeting. Representatives from the cradle roll through the juniors, the Sunday school superintendents and the pastors are cordially invited and urged to be present.

Apropos of the observance of National Drama week, February 13 to 19, the Atlanta Drama league will entertain at a delightful tea Tuesday afternoon at the Atlanta Woman's club, honoring two distinguished dramatic artists, who will be in the city an engagement, playing "The Judge's Husband." The leading lady, Miss Gladys Hanson, formerly of Atlanta, and William Hodge, the noted actor.

Miss Hanson, who is a dramatic artist of rare ability will talk informally to the members of the league upon this occasion, as will Mr. Hodge, stressing the drama as an interpretive medium.

Mrs. A. Ten Eyck Brown, president of the Drama league, announces that tea will be served in the palm room of the clubhouse, at 3:30 o'clock and all members of the organization are cordially invited as guests of the occasion. Mrs. Brown will be assisted in entertaining by the officers and members of the board of managers.

Miss Hanson is the daughter of Mr. Peyton Stovall of this city and will be received with the warmest greetings by her friends, during her engagement here. She has had a most successful career on the stage, having possessed a charming personality and unusual dramatic talent, together with that determination to excel in whatever she undertook. William Hodge, who plays the leading role in "The Judge's Husband," is America's inimitable star and this is his first appearance in Atlanta since his great success in "The Man From Home." He will also be given a cordial welcome in this city.

The next outstanding event sponsored by the local Drama league will be the lecture by Fannie Hurst, one of the most renowned and most fascinating authors and lecturers of this country. Miss Hurst has endeared herself to the American reading public through her vivid and vigorous pen. She is famous for her newspaper editorials and feature columns, and is familiar to the public through the motion picture world through her several successes and through her widely read books.

Fannie Hurst will entertain the Atlanta Drama league and friends with a lecture on "In and Out of the Books," which will be held Tuesday evening, March 1, in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Y. W. C. A. Girl Reserves Hold Mid-Winter Conference in Macon

The most important event of the month in Y. W. C. A. Girl Reserve circles is the midwinter conference of Girl Reserves from Georgia and South Carolina, which is being held in Macon, February 11-13. This meeting, which is the fourth annual midwinter conference, assembled on its opening Friday afternoon approximately 200 representatives from Girl Reserve clubs throughout the two states, including about ten delegates from the Atlanta clubs.

The theme for the conference is "Gardens," developed by Miss Eliza E. Wardlaw, Girl Reserve secretary of Macon, in such a way as to bring out the growth of citizenship in all fields, working on the analogy of the growth of a plant in a garden. Miss Wardlaw has planned a program of instruction and recreation for the conference in which the girls themselves have a large part, carrying out one of the primary aims of the meeting in developing initiative and responsibility among the Girl Reserves. A number of social features have been tendered the visiting representatives by leaders in the Macon association, including on Saturday a luncheon, a tea and a banquet.

The Atlanta delegation, representing Girls' High, Commercial High, Fulton High and Decatur High schools, includes Misses Mary Dunaway, Ocie Respus, Jane Robinson, Eunice Scheff Lois McDonald, Margaret Smith, Christine Bost, Betty Arnold, Katheryn Bogman and Sara Ezell, Atlanta Girl Reserve secretary.

Several of these girls have a prominent part on the program of the conference—Miss Mary Dunaway, of the Decatur club, having led the discussion on Saturday at the meeting of the presidents and program chairmen, and Miss Jane Robinson, of Girls' High school, having responded to the welcome toast at the banquet last night.

Others prominent on the conference program include Mrs. Randolph Jaques, Jr., Mrs. E. B. Harrold, Miss Sue Myrick, Mrs. Frank Mitchell and Mrs. Charles Hinton, of Macon; Miss Helen Wyley, Savannah; Miss Hazel Gewinner, Miss Blossom Thompson, and many others. Miss Dorothy Simmons, president of the Lanier High School Girl Reserve club, of Macon, is the conference executive.

One of the most interesting of the pre-conference features presented by the Atlanta Reserves was the ceremonial held at the chapel exercises of the Fulton High school on Tuesday by Girl Reserves of that school. This was the "Girl Reserve Circle of Lights," by which the new members are recognized as members of the club. This club, which is one of the most active of the Atlanta council, is headed by Miss Katheryn Sparks, as president, and Miss Isabel Dew, as faculty adviser.

Mrs. Ozburn Made Executive Director of Women Voters

At a recent meeting of the board of the Atlanta League of Women Voters Mrs. C. P. Ozburn was appointed executive director, which position has been held by Miss Eleonore Raoul for the past year.

The position of executive director in the league is somewhat similar to that of the manager under the council-manager form of city government. She supervises all the work of the league and sees that the orders of the board are properly carried out. The three important committees pertaining to the machinery of the league are the ward officers council, Miss Katherine Koch, chairman; the membership committee, Mrs. Alfred Bailey, chairman, and the finance committee, Miss Eleonore Raoul, chairman. The executive director assists these chairmen, relates their work one to the other, sees that the proper records are kept and avoids all conflicts in the respective campaigns. She is often able to make constructive suggestions as she knows the work from year to year.

The executive director makes it possible for the president to assume the position of real leadership which would be impossible if she had to supervise the running of the league office.

Mrs. Sink's position in the league is unchanged. She will continue to assist in the work of the office as she has done so ably for the past year.

On Friday, February 18, the league membership will have an opportunity of hearing Mrs. Ozburn speak on "Are We Good Citizens?" at the membership luncheon at the Atlanta Athletic club at 12:30 o'clock. Reservations must be made in advance at headquarters, Walnut 8264.

Ward Meetings.

Miss Katherine Koch, chairman of the ward officers' council, is developing a course in citizenship for use in the different ward meetings. It consists of questions and answers on the matters of city government and brings out a most interesting discussion among members of the class. Miss Koch has given several lessons in the eleventh ward and last week held the first one in the twelfth. Mrs. Hunnicutt is chairman of the twelfth ward and presided at the meeting, which was the largest one ever held. Mrs. Park, president of the Kirkwood P.-T. A., was the principal speaker.

On Friday, February 18, the eleventh ward will hold its meeting at the Whiteford Avenue school. Mrs. N. Y. V. Perry, the chairman, will preside and Mrs. George Matson will be made the principal speaker.

Speakers' Bureau.

Mrs. Harold Roberts, chairman of the speakers' bureau, is receiving many calls every day to provide speakers on both the league and the charter.

A few meetings for next week for which speakers are already provided are: The Frank L. Stanton School P.-T. A., before which Mrs. John Rowlett, past president of the Georgia P.-T. A. and present historian, will speak for the league. Mrs. Rowlett has been a league member for years, but has just joined the speakers' bureau; the Faith Street P.-T. A., Mrs. Alfred Bailey will speak; the Georgia Nurses' association, Mrs. C. P. Ozburn speaker; citizenship meeting, under Mrs. Boulineau, will hear Mrs. R. L. Turman speak.

Membership Drive.

Mrs. Alfred Bailey, chairman of the drive, announces that the work is progressing more satisfactorily than ever before. The drive workers will meet at 11:30 o'clock at the Athletic club on Friday, February 18, and as it is the last week before the close of the drive Mrs. Bailey urges every single squad captain and member to be present.

Second Baptist To Honor Atlanta B. Y. P. U. Officers.

The Atlanta B. Y. P. U. officers will be entertained at supper Monday evening, February 14, at the second Baptist church, by the unions of that church.

Harris, entertained all the Georgia girls who are attending school in Washington at tea this afternoon in the capitol. Senator and Mrs. Harris received, and the young ladies were introduced to Vice President Dawes and Speaker Longworth. The party enjoyed a short visit to the senate gallery.

Bach; second vice president, Mrs. J. Weiss; third vice president, Miss Rae Jaffee; executive secretary, Mrs. F. Boorstein; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Louis Kahn; treasurer, Miss Polly Gershon; assistant treasurer, Miss Fanny Kolodkin; auditor, Miss Lena Romm.

Mrs. V. H. Kreigshaber is the honorary life president.

The athletic department, Mrs. Louis Kahn, chairman, is now forming swimming classes. Gymnasium classes are already functioning. Many enjoyable hikes have been planned by Mrs. B. S. Cohen, chairman of the hiking class.

A tea room will be conducted in conjunction with all social functions under the direction of Mrs. N. A. Bach and Mrs. I. Jacobs. A competent caterer has been engaged in this connection.

Other departments are being planned and will be announced shortly.

The Jewish Woman's club has been subdivided as follows: The intermediate division, of which Miss Mary Tannenbaum is chairman, is composed of business and professional young women, who meet monthly. The junior division, under the leadership of Miss Polly Gershon, is composed of girls between the ages of 13 and 16 and meet semi-monthly. The Blue Bird division, under the able leadership of Mrs. J. Weiss, draws its membership from girls between the ages of 9 and 12, who meet semi-monthly.

Each group has its own interesting and beneficial activities yet all function as a whole under the parent organization—the Jewish Woman's club.

The beautiful and spacious clubhouse, situated on the corner of Washtion and Clark streets, with all its attractive features and facilities, is available to any kindred organization for meetings, dances, and other social activities at a very nominal charge.

The Jewish Woman's club desires the cooperation and support of all who are eligible to membership. Its activities are cultural, civic and social, and are far-reaching in its aims and influences.

A membership drive has already been launched, Mrs. J. L. Saul, chairman, to enable the club to carry on its activities on a greater scale. Those interested may call either Mrs. Saul, at Main 2594-J, or the club office, Main 5039.

Woman's Division To Attend Concert.

Mrs. Theodora Morgan-Stephens, chairman of the music committee of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce, announces that members of the division will have the privilege of sitting together in a special reserved section of the auditorium at the concert of Madame Schumann-Heink Wednesday, February 16.

The seats reserved for members of this organization are in the dress circle just behind the boxes. The banner of the division will be in evidence, and it is expected that a large group of members will be present. The price of the seats will be $1, and tickets may be had from Mrs. Wilbur Colvin, executive secretary of the division, at the office at 604 Chamber of Commerce building.

Washington's Birthday

To the regents of the D. A. R. of the state of Georgia:

Undoubtedly, D. A. R. chapters should use every opportunity to develop a spirit of patriotism in the hearts of the youth of the land. This spirit can best be promoted by placing emphasis upon the observance of our national holidays and by the study of the lives of those whom these national holidays commemorate.

On the 22nd of February, we have another opportunity to teach the youth of our state something of the wonderful character and sterling worth of him who was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." The hearts of our youth readily respond to a recital of the deeds of George Washington whether as a surveyor, as soldier, or statesman. It is in the assimilation upon the part of our youth of such virtues as distinguished Washington that we may develop greatness in the hearts of those who follow after him. Let us, then, for this reason observe the 22nd of February in every chapter and school of the state and place before our youth the lofty ideals which raised Washington above his fellowmen as a lighthouse above the sea.

In order that you may have some definite program to carry out, I suggest the following topics, although you may develop your program as you see fit.

"Washington as a Surveyor."
"Virginia in Washington's Day."
"Washington as a Patriot."
"Washington as a Soldier."
"Washington at Valley Forge."
"The Youth of Washington."
"Washington as President."
"Washington and LaFayette."
"Washington Crossing the Delaware." a recital of the incidents of this trip and what these should teach us.
"Why We Should Observe Washington's Birthday."
"The Customs of Washington's Time."
"An Estimate of Washington."

Nearly every great man in our history has found his inspiration in the life of some great man of the past. A study of the biographies of the great is, therefore, invaluable. Let us then, give our attention to the observance of the birthday of the father of our country, for thereby we may develop by annual observance of this occasion a band of patriots for the coming years and sow the seeds of patriotism in the hearts of all.

Entertaining, as I do, the hope that every chapter will see that every school observes the day appropriately, I am with all good wishes,

Yours very truly,
MRS. FORT E. LAND,
State chairman, Washington's birthday.

Manners Tell the Tale

BY DORIS BLAKE

Know your man by his petting reservations! If he pets without reasonable provocation first time out he is a flirt. If he goes slowly, is sure of a girl's regard for him before he attempts any sort of caress, his intentions are seriously bent.

The above is the formula applied by a young graduate of a leading eastern college for women, and this is the way she has it all figured out.

"I have had four offers of marriage, all unfortunately from men that I had not the faintest desire to marry. But the interesting point about them is that all of them did everything in their power to win my regard and show the seriousness of their intentions before they attempted any sort of caress. On the other hand, I have found that the young men who have tried to make me pet have invariably been the type with no serious intention; in other words, just flirts. And, upon being squelched, this sort disappears for good, showing conclusively how uncomplimentary their attempted caresses were.

"This has come to be my method of judging the worth of a man. If he is speedy in his progress and tries petting and kissing on early acquaintance, without having put himself out to any great extent to be nice to me, I take his advances to be more or less insulting—indicating, anyway, that he takes me for a cheap sort. But if he goes slowly and obviously is really trying to win my regard first, then I consider his advances as not uncomplimentary. Furthermore, this latter kind of man is not easily squelched, but will persist, which proves the sincerity of his liking."

First Hand Testimony Requested.

And that, I suspect, is just about as efficient a method of determining your man as any extant today. Some of us, of a more reserved generation, of course, regret that the test must include the amorous proclivities of the suitor, but times, as they say, have changed since we were girls, even if they have only changed for the better, as some, including Mr. Edison, insist.

It may be that some of you young women have a better yardstick to measure your man by. If so, I should like to hear from you, because this petting business has gone beyond the stage of pastime for just a certain class of young men and women. It is a problem, my eastern college girl graduate insists, that faces every young woman who steps out with an evening escort. I want to gather some first hand testimony, naturally, you must appeal to those who are in a position to give it. So sharpen up your fountain pens or put a fresh ribbon in your typewriters, girls, and let me know just how and where you stand in the matter.

The eastern college girl says it is her opinion that at least 50 per cent of girls pet—and willingly. That they are undoubtedly the ones who have the most and the gayest invitations and so have the most opportunities to meet the greatest number of men.

Rule Applies Both Ways.

"But there are plenty of us who don't," she adds. "And a man can judge a girl by the same rules I have laid out for judging men. One who is too easily approached is a flirt and shopworn—whereas one who goes slower is the more reliable person. The petter goes 75 per cent of the way, and the self-respecting girl who will not pet, who can deny herself some alluring beaux and good times for the sake of her own good opinion, expects the man to go 75 per cent of the way, knowing that he will not do so until he is sincere, and nothing but sincerity is acceptable to her.

"The old-fashioned girl isn't one-tenth so scarce as they like to think I know dozens of her, and dozens of the other kind, but the two rarely mix in parties where young men are included. Each spoils the party for the other, you see."

When the topic is broached of who is to blame for this free and easy companionship the Adams cry out that they are baited into promiscuous intentions by the dress, the actions, and the conduct of the Eves. The Eves are the barrier breakers, for, through their dress, acting, and talk, they first prepare the fellow for his adventures, things he would never think of doing, he swears on a stack of oaths, did temptation not assail his better intentions at every turn of the eye.

Demand and You'll Receive.

"But," advance Josephine addressing the Adams, "suppose we do use too much paint, wear dresses short and are a bit freer in our manner, aren't many of you given to a degree of excessiveness equally surprising? Too much drink, smoke, and language not fit to print? You can't point with honesty to the girls as the cause of all this commotion until you clean up your own base, degenerate tendencies. It is the age-old tradition of women, anything but dead in the most modern of us, to attempt to please their lords and masters. Today some of us have found that to please is to debase ourselves abominably.

"If you wish women to hold up the old standard of reserve, modesty and morality—ask it of them," Josephine pleads. "Just ask it and you'll have it. But don't ask it with kisses and embraces an hour or so after you've met a girl."

And Margaret begs from men an even break on companionship, not so much for the sake of the girls but that men may rate a higher standard among them. Margaret loves life, good books, good plays, good music, also the rhythm of the jazz tune. And she like men who can offer a nice sort of palship. But she hates to have her illusions about the strength and all that of the other sex broken every time she ventures out with one unchaperoned.

"Imagine," says Margaret, "going out with a boy for the second time and, on being asked to pet, replying that it was not my idea of getting the best out of life, and then having him laugh in my face and say frankly he doubted I believed what I was saying! That hurts. Not your own pride so much, when you know what you say to be true—but it hurts that men have grown so callous about women.

All Because of Egotism.

"And all because of this idea men have that they are great lovers, every one of them, and every girl that comes within their ken must be made to appreciate the fact."

Now, if you boys have anything to say in defense of your amorous selves or your amorous brothers, I am not so much interested in hearing about who is to blame as I am in the way you measure girls quick to respond to your embraces and girls who show restraint. As my eastern college friend suggests, the test works equally well on both sexes.

Worth While Club Holds Meeting.

The Worth While club was entertained at the home of the president 598 Arthur street, S. W., Thursday afternoon, Mrs. A. G. Helmer presiding.

The club is composed of a group of women who assemble twice monthly to study the constitution of the United States and the states according to their national number.

Kentucky, the Blue Grass state, the fifteenth state to come into the union, was the subject. Mrs. Nannie Rapp, the music chairman, led with a paper on the earliest music writers of revolutionary times, and a sketch of the life and songs with the music which were written by Stephen C. Foster, including "My Old Kentucky Home."

Mrs. George C. Moody read the early history of Kentucky, which was continued by Mrs. Josephus Camp and Mrs. G. A. Wallace. Mrs. J. D. Evens read the poem written by Frances W. Woolson, entitled "Kentucky Belle," which was heard with a great deal of interest.

Mrs. Oscar Ragland gave a very interesting history of the great Mammoth Cave, and displayed quite a few relics from this great wonder of the world. The current events of the day were read, as was the item of President Coolidge signing the papers making the cave a national park, with many other interesting features. The club adjourned to meet February 24, at 2:30 o'clock at the home at 598 Arthur street. The subject will be "The Navy Department."

Mrs. Brooks Entertains Fifty-Fifty Club.

Mrs. Elliott W. Brooks, 1537 Gordon street, was hostess at the last meeting of the Fifty-Fifty club, with Mrs. Mooney, the president, in the chair. She turned the meeting over to Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, who presented the following program on great merchants: Mrs. E. W. Brogdon read a comprehensive paper on Marshall Field, who originated the idea "the customer is always right and must be satisfied;" Mrs. Sidney Smith presented the life story of F. W. Woolworth following the fortunes of the founder of the famous chain stores through all the byways leading to success. He is one of the few "ten-cent founders" who has maintained the "ten-cent limit." Mrs. Jones spoke of Wannamaker, the merchant prince, who believed not only that "honesty is the best policy," but that a man is in duty bound to give full value received to a customer. He opened his store each morning with religious exercises and was the first great merchant to pay his employees weekly in cash and not in merchandise. Wannamaker arranged for lectures and musical concerts daily to which his employees had access and many of the men and women who worked in this mammoth emporium had received their education under this roof. Mr. Wannamaker also founded a Sunday school which has grown to be the largest in the world. His record, as postmaster general in the cabinet of the president of the United States, has never been excelled.

The current events class closed the program. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. J. R. Wakefield and Mrs. Wood, served refreshments. Mrs. Lollie M. Burns, on Rogers avenue, will entertain the club at the next meeting on February 17, at 10:30 o'clock.

Alpha Gamma Delta Alumnae Has Meeting.

The Atlanta alumnae of Alpha Gamma Delta held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Clyde Wood, in Linwood drive, recently. Plans were discussed for a benefit bridge party to be given in March; also an elaborate banquet to be held at the Biltmore in the spring.

Following the business meeting bridge was played.

An unusually beautiful program of music has been arranged by Mrs. Julius De Gives. Miss Lydia Owens Wheeler will sing, accompanied by Mrs. De Gives, and Miss Ruth Dabney Smith will give several violin selections.

The Constitution

NOW LYING AT CHARLESTOWN NAVY YARD.

By Ada Boyd Glassie.

Out of commission! Old and out of date!
Your spars and riggings are of use no more;
Your oaken beams and bulwarks rotting sore
With age; your gun-mounts rusted, desolate:
Moored hard by steel-clad cruisers—a sad mate;
But, did they know your valiant deeds of yore,
Their spotless, bristling forms would bow before
Your shabby hulk, and cry against your fate.

With bulging canvas trimmed to meet the gale,
You rode the ocean with a seagull's ease;
Your guns brought hostile frigates to their knees;
"Old Ironsides" could falter not, nor fail—
Yours was that fight which freed the seven seas
Where now all nation's ships unquestioned sail.

In view of the nationwide campaign now on for funds with which to completely restore the renowned frigate Constitution, better known as "Old Ironsides," which is lying in the Charlestown navy yard, this touching poem, clipped from a recent issue of the National D. A. R. magazine, will be read with patriotic interest.

It will be of added interest to the Georgia D. A. R. to know that live oak timber, cut on St. Simons island, near Brunswick, Ga., will be partly used in the reconstruction of "Old Ironsides." Much of the timber used in the original construction was hewn from the giant live oak on St. Simons and shipped north on sailing vessels, and the citizens of Brunswick and Glynn county are to have the privilege of again furnishing some of the necessary material.

Miss Stonecypher Is Dance Hostess.

Miss Martha Stonecypher, assisted by her mother, Mrs. W. T. Rowland, entertained at her home on Oakdale road Saturday evening.

Among the guests were several out-of-town people and a large number of the college contingent.

Dancing was the feature of the evening, music being furnished by Harold Mayfield and Joe Curry.

Mrs. B. A. Pierce and Mrs. Joe Gaston presided over the punch bowl.

Oyster Supper At Moreland Church.

An oyster supper, consisting of fried or stewed oysters or hot pancakes, will be served at the Moreland Avenue Baptist church on Friday, February 18. The affair will be given for the benefit of Circle No. 4, of the Woman's Missionary society and the admission price will be 25 cents.

Veterans Remembered.

The Woodrow Wilson chapter C. of C. has for the past four years remembered all the veterans in Crawford county with lovely gifts. The first two years we gave them boxes of fruit, candy, socks and tobacco. The next year we gave them sofa pillows and socks, so this year we gave them a cake with as many candles as they were years old, one had 85 candles on it.

CHAPTER REPORTS

SAVANNAH.

Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, state regent; Mrs. Howard McCall, of Atlanta, ex-vice president general from Georgia, and Mrs. L. G. Hardman, wife of the governor-elect, were honor guests at the meeting of Savannah chapter, D. A. R., when a most pleasing and entertaining program arranged by the historian was given. Mrs. Iola Bishop was hostess and the meeting was held in the auditorium of the Y. W. C. A.

Members of Lachlan McIntosh and Bonaventure chapters were invited to the meeting and were also guests at the reception given for the guests of honor, which was a delightful affair following the program. Receiving with the guests were the regents of the three chapters.

February is a month with several special days to be observed by the D. A. R., including International day, February 6; Georgia day, February 12, and George Washington's birthday, February 22, and these were combined by the Savannah chapter in a beautiful joint program.

Mrs. Walter Wilson, state chairman of the committee on international relations, gave a most interesting address on that subject, followed by a paper on "Georgia's First Independence Day," presented by Mrs. A. H. Shirley. A talk on "Sulgrave Manor" was an interesting contribution by Mrs. Carter Sheppard, while "Wakefield" and "Kenmore" were the subjects of entertaining addresses by Mrs. Luke Pettus and Mrs. Frank Baggett, respectively.

A lovely musical program, under the direction of Mrs. A. F. Carr, with Mrs. Sarah W. Connelly as soloist, was a distinctive feature of the meeting, the numbers including some of the beautiful poems of the late Frank L. Stanton set to music. Also a song "Georgia," composed by Charles M. Gibbs, of Sacannah, was a decided hit.

An able address on "Good Citizenship," by Governor-elect L. G. Hardman, at the Lucas theater culminated the splendid program of the Savannah chapter, which will long be remembered by all who were privileged to attend.

Many other delightful social affairs were given for the honor guests during their stay in Savannah, which city is noted for her beautiful hospitality at all times.

Nancy Hart Chapter to Unveil Marker to Revolutionary Soldier.

On Sunday, March 13, at 3 p. m. the Nancy Hart chapter, D. A. R., of Milledgeville, will unveil a beautiful marker at the grave of Francis Boykin, a soldier of the revolution.

The ceremony will take place at the Boykin burying ground, which is located at the home on the highway now owned by John Shinholster, 11 miles out of Milledgeville.

A splendid program has been arranged and all of the descendants of Francis Boykin are cordially invited to be present.

GENERAL DANIEL STEWART.

The General Daniel Stewart chapter, D. A. R., of Perry, was delightfully entertained at their January meeting at the home of Mrs. L. B. Gay, with Mrs. Carey Andrews, regent, presiding.

During the business session delegates to the national congress in Washington were elected. Included on the program was a fine paper on "Past Presidents General of the D. A. R." and a poem, "Colonial Builders," read by Mrs. George Riley.

At the conclusion of the program the hostess served dainty refreshments.

LYMAN HALL.

The artists' recital given under the auspices of the Lyman Hall chapter D. A. R., of Waycross, was an artistic success, attended by a large group of representative citizens of that city.

Miss Annette Pitt, dramatist; Miss Marion Stone Williams, violinist, and Miss Alex Morrison, pianiste, were the young artists appearing on the program, which was one of the most delightful entertainments ever presented in Waycross. Thanks of the entire community are due the Lyman Hall chapter for this wonderful treat.

THRONATEESKA.

A most interesting meeting of Thronateeska chapter D. A. R., of Albany, recently took place, with Mrs. R. L. Jones, Mrs. R. H. Warren, Mrs. C. R. Davis, Miss Nannie Flint, Mrs. H. A. Tarver and Miss Dorothy Tarver as hostesses. Mrs. R. L. Jones, regent, presided. Delegates and alternates were elected to attend the state conference in Thomaston April 4-7 and the national congress in Washington, D. C., April 18-23.

A number of distinguished guests were present, including Mrs. J. D. Chapman and Mrs. C. L. Kennedy. A lilliputian wedding was staged last week by the chapter, when beautiful period wedding costumes were worn. This entertainment netted quite a neat sum. An interesting event planned for Washington's birthday will be the colonial silver tea, funds from which will apply to the Dougherty county history fund. The tea will be given at "Iris Court," the lovely home of Mrs. J. R. Whitehead, and all members will wear colonial dress.

George Washington's prayer was reverently read by Miss Lula Pond and many interesting facts about Sulgrave Manor, the ancestral home of the Washington family, were given by Mrs. Whitehead. She also read a short sketch of Washington.

A delightful musical program was rendered by Mrs. O. D. Culpepper, Mrs. Walrath and Miss Marguerite Inman, after which the hostesses served tea.

Wakefield Committee Appointed by Regent.

The following resolution was proposed by Mrs. Julius Talmadge, vice president general, at the state board meeting and adopted:

"Whereas, the Wakefield Memorial association has undertaken to restore the birthplace of George Washington, the home in which his great-great-grandfather lived 74 years before his birth, and

"Whereas, this is to be a project in which all loyal patriotic Americans are to join, therefore be it

"Resolved, that the Georgia D. A. R. go on record as indorsing this movement; also be it

"Resolved, that a committee be appointed by the state regent to bring the matter to the attention of the chapter, urging them to include the history of Wakefield in one of their monthly programs."

The state regent has appointed the following Wakefield committee: Mrs. I. Rashinski, chairman, Dublin; Mrs. Ada Ramp Walden, Augusta; Mrs. J. C. Carroll, Tennille; Mrs. S. H. McKee, Americus; Mrs. A. S. Hardy, Gainesville; Mrs. John J. Harris, Sandersville; Mrs. S. G. Gilbreath, Atlanta.

Wakefield will possibly be included in Washington's birthday program.

Harper and Parker Hairdressing Methods Separate Systems

Through a typographical error in an article appearing in the February 5th issue of The Constitution, it was made to appear that both the Parker and Harper systems of hair treatment were commented upon in a series of lectures given by Madame Correyell of New York and Paris at Chamberlain-Johnson-DuBose Company.

This was in error as Madame Correyell spoke only of the Parker method.

The Harper method, used under the direction of Miss Gertrude McDaris, located in the Forsyth Theatre Building, is well known to Atlantans and is an entirely separate system from the Parker system. Both systems have a wide following and through their scientific methods, taught by reliable and efficient operators, benefit the health and exquisite texture of the hair.

Marking Revolutionary Graves

My dear Chapter Regent: As chairman of the committee on marking revolutionary soldiers' graves, may I, through you and your chairman, earnestly request that every member of the chapter make a special effort to locate and to mark the graves of revolutionary soldiers. Surely there is no work more important, and certainly we agree that as the years go by, it becomes increasingly more difficult to get accurate information about these graves. It is not necessary to give reasons why this work should be done now, for it is evident to each of us.

A beautiful marker may be secured from J. E. Caldwell, Philadelphia. This is the quickest way to get the marker. However, a marker may be obtained from the government, without expense, except transfer from the nearest station to the cemetery, by writing "The Adjutant General, Washington," who will send you a paper to be filled out, and when this is done and the paper returned to him, the marker will be sent as early as conditions will permit.

At your earliest convenience please inform me of any new graves you may have located or may have marked.

With all good wishes, I am,
Cordially yours,
(MRS. S. V.) GRACE M. SANFORD,
State chairman, marking revolutionary soldiers' graves, Athens, Ga.

Oldest Pensioner of the War of 1812

MRS. MAHALA HUFF of KENTUCKY

MRS. HUFF IS 107 YEARS OLD

THE last living soldier of the War of 1812 died 30 years ago at the age of 105. There were, however, in 1926, twenty widows of veterans of that last war with Great Britain still living and drawing pensions from the U. S. Government. Of these, the oldest, Mrs. Mahala Huff, 107, lives on a hill overlooking the Lug River, near Louisa, Kentucky.

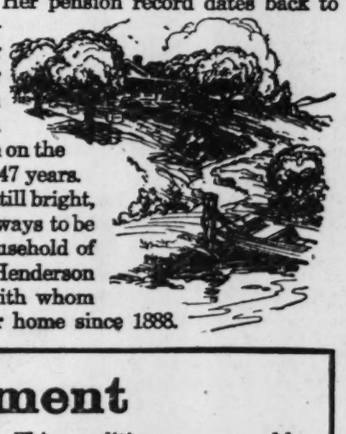

IN 1812, England was at war with France, and being in need of service men she claimed justification in stopping American ships on the high seas and searching them for British subjects, to be impressed into her service. On several occasions American ships were seized "for carrying contraband" when they were searched and found to have among the passengers or crew a person thought to be a British subject. This the United States considered a violation of the seas, and caused complications to arise which led to the War of 1812, in which the world's youngest nation matched itself against one of the oldest and strongest.

The war was fought mostly on the sea, but there were land campaigns along the Canadian border, around Washington and at New Orleans. The war lasted about two and a half years, and was brought to an end by a conference at Ghent, in December, 1814, but so slow were the means of communication that two great battles were fought before news of the peace treaty reached America. One of these was the Battle of New Orleans, where General Andrew Jackson's militiamen defeated the British troops under General Packenham.

Peace has now reigned 111 years between the two countries, and their trust of each other has grown so great that there is not a single fort of either nation along the whole extent of the Canadian border.

It is an interesting fact that, of the widows of our soldiers and sailors of this old war who are still drawing pensions, on account of the services of their husbands, twenty were living in 1926. The oldest of these is Mrs. Mahala Wells Huff, of Louisa, Ky., the widow of Private James Huff, a Virginia militiaman who served in the Fourth Regiment, Taylor's Brigade, until honorably discharged on March 10, 1814.

Mrs. Huff was born on Wells Ridge, Twelve Pole, Va. (now W. Va.), in December, 1818. She was married to Mr. Huff on Dec. 5, 1869, in Wayne County, West Virginia. Her pension record dates back to March 15, 1879—three weeks after the death of her husband—when her age was 60. Thus she has been on the pension rolls for 47 years.

Mrs. Huff is still bright, happy, and finds ways to be helpful in the household of her only son, Henderson Wells, age 73, with whom she has made her home since 1888.

Mrs. Huff's Statement

"SEVERAL years ago," says Mrs. Huff, "I had very sick spells. This condition was caused by chronic constipation and indigestion. My daughter-in-law had used Black-Draught a good deal for her family whenever they needed a laxative, so she had me to take it. She gave it to me regularly as a course of medicine. Not only did it relieve me of the bad sick spells, but it seemed to have a very good effect on my general health. I would get bilious. For several months I took the Black-Draught, and in time my trouble got straightened out.

"I have not had to take much medicine during my life. Now and then, when I feel I need a good laxative, I always return to Black-Draught, and a dose or two is all that is needed to keep me in trim. I am feeling very well now."

Crosses of Service

Dear Madam President:

I am writing you in regard to the Cross of Service, which, by action of the general convention at Richmond, becomes the "Cross of Military Service."

According to adoption of our committee recommendations, the following additions are made to the rules of award, and you are asked to so notify the chapters of your division:

1—Each state division may, at its annual convention, bestow the Cross of Military Service upon two veterans of the world war, who have rendered such distinct service as to be deserving of such special recognition from the U. D. C. Applicatons for these two decorations must fulfill all requirements of the rules of award and must be submitted to the president general, to be approved by her and the custodian of crosses, three (3) months before date of state convention. The executive committee of the state division shall select one candidate from the state at large and shall allow the chapter or chapters of town in which convention is to meet, to nominate the other candidate, provided such chapter has for nomination a world war veteran deserving of such special decoration.

2—In case a chapter loses a Cross of Military Service before its bestowal upon candidate, the said chapter shall be deprived of further presentations until one year has elapsed.

3—In case a candidate for the Cross of Military Service has been declared in writing, by his physician or physicians, to be in a dying condition, the decorations may be presented without waiting for regular day of award.

4—The general convention authorized the chairman of the insignia committee to publish in book form the names and important data connected therewith of those men who have received the Cross of Military Service (about 3,000). This volume will become one of the most valuable historic records ever compiled by the U. D. C. Every chapter that has awarded the decoration should realize the importance of possessing a copy. Only a limited number will be issued and there will most probably be no second edition. The estimated cost will approximate $1.50 per volume. Its preparation is already under way. Will you please take up the matter at once with the chapters of your division and find out how many copies will be desired. This is most important and I urge you to impress upon them its importance. Each division should secure copies for its officers and such additional copies as it may need for special presentations. Many of the men, who have received the decoration, will doubtless desire a copy. Have your chapters consider this in making their order. The number of copies issued will depend largely upon the advance orders. To avoid disappointment in securing same, chapters should take up the matter promptly and send their orders through their state president. The present plan is to issue 1,000 copies, so there may be only a few copies available after the time of publication. Please give this as much publicity as possible among your chapters and impress upon them the need of prompt action, in notifying you of number desired. Copies should be placed in all public libraries. You will, I am sure, as state president, realize the great value that this book will be and the importance of your chapters securing a copy. I shall depend upon your cooperation. Please let me hear from you in regard to same.

Yours with high regards and best wishes for 1927.

Miss Baxter Writes About World War Educational Fund

My Dear Madam President and Daughters of the Confederacy:

The world war educational fund of the Georgia division needs $400 at least from you annually. Will you rise to this need? Will you increase your contribution and will not every chapter in the division take some part in this educational work?

Better still than raising $400 annually would be a vigorous effort on your part this convention year to bring the world war fund up to $5,000, as originally planned. With $5,000 capital, I think we could leave the fund off your annual budget. We now have $1,500 as principal, so the amount necessary to raise is $3,500. If you determine to raise this amount of money before the convention in October, it seems to me you should be able to do it? I have always felt that the Georgia division is the heart of Georgia. Other organizations in the state have received handsome contributions from individuals. Is your influence less than that of other Georgia organizations? We have men and women throughout the state from whom we might reasonably hope endowments for this fund. The fund serves a three-fold purpose in that we are honoring world war boys who are descendants of Confederate veterans. We are helping educate boys of Confederate lineage, and we are serving our state in its greatest need. We in Georgia have exploited our natural resources while we are failing to rightly develop our great human resource—the brain of our Georgia people. Therefore can you work for any funds more far reaching in results than the world war educational fund for boys and the Helen Plane for girls?

We now have to our loan account $241.98, $150 of which will be due our three students this spring, allowing $50 to each student. One hundred and fifty dollars annually will not support a boy in college, but we are only helping those who help support themselves. We would not now have this $241.98 loan account except that one of our graduates paid in December $105 on his note. This young man was highly recommended by men in his community and was endorsed by the West Point chapter, U. D. C. He owed money when he applied for a loan from us, but said he would pay his note to us before he paid any other indebtedness. So soon as he was graduated in January at the university, he secured a position on a newspaper. Without prompting on my part he sent me in December his check for $105. He said he had had a little raise in salary, was not making much, but managed to save something each week. I know you will be interested in this young man and will be glad to know you have helped him to graduate and will agree with me that he has in him the making of a man. We have two other graduates, and I hope they will come along with payments in time. Our three boys we are now helping are promising and I trust will be a credit to our organization.

As you know, the interest on our principal is available for our loan account, but you can see from the figures I give you that we cannot carry even three boys along without more generous support from the division.

Can you make the $3,500? Will you anyway come up to $400, so we can help boys who need college education?

Faithfully yours,
ALICE BAXTER,
Chairman world war educational fund, Georgia division, U. D. C.

Conyers U. D. C. Holds First Meeting of Year.

The regular monthly meeting of the Conyers chapter, U. D. C., was held at the home of Mrs. W. O. Mann, Mrs. Luther Morris being joint hostess, on Tuesday afternoon, January 25. In the absence of the president, Mrs. S. I. Cowan presided.

A report was read by the treasurer. At the close of the business the meeting was turned over to the program committee with Mrs. J. R. Lee in charge and the following program was presented:

"Robert E. Lee, Builder of a New South," Mrs. O. P. Almand; "Secession of Georgia on Birthday of Lee, January 19, 1861," Mrs. John Huff; "Matthew Fontaine Murray, Called the 'Pathfinder of the Seas,'" Mrs. Harry White, "Home Life of General Lee's Family at Arlington," Mrs. J. R. Lee; "Thomas Jonathan Jackson, Called 'Stonewall,'" Mrs. Walter Huff; music, Miss Allie Joe Sigman.

Chapter Reports

McRAE.

The local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy held their January meeting at the home of Mrs. E. F. McRae, Wednesday afternoon, at which an appropriate program, celebrating the birthday of two of the most famous generals of the Confederacy, Lee and Jackson, was given with an elaborate tribute to the memory of Georgia's own poet laureate, Frank L. Stanton, and one of his poems enjoyed by an enthusiastic group of loyal daughters.

Mrs. W. S. Mann gave a short sketch of the lives of the generals and then gave the history of Stanton's life with some very interesting bits of his philosophy. It was a very fitting tribute to a Georgia son who is known throughout the country for his contributions to poetry. Miss Elise Tillman, a gifted reader, who is at home for a short vacation with their parents, read Stanton's "Just a-Wearyin' For You."

Mrs. W. B. Folsom, president of the chapter, presided over a short business session preceding the program.

NORCROSS.

The L. P. Thomas chapter, assisted by the faculty and pupils of the Norcross High school, fittingly observed the birthdays of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson on Friday afternoon at the school auditorium.

The music was furnished by the schoolchildren under the direction of Mrs. T. D. McDaniel and Mrs. T. L. Rochester.

The four high school grades had written papers portraying the characteristics of Lee and Jackson, and the papers of Misses Lelabel Ellard, Mildred Medlock, Connie Hunnicutt and Mary Alice Johnson were selected to be read.

The following program was rendered:

Quotations, grammar grades. Papers on Lee and Jackson, high school. Character of Lee, Mildred Medlock. Estimates of Lee, Connie Hunnicutt. Character of Stonewall Jackson, Mary Alice Johnson. Address, "Robert E Lee and the Principles for Which He Fought," Rev. M. D. Reed.

O. C. HORNE CHAPTER.

At the February meeting of the O. C. Horne chapter, reports of officers and chairmen showed that all work of the chapter is being carried on with system and efficiency. A rising vote of thanks was made Mrs. Sam Dull, Jr., of Atlanta, for several copies of portraits of distinguished Georgians. Appreciation was expressed at the appointment of Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, state president, of Miss Lillie Martin, as state historian.

Sidney Lanier was the subject of the program, which followed the business session.

Mrs. Roll Pate made one of the most beautiful addresses ever given at an O. C. Horne chapter meeting, on the life of Lanier. The reading of two of Lanier's poems by Mrs. J. J. Harvard, Jr., and of three musical numbers, concluded the interesting program arranged by Mrs. A. M. Duggan.

Personal reminiscenses by friends of the great man and poet, gave the possessive touch, and truly Sidney Lanier is the pride of all Georgians.

BUENA VISTA.

The Marion county chapter of the U. D. C. met at the Lowe hotel January 19. Misses Minnie Floyd and Sarah Lowe were the hostesses.

Forty members and visitors were present.

The meeting was called to order by Miss Minnie Lowe, president. The president read new year's greetings and the secretary, Mrs. Hirshburg, read the president general's letter.

The following year-book committee was appointed: Mesdames T. N. Williams, W. B. Short, A. S. Boyett, LeRoy Hirshburg and J. G. Lowe.

The program included there great and good men:

Reading, "Robert E. Lee," Mrs. T. L. Rogers. Lee's favorite song, "How Firm a Foundation." Reading, "Stonewall Jackson," Mrs. Lula Reese. Jackson's favorite song, "Pass Over the River." Reading, "Human Incidents in the Lives of Lee and Jackson," Mrs. W. B. Short. Piano solo, "Star-Spangled Banner," Mrs. Walker Williams. Reading, "I Am Going Home," Mrs. B. B. Clements. Solo, "Just a-Wearyn' For You," Mrs. M. R. Cooper. Reading, "Marcelle," Miss Martha Lowe. Musical selections, Mrs. Walker Williams.

PHIL COOK CHAPTER.

An interesting program celebrating Georgia day was presented Wednesday at the regular monthly meeting of the Phil Cook chapter, U. D. C., of Montezuma, Mrs. W. H. McKenzie, president of the chapter, presided. The program included "Dixie," sung by the chapter; a chorus by the Junior Music club; a sketch of George Washington, by Mrs. L. W. Gardner; an interpretative dance, by Miss Mary McGill; reading, "Song of the Chattahoochee," by Mrs. Jack Reid; song, "Georgia Day," by Miss Clifford Walters; a sketch of Alexander Stephens, by Mrs. Oscar McKenzie; chorus by the Junior Music club. An interesting feature of the program was answering to roll call by naming a famous Georgian and his service.

Mrs. McKenzie Accepts Office In Stone Mountain Association

The news appearing in Saturday's papers that Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, president of the Georgia division, U. D. C., has accepted the vice presidency of the Stone Mountain Monumental association will be of keen interest to all members of the U. D. C. not only in Georgia but throughout the association. Mrs. McKenzie, for many years at the forefront in U. D. C. work, will succeed the late Colonel William Lawson Peel, of Atlanta. She has also accepted membership on the directorate of the Stone Mountain association.

This is the second time Mrs. McKenzie has been honored by the Stone Mountain organization. Shortly after her election as president of the Georgia U. D. C., she was asked to be a member of the Stone Mountain association but declined the position at that time.

In accepting the two offices in the Stone Mountain association Mrs. McKenzie makes the distinction that she does so in her personal capacity and not in her official capacity as U. D. C. president.

Un Mot Ici Est Bien

MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Editor Georgia Division U. D. C.

Resolutions deploring the resignation of our beloved Miss Rutherford appear upon the page today. There has been no sadder moment in the annals of the Georgia Division, U. D. C., that when it was realized that Miss Millie's resignation must be accepted, as it was her wish and she felt she was unable to carry on her noble work longer, and although her ultimatum caused much sadness, it could never have been accepted with finality had not the division felt that in accepting her resignation they were acting in accord with her wishes. Ever through the years will her blessed influence be felt.

Mrs. R. M. Master's picture appears on the page today. This brilliant woman is most outstanding in public work, being not only regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in Waynesboro, but is president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy as well. Today, Mrs. McMaster outlines her plan of work and puts in tabloid form her hope of constructive achievement for the ensuing months.

It has been a regret that much interesting publicity has been delayed from its rightful place upon the official page owing to lack of space, due to the three special pages, in honor of Robert E. Lee, Sidney Lanier, and Alexander Stephens, which have been edited. No material is ever withheld that is received by the state editor, as it is her pleasure to exploit all chapters, large or small alike, according to their accomplishments.

Miss Alice Baxter, Atlanta, chairman of world war educational fund sends an interesting appeal in the interest of this project. It is hoped that this urge will meet with ready response for the educational funds ever hold a heart appeal.

Miss Laura Frazer, chairman of subscription to Confederate Veterans, sends a letter full of interest to all. She gives an excerp from Mrs. Ford, editor of the Confederate Veteran. Mrs. Frazer is an enthusiastic worker along any endeavor, and her work for the Georgia division as state recording secretary was most outstanding. We feel that her wishes that this will be "a banner" year for subscriptions to the Confederate veteran will be accomplished under her able and efficient leadership.

Asks Subscriptions For "The Veteran."

To chapter presidents of the Georgia division, U. D. C.:

As chairman of "subscriptions to the Confederate Veteran," I am writing to urge that you make a strong appeal in your chapter for the Confederate Veteran.

We should double our subscriptions to this splendid magazine this year. I am sure this can be done if you stress the matter in your chapter meetings and I suggest that in each chapter a strong committee be appointed to canvass for subscriptions.

The following is an extract from a letter sent out by Mrs. A. E. Ford, official editor of the U. D. C.:

"The Veteran gives us good space each month for our own 'U. D. C. notes' and this department being the only official means of such interchange of ideas and is invaluable to our organization.

"In addition to that feature, the Veteran itself contains a store of valuable historical matter and a fund of pleasant reading that no Daughter of the Confederacy can afford to miss."

Now daughters, let us make this a banner year for subscriptions.

With best wishes for a successful year in every department of the work of the U. D. C.

Cordially yours,
LAURA M. FRASER,
Chairman of Subscriptions to the Confederate Veteran.

Thanks to C. of C.

Let me express my thanks and appreciation to Mrs. Bankston and C. of C. for the large and handsome cake which you kindly sent to me. It meant more than passing beauty and the candles were not few but it filled my heart with gladness. Thanks to C. of C. and you. I am sure that all the veterans though they are becoming few, if they received such a present, they appreciate it, too.

FOR E. F. BRYANT BY J. W. B.
January 6, 1927.

Regret Resignation Of Miss Rutherford.

The following resolutions were passed by the Savannah chapter U. D. C. at its February meeting:

"Whereas, it has come to the knowledge of the Savannah chapter U. D. C. that our beloved state historian and former historian general U. D. C., Miss Mildred Lewis Rutherford, has found it necessary to resign the position of historian for life of the Georgia division, and

"Whereas, it is with a deep sense of gratitude that we recall Miss Rutherford's wonderful work for the south in general and the U. D. C. in particular, and

"Whereas, in view of the fact that Miss Rutherford has been an inspiration; not only to Georgia, but to our entire section, we feel that her loss to the cause of the true history of the south is irreparable.

"Therefore be it resolved, that while bowing to her will, as to one we have always looked up to and found to be right, it is with sad hearts we accept her wish to retire from her office in the Georgia division,

"Be it also resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Miss Rutherford, as we desire her to know of our love and that we, as Daughters of the Confederacy, will always miss her presence among us, and the help and knowledge that she gave us on southern history.

"By order of the Savannah chapter U. D. C.
"SARAH S. C. HULL, President."

Spring Street P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The meeting of the Spring Street P.-T. A. was held Wednesday, February 9, at 3 o'clock. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Joseph Mahoney presided. Great enthusiasm was shown over the auction of parcels that were donated by the mothers of the school. They were wrapped and tied in mysterious and fascinating shapes. The bidding was exciting and rapid and the association made $61 on the sale.

The attractive addition to the auditorium is a gift from Miss Berman, a pair of lovely brass and wrought iron fern stands placed at each end of the stage.

Calhoun U. D. C. Unveils Marker.

Sunday afternoon quite a number of people of Calhoun and Resaca, met two miles north of Resaca on the Dixie highway for the unveiling of a white marble and gray stone marker which had been set up by the Gordon county chapter No. 923, United Daughters of the Confederacy in honor of the Confederate dead that fell in the Resaca engagement and whose bodies lie in the Confederate cemetery nearby.

Mrs. Maude B. Neal, president of the chapter, explained the object of the gathering.

Rev. J. T. Eakes, of the Calhoun M. E. church, south, delivered a brief address upholding the courage and dignity of the south.

The handsome marker was then unveiled by the president, Mrs. Maude B. Neal, and Mrs. Lizzie Wilson Hines, chairman for a number of years of the "memorial committee," and to whose untiring interest and efforts the placing of this marker was made possible. Mrs. Hines, who is also secretary of the chapter, said:

"This is only one of the 433 markers that have been dedicated by different chapters United Daughters of the Confederacy. This service is rendered in a spirit of forgiveness in loving remembrance of the deeds of valor which were displayed in the days of long ago when the flower of the south's young manhood answered the call to meet the stress of the times that tried men's sould. October 25, 1866, 60 years ago—the Resaca Confederate cemetery near this place was consecrated and dedicated to the memory of the soldiers buried there who had given their lives in a cause they believed to be right, on this historic battlefield. In placing this marker, the Gordon county chapter thus makes her contribution towards marking "Historic Georgia."

The inscription is as follows: "The Resaca Confederate cemetery is located one-half mile north of this spot. This marker given and placed by the Gordon county chapter, No. 923, United Daughters of the Confederacy, marks the battlefield of May, 1864."

Urges Contribution To Randolph Relief.

Waynesboro, Ga., January 18, 1927.

Dear Madam President: Our relief work and fund is growing in favor. Our chapters are doing a fine work locally for the Women of the Confederacy in their midst, which is most gratifying to your state chairman.

The chapters are asked to respond to this call at once. Send at least $2 and as much more as possible. Please be prompt with your contributions as the need is urgent and I have to make payments monthly. We have had several requests for aid, but your chairman has had to say no for lack of funds. What will you do with this?

Hoping to hear favorably from you at once, with best wishes to your chapter for the coming year.

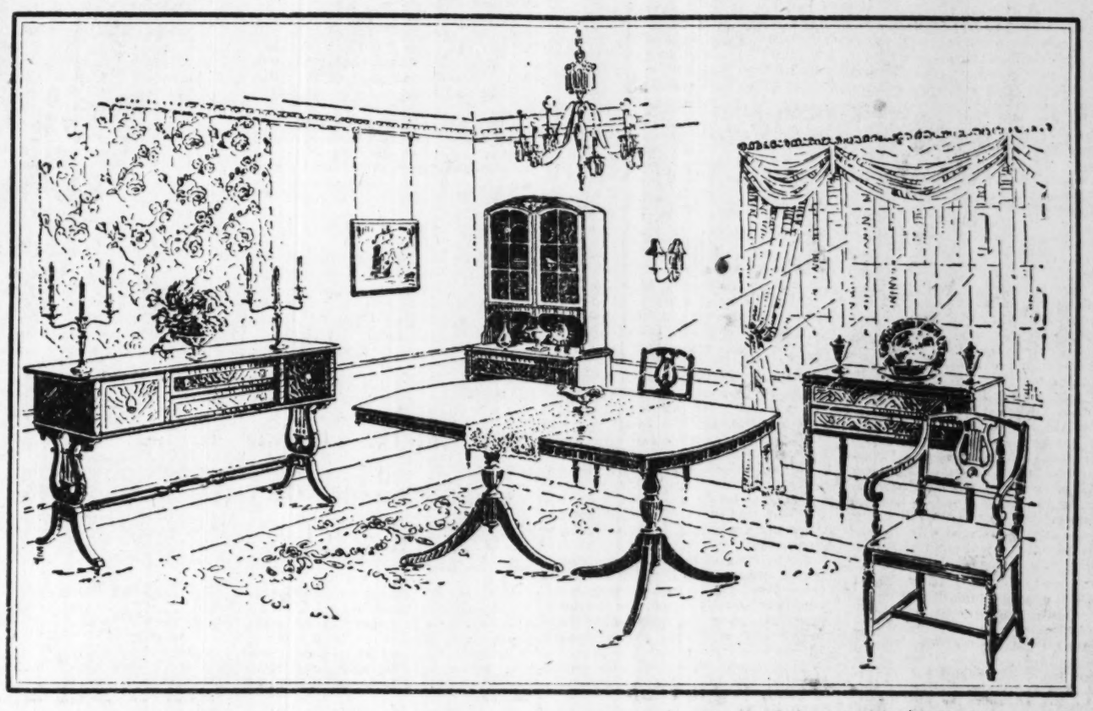

Yours sincerely,
MRS. NORMAN V. RANDOLPH,
Relief Fund.

Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co.

THE great, glorious voice of Madam Ernestine Schumann-Heink, rising in melodious volume in the concert Wednesday evening sponsored by the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra association at the auditorium, will perhaps be heard for the last time in this city, as fifty golden years of vocalization is rounding out for this queenly artist. She says its her farewell tour of the United States, which is the only regrettable factor in the appearance of this remarkable and great-hearted woman whose exquisite voice is so mellow and true.

Her return to Atlanta recalls to the editor of the woman's department of The Constitution, the early days of her newspaper experience and the fright occasioned when the managing editor of The Atlanta News sent her as a member of the staff to interview the celebrated Madam Schumann-Heink. The interview took place in her room at the Piedmont hotel, and the story had to be ready for publication, so the orders ran, in time for the afternoon edition.

A very panic-stricken young girl departed from the newspaper office armed with pencil and paper, accompanied by a brain as blank as the paper she carried, on which to write the singer's interview. Timidly she sent up her name, and more timidly did she enter the room, for the great contralto was practising some of the songs on her evening's program. Sensing the fright, evidently appreciating and realizing the lack of experience of the youthful interviewer, this truly wonderful and self-effacing woman grasped both hands in hers, giving a hearty welcome in the warmth of her handclasp and the radiance of her smile she at once set the green-horn at perfect ease. Madam Schumann-Heink's early struggles for recognition, success and fame have taught her to respect the highest and lowest, believing that everyone she comes in contact with teaches her a little bit of life.

This meeting took place on May 29, and by a strange coincidence, it was the newspaper woman's birthday. A crystal vase, filled with red, red roses stood upon the Steinway grand, a gift from the association sponsoring the concert. The famous artist sang song after song until twenty wonderful melodies swelled the number, and not a question had been propounded.

Time flew on golden wings! The scared reporter sat dreamy-eyed and entranced, entirely forgetful of the existence of an outside world, and that the paper went to press at a given hour, while listening to the burst of divine music from the song-bird's throat.

The tinkle of the telephone bell summoned the interviewer, who, as she placed the receiver to her ear heard the familiar stern voice of the managing editor say, "If you expect to get your story in the home edition, you had better hurry." Fully awakened to the situation and entirely conscious of her obligation, she approached the responsive and kindly Madam Schumann-Heink saying, "This has been a delightful treat. I shall never forget the sublime occasion, as it fell upon my nineteenth birthday." Whereupon a gracious queenly woman, the world's most renowned contralto, folded the bashful reporter in her motherly arms and kissed her twice, then thrice. Turning quickly towards the piano, Madam Schumann-Heink swept the crimson roses from the vase and presented the bouquet to the surprised girl.

The published article was written and linked together just as naturally as it occurred, and up to this very day, even though the years are but a thread in the tapestry of time, the writer has held an affectionate regard for Madam Schumann-Heink, whose sympathetic and humanliness put courage in the heart of a cub reporter. Naturally, red roses and a genuine enthusiasm for the little things of life, have been associated with the distinguished artist by the editor of The Constitution's woman's department.

WHEN a matrimonial barque recently drifted upon the rocks, after fourteen years of rough sailing, it worked to Atlanta's advantage in returning to her native city a former popular belle. Though not far removed, she has made her home since her marriage in a Georgia city to the south of us. In cultural and exclusive social circles, she has made an enviable place for herself in the city of her marital adoption, where her husband's family are numbered among the socially prominent. Burning her bridges behind her, by selling her home, this charming young matron will return to us in the springtime, minus husband, bringing three attractive children to add to the younger belles and beaux of the future.

THAT Atlanta women dress for other women was proven conclusively Monday evening at the "Merry Widow" party Mrs. George Brown gave at her Habersham road home.

Not a man was present! Sixteen women, ten of them widows, foregathered at the invitation of the hostess who has a flair for discovering original and interesting ways to entertain. Every guest was fashionably gowned in evening attire, and wore her most elaborate velvet or brocade wrap.

It was a very intimate little hen party, the occasion revolving around two charming sisters, Mrs. Hugh McKee and Mrs. John Moore, the latter being from Eufaula, Ala., having come to the city to be present when her grand-daughter, Miss Bessie Mitchell weds H. Clay Moore, Jr., next week. Yellow pencils, topped with cunning, mischievous looking faces, and merry widow hats trimmed with stunning ostrich feathers perched on their heads, were used for keeping score. The very moment Mrs. Ranse Wright sat down at a table she stuck the pencil in her hair, and everybody followed suit. Consequently, vari-colored feathers waved aloft from sixteen well-gowned heads, and added muchly to the decorative scheme. Score cards were painted in corresponding fashion and jonquils nodded gracefully from vases and bowls in Mrs. Brown's handsome home.

One of the guests, a woman for whom society has small appeal these days, said she created a real sensation in her household on announcing she was going to an evening party. She was elegantly gowned and as she spoke her bright eyes and heightened color revealed the pleasurable excitement the invitation had produced.

PERHAPS the spring social season, which augurs well to be among the most brilliant on record, will be augmented by another elaborate wedding, the same to be the outcome of a visit this week-end to Palm Beach by one of our most popular young bachelors.

We have not been taken into the confidence of said bachelor, who is considered one of the most dashing of the fashionable young bloods of the city, but, being of a sentimental vein, we do not understand how the lure of romance beneath balmy tropical skies on sun-kissed shores could possibly be resisted.

Neither will the wedding, which is purely a prophecy on our part as yet, take place in our midst we are sorry to note, for the lovely maiden who lures our hero southward hails from another state. That, however, would not lessen our cordial interest in every detail of the affair, so great is the affection in which we hold this only son and heir of the prominent Atlantans and social leaders who are his parents.

The meeting of this attractive young couple, we are told, took place in Maine last summer, where both were prominent members of the summer colony at one of the fashionable coast resorts. It was with sincere regret that society relinquished the presence for the whole season of this young Atlantan and his charming mother.

CUPID does not confine his activities to youth alone! Nor does romance lose any of its rose-colored interest by reason of its denouement in circles of more advanced dignity.

Involved in this affaires de coeur, of which we would let you know, are a charming widow, whose place is so assured in the social and club life of Atlanta that her name invariably leads the roster, and a prominent jurist who sits in judgment in an adjoining county.

As fresh as a debutante's is the beauty of this fascinating matron, whose widow's weeds are vastly becoming. She has proven her qualifications of ability and leadership at the helm of one of the city's most praiseworthy institutions, her name having been prominently identified with Atlanta clubdom for a number of years.

Inheriting a background of wealth and culture, she belonged to one of the city's first families. In recent years she has spent much time enjoying the advantages of travel both in this country and abroad.

The gentleman in question matches the charm of the lovely lady to whom he pays court. A host of admiring friends have long wondered why he has never succumbed to the lure of romance and been led to the marital altar. Perhaps he has never before found the ideal of his dreams personified!

School Set To Assemble At Tea-Dance

Members of Atlanta's school girl and boy set of society will assemble Monday afternoon at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel from 4 until 6 o'cloc to celebrate the memory of St. Valentine with a tea-dance to be held in the Georgian ballroom of the hotel.

Valentines and Cupids will be attractively arranged throughout the ballroom as decorations. There will be a postoffice where the guests will mail Valentines to each other which will be delivered during the afternoon.

There will be several attractive features during the afternoon including a song and dance by little Miss Eugenia Snow, one of Atlanta's talented dancers, and a specialty dance number by Miss Marie Pappenheimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pappenheimer, and Harrold Cooledge, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrold Cooledge. Miss Pappenheimer and Master Cooledge are pupils of Miss Margaret Bryan.

Miss Jacquilin Moore Mails Love's True Message To Be Delivered in Atlanta St. Valentine's Day

Miss Jacquilin Moore, beautiful sub-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, was caught by The Constitution's photographer, Kenneth Rogers, dropping a billet-doux addressed "To My Valentine" in the depths of a U. S. mail box in time to be delivered tomorrow, February 14, St. Valentine's day. Miss Moore exemplifies the spirit of the day upon which Cupid's darts shoot swift and true.

By Bessie S. Stafford.

Hearts will be trumps tomorrow! Dan Cupid, a red quiver filled with golden-tipped arrows strapped to his fat little side, will fare forth to take swift aim with his bow at palpitating hearts, for love speaks the same language as it did on St. Valentine's day centuries agone, repeating the "sweetest story ever told" after a twentieth century style.

Flower Time.

Valentine means flower time, so Cupid dashes into a florist shop, orders a bouquet of fragrant valley lilies, its center made colorful with red roses, places it in a glorified red satin box and sends it to somebody's sweetheart. Perhaps it goes to a charming sub-deb like Miss Jacquilin Moore, who was snapped by The Constitution staff photographer mailing a valentine to one of her numerous admirers.

To ensnare another maiden, and with the same glowing sentiment radiating from his heart, Dan Cupid will hie himself to the nearest confectioners and select another big heart-shaped red box. But, this time he fills it with luscious caramels and chocolate drops that make your mouth water. Smilingly he'll give the name and address of one of the prettiest girls in the debutante set. Of course he sends no cards with these love tokens, for Cupid is a sly little rascal, having faith that the romantic tendency of the day will supply the name of the one sending this remembrance.

New thrills, derived from old customs, will fly over the telegraph and telephone, and wires buzzing with love messages will ask Atlanta girls to be someone else's valentine.

Cupid is a progressive youngster and keeps abreast with the times. He uses the radio to help him plan the strategy of love. And, it's a great factor indeed, for Monday will prove an awfully busy day for this chubby little fellow and he has nobody to run errands.

Once upon a time a valentine stopped a duel and subdued the anger of a fiery young man in Alabama. Shortly after the civil war two gallant Confederate soldiers met and loved a beautiful young girl named Mary Abernathy, the belle of Jacksonville, Ala. Colonel Horace Lee Stevenson was the name of one, while the other was John Armstrong. They met one day in the public square and Mr. Armstrong boasted of his engagement that evening with the belle of the township who was evidently quite a coquette. Jealousy raged within the heart of Colonel Stevenson, and forthwith he challenged his rival to meet him in a duel to be fought on St. Valentine's day. Friends of the enraged interceded, carried the furious pair to their respective homes and appointed a guard of honor to watch them until they could get in a better frame of mind.

In olden days valentines were framed in lacy frills and ornamented with crimson hearts inscribed with extravagant sentiment. It was one fitting this description that Mary Abernathy dropped in the Jacksonville postoffice for Colonel Stevenson on Valentine's day 50 years ago. It softened his anger like the sun's rays melt snow. It made him pluck up hope again, for he married his sweetheart and they lived in perfect happiness to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary.

Nearly 2,000 Valentine days have passed by since Valentine, the martyred priest, languished in prison, dying February 14, 270 A. D., after disobeying the cruel and unjust Claudius, emperor of Rome, by secretly marrying many couples, whose betrothal Claudius ordered broken, commanding the men to take part in warfare. St. Valentine believed in love and marriage and that's why the romance of the day has been preserved for ages. If you receive a red heart or a lace-frilled card, candy or flowers, telegrams, radio or telephone messages tomorrow that will set your heart a-flutter just remember some one loves you and believes in St. Valentine's day.

In recognition of her great service the Pictorial Review's achievement award for 1923 went to her as the American woman who makes the most distinctive achievement through individual effort in the field of art, industry, literature, music, drama, education, science, or sociology.

The first two weeks in March have been set aside as the active campaign days. Throughout the country the music clubs have been giving special programs for this drive. The first large gift of $500 was made by Mrs. Worcester R. Warner, of Tarrytown, N. Y., whose long service and interest for music have been so evidenced by her generosity.

The children of Georgia will conduct their crusade through the leadership of Miss Evelyn Jackson, whose fine service for the children of Atlanta and of Georgia is so well known. The appointment of Miss Jackson was made by the junior chairman for Georgia in the Federation of Music Clubs, Mrs. W. P. Harbin, of Rome.

From the interest so general throughout the country Miss Stephens expects a most successful campaign, and is confident that Georgia will be one of the leaders. She is admirably suited to fill this chairmanship, as Miss Stephens enjoys unusual popularity and is successful in every undertaking.

Much important business will be transacted; the names of the steering chairmen for the different bills to be presented will be selected by these organizations.

Clearing House.

Colonel and Mrs. Gibson Go To Washington.

The departure of Colonel and Mrs. William R. Gibson the latter part of February, for Washington, D. Colonel Gibson goes to the national capital to replace Colonel Francis H. Pope, who has been made brigadier general, and will assume his duties in the office of Quartermaster General B. Frank Cheatham, having served as quartermaster for the Fourth Corps area in Atlanta. Colonel Lynnwood E. Hanson, of Governor's Island, N. Y., replaces Colonel Gibson, who came to Atlanta to relieve Colonel W. Gray Zalinsky, who married Mrs. Emmie Carter Divine, of Atlanta.

Colonel and Mrs. Gibson have made their home at the Georgian Terrace and have been popular members of military and civilian society. A series of farewell parties have been given in their honor, and they will be central figures at several others previous to leaving, by automobile, for Washington, D. C.

Women Catching Organization Spirit.

This is the day of organization. Women have caught the spirit of the day, and have formed clubs of every description. They are expriencing the joy of working together. Groups, working toward the same purpose, can do what individuals cannot accomplish. Many clubs, as they face the issues of the day, are accomplishing some very worthwhile things.

Only in Christian lands and under Christian influence are women so highly organized and undertaking to help in the real needs of life. Woman's opportunities through organization are increasing many fold. With the power that organization affords will women keep clearly before them the highest ideals. Humanity's ideals will be held as high as woman holds them. Only one influence can keep them high and that is Christ. Practically all clubwomen are professed Christians, giving unsparingly of their time.

Do we dare group our great opportunities and accept power which organization gives unless we keep close to that influence which purifies our ideal?

Once a week in the Lord's house will not suffice. Christian women should establish and conserve a midweek church day and allow no outside organization to encroach upon this.

Praying together in the Lord's house will clear our vision and purify our ideals.

Women, then, dare go forward in organized strength.

Ticket Selling Contest Awards Announced Today

Much interest centers around the awarding of prizes won by schools and individual children in the contest for selling tickets to the matinee of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra. This year the attendance prize for schools, given to the one having the greatest percentage of its pupils present, was won by the College Park school, which had 51 7-10 per cent of its enrollment at the concert. The Glenwood school came next, with Tenth street, the Samuel Inman and North Avenue Presbyterian schools ranking third, fourth and fifth. The first prize was $15 worth of musical merchandise given by the Cable Piano company, to be selected by the winning school, College Park. The second prize is 10 records, donated by the Phillips and Crew Piano company.

The prize offered the children's organization selling the greatest number of tickets was won by Atlanta Junior Music club, and is a small victrola given by Ludden & Bates. This organization sold 230 tickets.

The prize for the boy or girl selling individually the most tickets, was awarded to Bowen David, Jr. His record was 102 tickets. The Cable Piano company donated $10 in musical merchandise to this winner, which he may select.

The $10 in gold to be awarded for the best essay on "What Educational Value Has the Symphony Matinee for the Children, and What It Means To Me," will be presented soon after the 20th of February, when the judges have made their decision.

Briefly Told

It is announced that a magnificent gift of $118,000 has been received for the greater Wesleyan college. The gift comes from the B. N. Duke estate, which originally was $100,000; the $18,000 being the accrued interest since the original gift. The new Wesleyan is being erected at Rivoli, six miles from Macon, and when completed will represent an outlay of $3,000,000, which will be a great and lasting monument to Methodism.

Mrs. Buford Boykin, of Carrollton, superintendent of social service for the North Georgia Conference Woman's Missionary society, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is at Davis-Fischer sanitarium.

The Epworth League at Jonesboro, Ga., has assumed the contribution of $5 per month towards the support of a native worker in Mexico. This Mexican worker being unable to finance himself, applied to Bishop Beauchamp for aid. The board of missions having no available funds, had to turn him down, but the message reached our young leaguers at Jonesboro and they asked the privilege of helping this worthy person in his efforts to carry the gospel to his fellow-countrymen.

At the regular meetings of the Woman's Missionary society, made Monday afternoon, all the committee and circle leaders made splendid and very encouraging reports. There was a splendid attendance and every member is working to make this society a success. Our church is small but the field is large, so watch us grow.

Mrs. F. J. Norton entertained the Cooper Street Baptist Woman's Missionary society on January 30, at which time a very interesting time was had. Several contests were very much enjoyed, of which Mrs. Herndon and Mrs. Key were the winners.

Those attending were Mrs. A. F. Todd, Mrs. Key, Mrs. J. L. Peacock, Mrs. A. A. James, Mrs. R. Ridgeway, Mrs. F. A. Herndon, Mrs. C. M. Turner, Mrs. N. A. Skelton, Mrs. Mayfield, Mrs. May Elliott, Mrs. J. M. Turner. Splendid refreshments were served.

There was a delightful afternoon spent January 30 at Edgewood Baptist church, at which time Circle No. 4 sponsored the program, which was very entertaining and helpful.

Mrs. L. B. Cranford, president of the Woman's Missionary society, made a splendid address. This was a special meeting, for the fifth Monday, and after the program a social hour was enjoyed, with refreshments.

Mrs. P. F. Duggan was the leader of a very interesting and helpful cottage prayer meeting, held last week at the home of Mrs. L. D. Watson, Inman circle. The subject was "Faith."

At the beginning of the new year the members of the Ponce de Leon Woman's Missionary society decided to foster cottage prayer meetings as part of their personal service. These meetings have proven very successful in the way of attendance and very profitable.

Margaret Fund Tenth Anniversary.

This is a fund of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union used to furnish boarding scholarships for the sons and daughters of the Southern Baptist convention foreign missionaries and of Southern Baptist convention home missionaries living outside of the United States.

In 1905 Mrs. Frank Chambers, formerly of Alabama, now of New York, gave $10,000 as a memorial in honor of her mother and daughter. With this money a home was bought in Greenville, S. C., and named the "Margaret Home." This property was used as a home for missionaries' children while they were receiving an education in the homeland, also a resting place for our missionaries when home on furlough.

In the past 10 years 401 students have received scholarship, amounting to approximately $74,000.

It is with great joy that Georgia is privileged to give with all southern states of the Southern Baptist convention in a special love gift celebrating the tenth anniversary of the Margaret fund. This year the scholarship has been raised from $200 to $300 each.

Let's make Georgia 100 per cent by each society in the state sending a gift by April 15, marked Margaret fund tenth birthday offering.

MRS. L. A. WITHERSPOON, Divisional Mother of N. C. Division.

East Point W. M. S. Is Wide-Awake.

The East Point Baptist W. M. S. with its president, Mrs. A. J. Moncrief, nine circle chairmen, and various committees, is proving a live, wide-awake organization under its efficient and consecrated leader.

In the mission study department there have already been eight mission books completed and over fifty seals given to those standing the test.

It is worthy of note that some of the women of this society have been permitted to enlarge their fields of usefulness.

Mrs. M. O. Hemperly has been appointed Sunbeam leader for the Atlanta association. Miss Sarah Snow holds a responsible office at the Stewart Avenue Good Will Center and Mrs. Clinkscales is Bible and mission study leader for the fifth district.

The corps of officers are as follows: President, Mrs. J. S. Moncrief; first vice president, Mrs. J. A. Crumbley; second vice president, Mrs. Hodge; third vice president, Mrs. S. B. Seegar; secretary, Mrs. A. C. Carter; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Taylor; treasurer, Mrs. C. R. Parrish; pianist, Mrs. L. L. Wells.

Mt. Gilead Society Meets.

The regular monthly meeting of the Mt. Gilead Woman's Missionary society was held in the Sunday school rooms of the church Tuesday afternoon, February 8. The Bible lesson, given by the president; the leaflet, given by Mrs. Marcus Cash, and presentation of the bulletin by Miss Mary Lou Cash helped to make the meeting an interesting one. Plans were discussed for the year's work. Mrs. J. M. Baker was elected delegate to LaGrange.

Our social service and local work superintendents are doing splendid work. The superintendent of supplies recently carried a box to Wesley horse, consisting of 18 quarts of fruit and vegetables and two pecks of sweet potatoes. She is planning to send a number of boxes this year.

Our society regretted very much to give up our faithful president, Mrs. J. M. Baker. However, we are delighted with our new president, and Mrs. Baker is doing active work as vice president and superintendent of the babies.

MRS. MARCUS CASH, Superintendent of Publicity.

Sunbeam Band At Milledgeville.

There isn't anything more attractive and interesting than a crowd of little children, gathered together in a Sunbeam band, and there is the very dearest one, we think, at the Baptist church in Milledgeville, Ga. The beloved leader of that band is Mrs. O. A. Thaxton, and if leaders are born and not made, as some one has said, then Mrs. Thaxton is a born Sunbeam leader.

The children adore her and obey her every word; when she tells them the Bible story, and says "Now, children, lock your little lips" every mouth is tightly closed, and every eye is fixed on her, and silence reigns, while she is talking.

Mrs. Thaxton and her assistant, Mrs. Saye, ar enow making a scrapbook, containing the pictures of our Baptist missionaries, taken from old numbers of "Home and Foreign Fields." They plan with these pictures to teach the children the names and make them familiar with the faces of these missionaries.

This might be a splendid idea for other Sunbeam leaders, and a fine way to utilize the back numbers of our most valuable magazine, "Home and Foreign Fields."

MRS. D. S. SANFORD.

Church Day Great Success.

Members of the women's missionary and benevolent society are taking great interest in the establishment of Wednesday as "Church Day," which is proving a great success at the Second Baptist church. Members who have never known each other are getting acquainted, and the social hour is a splendid time for talking over plans, committee meetings and class gatherings. A hundred or more were served with a delicious turkey dinner on opening day when Mrs. Carter Helm Jones was hostess.

The president of the Woman's Missionary and Benevolent society, Mrs. Hal Hentz, was hostess last week and a delightful dinner and evening were enjoyed by her guests. The dinner was followed by a meeting of workers' council, Mr. John S. Spalding, Sunday school superintendent, presiding, and the regular Wednesday evening prayer meeting, led by the pastor.

Increased interest in attendance and in the work of the church is noted, and it is believed that much good will be accomplished through these wonderful opportunities for service, next Wednesday.

Hapeville First Baptist Theophilae Class Party.

A most enjoyable occasion was the Valentine party at which Mrs. Leon V. Hall entertained the Theophilae Bible Study class of the First Baptist church of Hapeville on Tuesday evening.

A short business session was called by Mrs. W. R. Melson, president of the class. Invocation was offered by the teacher, Mrs. J. W. Harris. Mrs. L. E. Mann, secretary, read minutes of recent activities in the class. The usual monthly offering of sunshine pennies was given. Mrs. J. W. Denson, treasurer, gave a very gratifying report of funds in the treasury. The session was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Denson.

A musical program, planned by the hostess, was rendered.

At a late hour refreshments were served, Mrs. Zack Adamson assisting the hostess in serving. The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Zack Adamson, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Arnette, William Akin, Paul Byers, Mrs. Verita D. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Wynton R. Melson, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Hamby, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Mathewson, Mr. and Mrs. John Low Smith, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Denson, Misses Pearl and Miriana Harris, John Harris, Mr. and Mrs. J. Raymond Cathy, Miss Ellie Johnson, Miss Rosa Mae Woodruff and Miss Lonie Webb.

Mr. Hutchinson, the pastor: President, Mrs. Reid H. Hunter; vice president, Mrs. V. J. Ward; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Freeman Johnson; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles Roper; treasurer, Mrs. Frank McClendon; assistant treasurer, Mrs. W. J. Cook; agent for The Voice, Mrs. Freeman Johnson. Moslem women will be the study of the Clarkston society under the leadership of Mrs. Hutchinson. Mr. Hutchinson will conduct the Bible study once a month.

MRS. J. FRANK KELLY, Publicity Chairman.

Atlanta District Christians Hold Missionary Meeting

On Thursday, January 27, an all-day missionary meeting of the Atlanta district was held at the Decatur Christian church, Decatur, Ga.

Mrs. Hansell, district secretary, presided and Mrs. Phipps, president, opened the meeting in her ever vivacious, charming manner. The devotional services were conducted by Mrs. Coats of the Peachtree Christian church. The forewor' was given by Mrs. Downey, who is always an inspiration to all on every occasion.

The morning was given over to the secretaries of the four societies and reports were given of all the organizations in their respective churches. It was a most helpful and encouraging time. It does us good to compare results. Out shortcomings goad us on, our success encourages and inspires us to better and bigger things. We deeply regretted that there was not a full attendance from all the societies at this time to see just how we measured up and to help make plans for the attainment of our goal for the coming year and most of all to hear Dr. Crozier, of India. She was introduced just before lunch and urged that the societies attain their goal, in spite of the many handicaps that the good work on the foreign field might go forward.

A committee of the Decatur church served lunch. They were assisted by Mrs. Holt, who furnished and served delicious coffee.

The afternoon session was opened by circle Bible verses and prayer. A percentage of attendance was taken and a missionary book was awarded to the Decatur society.

Miss Elizabeth Norris and Agnes Weatherly, of First Christian church, gave a splendid report and talk on the girls' circle work. Mrs. Suttenfield, junior superintendent, of West End, gave a helpful and inspiring talk on "The Boys' and Girls' Work."

Mrs. Wallace Rogers, of Trinity Methodist church, and president of Federated Churchwomen of Georgia, was very much enjoyed by all. She is a charming speaker—witty, entertaining and sparkling. Dr. Crozier made the talk of the afternoon and at the close we felt as if we had actually looked in on our cousins in India—had been drawn closer to them and understood a little more fully their problems and ours. After a day with her we could understand just why she was "over there" and how she has accomplished so much, with her big heart filled with the love of God and overflowing for all mankind. It was our Master who said: "And the greatest of these is love."

MRS. A. T. RAMSEY, Secretary W. M. S. of Decatur Christian Church.

All Saints' Auxiliary Meets.

All Saints' branch of the Woman's auxiliary met in All Saints' chapel Monday, February 7, when a comprehensive plan of work dealing with both home and foreign missions was outlined by the different chairmen.

Two letters from missionaries in China were read by Mrs. Thomas Morgan, who also displayed an interesting collection of Chinese articles. Mrs. Le Roy Hatfield had received a letter from one of the church's missionaries in the Philippines. The reading of this was likewise enjoyed, as was also a communication read by Mrs. Robert Connley from a mission station in the mountains of West Virginia, to which the women of All Saints' parish had sent a much-appreciated box of clothing, together with an equipment of medical supplies provided by Mrs. John F. MacDougald.

An earnest plea for concrete evidence of interest in the Young Women's Christian association was made by Mrs. J. Houston Johnston, to whom assurance was given of a definite help.

Visits to the stockade with resultant benefit to the women and girls confined there was reported by Miss Bessie Lambert and Deaconess Katherine Ward.

The committee on parish visiting, of which Mrs. A. H. Sterne is chairman, is an essetnial factor in the furtherance of parish life and interest.

A Lenten study class is being arranged by members of the woman's auxiliary under the leadership of Mrs. John Gilmore, and will take as their text book, "Beyond City Limits," a fine survey of religious conditions in rural America, showing the great need and opportunity for true missionary service in the wide and lonely spaces of our own land.

Mrs. Wells To Help In Bible Lessons.

Mrs. T. E. Atkinson, of Newnan, who is superintendent of Bible and mission study for the North Georgia Conference Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church south, announces that Mrs. W. Frank Wells, of Hapeville, will assist the women of the conference in the Bible lessons for the year by publishing outlines of the books to be studied, each month, in the woman's page of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, which is the official organ of the North and South Georgia conferences.

Mrs. Wells is known for her ability as a Bible teacher and has given courses of study in many parts of the state and in other states and her outlines of the Old Testament studies for 1927 will be received with much pleasure and benefit by the women of her denomination, and quite probably by other denominations.

The program of study is planned by Dr. Matthews, of Scarritt college, Nashville, Tenn., and the general theme is, "Major Themes from Minor Prophets." With Mrs. Wells' helpful outlines added to Dr. Matthews' splendid discussions of these lessons, there is no doubt that Bible study classes will progress, as never before, in the societies of southern Methodism.

MRS. WALLACE ROGERS.

St. Luke's Auxiliary Holds Meeting.

Upon the invitation of Mrs. N. R. High Moor, the woman's auxiliary of St. Luke's church met at the rectory on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Spurgeon King, the newly elected president of the auxiliary, had charge of the meeting, which, after a short business session, partook the nature of an informal tea. Mrs. Moor's hospitality was appreciated and the occasion brought together many women of St. Luke's parish.

United Day of Prayer for Missions

Mrs. H. C. Phipps, who was appointed by the Federated Church Women of Georgia at their recent quarterly meeting chairman of a committee to plan for the observance of the world day of prayer for missions, announces that the meeting will be held at the First Christian church Friday afternoon, March 4, at 2:30 o'clock. This service will be under the auspices of the executive committee of the Federated Church Women and it is the earnest desire of the board that representatives from churches of all denominations shall be in attendance. Special topics of prayer have been suggested and sent out by the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America and the council of women for home missions. Topics will be announced later.

High Lights From LaGrange Convention.

Mrs. Ina Doris Fulton, treasurer of woman's section of the board of missions, reports increase in dues, pledges, scholarships and week of prayer offerings, despite the emphasis laid on the Bennett memorial fund. She urges that we keep up our enthusiasm and zeal, and direct our efforts to the support of independent specials as a means of extension for the new year.

The children's work will be the prayer special for 1927.

St. Paul's, Gainesville, Ga., junior missionary society is the only group of juniors on the book of remembrance.

Miss Ruth Field, of Newnan, who is attending school at Scarritt, on the Edna Stripling scholarship, has been accepted by the board and will receive her consecration at Shreveport in March, after which she will go to Japan.

Delegates and visitors to the convention were entertained by the president, faculty and young ladies at the Methodist college on Tuesday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

On the memory book of the Bennett Memorial there are 240 auxiliaries, 7 young people societies and 181 individuals. Three districts, South Atlanta, Dalton and Marietta, made 100 per cent.

LaGrange and South Atlanta districts made 100 per cent in Bible and mission study.

From 4 to 6 o'clock Wednesday the D. A. R. and U. D. C.s honored the delegates and visitors to the convention with a reception at the Woman's club. MRS. ARTHUR HALE.

Margaret Fund Birthday Party.

The W. M. S. of West End Baptist church held a birthday party on Monday, February 7, celebrating the tenth anniversary of the Margaret fund.

Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon, the divisional mother, gave an interesting history of the fund and spoke very beautifully of the sons and daughters of our missionaries who have been educated by means of contributions to this fund.

There was a beautiful birthday cake, with ten lighted candles and a love gift to the fund.

Methodist Women's City Mission Board Has Good Meeting

The city mission board met Tuesday at 10 o'clock at Wesley Community house. The attendance was most satisfactory. Mrs. M. D. Therrell, of Paris Street church, led the devotional and gave a most impressive talk.

Mrs. L. V. Kinnerly, first vice president, sent a letter, resigning her office, which was accepted with regret. Mrs. Wallace Rogers was unanimously elected to take her place. Mrs. Rogers was escorted to the chair and began her duties at once, as Mrs. A. L. Norris, president, was in Florida.

Reports were made of officers and committee chairmen, showing splendid activity.

Mrs. John C. Slaton, chairman of domestic arts, was forced to resign her chairmanship and Mrs. T. Lacy was appointed to fill her place.

Mrs. W. C. McCord accepted the hairmanship of Bible craft.

Miss Bessie Allen, head resident, and Miss Herndon, assistant, made wonderful reports, showing that their time was filled with social uplift and educational work.

EXPERT WASHING AND REPAIRING

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to comb or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it; then you destroy it entirely.

To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you may have. This simple remedy never fails.

About a "necessary evil" that ISN'T necessary

Ever if you have all the modern equipments—electric washing machine, electric iron, etc., who ever enjoyed washday in the home. There's soap, starch, bluing, rinsing, wringing, hanging-out, taking-in, ironing and a hundred other things that no machinery will do for you. You have always considered it a "necessary evil."

But of course all of this isn't necessary. Just phone the laundry and the route man will call for your bundle and explain the laundry's many services to you.

Try this better way—you'll find it a big relief to have no washwoman to worry about, no waiting, no uncertainty.

There's a wash service to fit every pocketbook. Use your telephone. Call the laundry.

Mrs. Pittman Tells Tallapoosa's 'Legend and History' To Club

This article was written for, and read at the Tallapoosa Thursday club, by Mrs. H. L. Pittman at the home of Mrs. G. B. Evans, Thursday, February 3.

Joy wings, fun wings,
Dusk wings, sun wings!
Life has many wings to give
And oh, let's take them all.
Let us take and use wings;
Let us not refuse wings,
Just because beginners
Sometimes fly too far and fall.
Slow wings, gay wings,
Work wings, play wings!
Let us have a hundred pairs
And use them, you and I.
Pin them on securely,
Spread them widely, surely,
Stand upon a sunrise hill
And fly, fly, fly!

As in imagination, we fly from the sunrise hill, let us journey backward in time and view a landscape of winding streams flowing between hill's covered with giant hickory, massive oaks and majestic pines. Here, near a great bend in the river, we see the wigwams of Cherokee Indians who call the stream by the musical name of Tallapoosa, or Golden river, and are said to have selected this location because of its freedom from storms. Not many miles from the river we see a group of seven tall chestnut trees, under whose shade the mighty chief holds his council fires, and in the distance rises Talla, or the mountain where gold is found.

No one can tell us how long these 100 per cent Americans have been here, fishing, hunting deer, bear and other game, raising their maize, using their crude implements of stone patiently made from the native rock, nor how long they held undisputed possession before the first white pioneers came on from the early settlements along the coast. At least a hundred years ago we find in place of the Indians' tepees, log houses, a store building or two, and widely scattered farms.

Authentic Tradition.

Somewhat authentic tradition tells us that where the J. J. Thornton house now stands there was a building, large for the time, used for a boarding and day school, where men afterward prominent in Georgia's political life received their diplomas. Among the pioneers of these days whose descendants are known to us, were the Bentleys, Kilgores, Dodsons, Windoms, Summerlins, and others, while later comers were Heads, James, McBrides, Aderholts, Tumlins and many others. So for many long contented years the dreamy, unhurried life continued with plenty of life's necessities as the time called for them. Finally the academy was built where Dr. Waldrop's house now stands—a long one-story building, with benches arranged around the room, a long writing table on the platform at one end, two large blackboards in the corners behind which were the cloakrooms.

From a former student the writer has this history: Every Friday afternoon a part of the program was saying facts, or Bible verses. A boy, later mayor of the town, forgetting, turned to his neighbor for help and was told to say: "Jonah swallowed the whale," so spoke out in stentorian tones, whereupon the teacher demanded the source of his information, which he reluctantly gave, so Donald was duly punished for his misbehavior, and Robert went free. As mountain dew flowed freely from several bar rooms in those halcyon days, and entertainment was in demand, prize fights and wrestling bouts were indulged in. When an unusual number gathered, as on horse swapping day, a ring was drawn, the contestants fighting vigorously, the defeated one probably furnishing drinks all 'round.

Then came the stormy days of war, and Duke's cavalry marched from the little hamlet to fight in Virginia. Others enlisted elsewhere, and the union sympathizers left abruptly. During the march to the sea, straggling bands are said to have come through Tallapoosa, and tourists in the "boom" days were shown bullet holes in the floor of the old Uncle Buck Summerlin store, as well as the slave quarters on the old Arkansas Davis place. There is also a vague tradition that there was a woolen mill, the sills of which may still be found in Green's creek, which was burned by the marauding band.

Peace was declared, the survivors returned home to their farms and stores—life a little harder, with no slaves to help, but still a peaceful quiet until in the early eighties rumor came of the new railroad. In 1884 the road became a reality, running a mile from the Old Town, and was for a while the terminus. Stores sprang up, new homes were built, and Uncle Bud Head ran a commissary on the site of Hildebrand's Drug store, and later a hotel. It is interesting to note that as late as 1880 there were about 20,000 miles of railroad in the south.

A new school building became necessary, and a pretentious three-room structure arose where the new building now stands. The school was called the Tallapoosa Male and Female seminary, with Rev. Wright as principal. The intermediate room was elevated about two feet above the larger high school room and folding doors allowed this to be used as stage on such occasions as exhibition or other entertainments. By 1887 there were 33 business concerns of all kinds, including law office and hair dresser, but as yet no real estate office. Only Head and Thomas, lawyers, and J. H. Davis seem to survive after these years, but the firms of J. T. Tuggle, J. B. Little, R. E. Cobb, T. L. Dougherty, W. L. Tumlin, I. N. Watson, J. C. Jackson sawmill; L. J. Pounds will be remembered by many.

Yankee Invasion.

The Tallapoosa Journal was edited and controlled by E. Christian at that time. Then came the second Yankee invasion, and the "boom." There was organized in June of 1887 the Tallapoosa Land, Mining and Manufacturing company, with Stilwell, of New York, president; Plummer, secretary; Carlton, of Hartford, Conn., treasurer, and such names as John R. Gordon, Henry W. Grady and other prominent men on the board of directors, and controlling 4,950 acres of land in the vicinity of Tallapoosa. To quote from their first prospectus: "We intend to build a great, rich and beautiful city," and it was laid out accordingly. Grading began, men and mules were requisitioned, 8,000 city lots were laid out, extending to Aderholts bridge on the north, one and one-half miles toward Buchanan, one mile down the railroad, one-half mile south, and a mile west of the depot. Seven miles of boulevard, numerous parks, horticultural gardens, lakes and drives were laid out. Newspapers in the north and west carried glowing accounts of the new city which was to rival Birmingham, then only 13 years old. "In climate, the Italy of America—in manufacturing, the Pittsburgh of the south, in altitude, Pikes Peak of Piedmont, in health, sanitorium of the world."

Excursions were run from Kansas City, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Louisville, Evansville, New York, Washington and other points. New industries seprang up in the night—the Piedmont Glass works, iron furnace, wagon factory, and many others. Real estate offices were now on every corner, alone of all these S. S. Rambo and A. V. Howe have weathered the storms, being members of the firms of Lyon and Rambo, and of E. M. Davenport, respectively.

Four new railroads were promised almost immediately—new comers were shown ore of gold, silver, copper and even garnets are mentioned in an early prospectus, many new industries, a new school building, two new hotels were to be completed within three years. Each 100th purchaser was given a lot. The city officials were: A. I. Head, mayor; J. H. Davis, C. L. Head, J. Head, R. M. Strickland, councilmen.

In the prospectus of 1888-89 we are told that we can take the rumor for what it is worth, but it is reported the diamond fields, excelling those in South Africa, are said to lie near Tallapoosa. That the First National bank, of Atlanta, was founded with gold taken from the Holland, or Camille gold mine—that one might grow rich merchandising, farming, dairying, fruit growing, etc., etc., ad libitum. That 25 new business houses had been opened up in four months, and 437 dwellings had been built in nine months.

St. Agnes' seminary, an exclusive Episcpal school, was opened in the house now occupied by Ivey Pope, and was conducted by Miss McMurray, of Dayton, Ohio; Sunnyside institute in the building now occupied by the orphanage, was conducted by M. Charpentier.

The new Baptist church was completed, the M. E. church, south, was already built. An imposing Episcopal church building was to be erected, which developed into the building now occupied by the Pentecostal. We were told "Come to Tallapoosa and grow up with the city." Tallapoosa had reached the stage of development of Birmingham in 1880 and would no doubt surpass that city in a short time.

Ladies were told that the beautiful drives through the woods, the lovely flowers blooming nearly all the year would furnish delightful entertainment which might be shown them by father, husband, brother, sweetheart. So great an impression had been made on the people of the surrounding territory that in a debate given at a picnic on the Fourth the question: "Should Foreign Immigration be Allowed?" was discussed. One of the affirmative speakers closed with fervor: "Let the furriners come; let the furriners from Michigan come."

Public Schools Organized.

The public schools were organized organized in this year under act of incorpoartion of January, 1889, written by Colonel J. M. McBride, then president of the board of education. This was the first system of really free public schools in the state. Bonds for $10,000 were voted in 1891 and the new building was ready for occupancy in January, 1892.

The La Tosca Tennis club and San Souci club were social assets of this period. The 1891 prospectus shows the Land, Mining and Manufacturing company changed to the Georgia-Alabama Development company, Benjamin Butler, president, and R. L. Spencer, manager. The excursionists were entertained this year by a great clam bake not far from where Colonel Thomas lives. The city now had two newspapers, the Journal, edited by Hall and Matthews; the Dispatch, by O'Shields. City waterworks and the Vernon Light company were in operation. The Lithia hotel was being built. The park had been laid out.

A great Fourth of July picnic was held in the new park with General John B. Gordon as chief speaker. Schools marched in solid phalanx. As the column with the guest of honor and honorary escort reached the platform the marshal of the day announced: "Three cheers for General Gordon," whereupon someone from behind handed up three chairs, though it has never been made clear just how he expected the general to use the three chairs.

The woolen mill was completed, the glass works, furnace, knitting mill, wagon factory, stove factory, cabinet works, foundry, overall factory were in operation or near completion at the time. The Georgia, Tennessee and Illinois railroad was an assured project. On April 16 of this year the special train of President Harrison stopped at the Head avenue crossing and he made a short talk. Henry Grady is quoted in the prospectus as speaking of the wonderful growth and prospects of the new city. The Elton block, the Presbyterian church in the vale, was built about this time and the Catholic and M. E. churches began. The high tide of prosperity was probably reached in 1891, although our street railroad was built after this, the powder works put in operation and some smaller industries established, among them being a blacking factory and perfumery plant. About this time the grape industry was launched. Great vineyards were planted, the knitting mill later being turned into a winery. Grape raising was a decided success, but marketing a failure. If we had had even the trucks of the present day this might have furnished Tallapoosa the much-needed enterprise it still lacks, but gradually the lovely vineyards were abandoned.

These years saw a great national financial crisis and Tallapoosa suffered accordingly. It became a city pleasant to live in—low rents, cheap living but little employment. The Christian church, Tuggle block were put up in these years—the glass works and furnace ran intermittently—the century turned and Tallapoosa settled into a slower but surer growth than had marked its early history. Not long after this, 1904 or 1905 came our first auto, belonging to a Mr. Short. The Monarch hotel was built about this time. Our good schools were safeguarded through all these years and the attendance seemed always to increase. The Presbyterian church was moved from the vale to the present location and rededicated in 1905-6 with appropriate ceremony. The 1908 prospectus mentions the Thursday club, St. Celilia and Thimble clubs. The Tallapoosa mills put Tallapoosa forward again and a new light system gave dignity to our little city. The ice plant was still in operation, the foundry and the glass works and furnace were operated after this time.

Several disastrous fires occurred in the next few years. The old Tuggle building was replaced by the J. H. Davis building, the newer Tuggle block by the J. M. McBride block now belonging to Dr. L. C. Waldrop and others, the buildings on Alabama street by the present row of brick buildings, the old Tallapoosa hotel by the building now occupied by the Hildebrand Drug store and others. G. W. and J. C. Humlin's second store building was erected about 1912. Most of us know the history of recent years, the bond issue, the erection of the new school building, the new M. E. church, south, the inflation of land values after the war and many interesting bits of history.

Tallapoosa is a modern Phoenix, rising from boom, fires, bank failures with a proud dignity that cannot be downed—and if we praise and push instead of censure, who knows but that we may yet live to see when the wave of prosperity that has turned southward rises high enough and reaches us in its certain expanse.

The committee on applied education had charge of the meeting of the Vidalia Woman's club last Thursday, with Mrs. J. C. Price, chairman, and a member of the county board of education making an address on the "Purpose of Education."

A discussion on educational problems in Georgia, Toombs county in particular, was led by Mrs. John T Ragan.

Mrs. B. P. Jackson read "The Slow Man," by Ernest Poole. A delightful feature of the program was a violin selection by Jack Rountree, talented young violinist, accompanied on the piano by his mother, Mrs. George Rountree.

In response to a request from the Cuthbert Woman's club the Vidalia club will send a Toombs county exhibit for their Made-in-Georgia fair.

Byromville Club Will Sponsor Georgia Products

The Byromville Woman's club finance committee has planned a Georgia products dinner for February 17, and will also entertain the Dooly County federation February 12.

Wilder. Short memorial exercises were held for Frank L. Stanton, Georgia's poet laureate, and whose column, "Just From Georgia," appeared in The Constitution for 40 years. Mrs. W. J. Page was in charge of the program, and Mrs. Howard Hill and Miss Roberts discussed "The Nation's Capital, Places and Buildings."

Miss Gilbert Urges Attention To Federation Choral Contest

Miss Elizabeth H. Gilbert, of Bainbridge, state chairman of community singing, who urges clubwomen to give attention to the plan of arrangement of choral contests to be held at the Albany council in March.

March 29, the date for the council at Albany, is now almost upon us, and all final arrangements for the choral contests to be held at that time are nearly complete. I am sure that every club will want to be represented in its district chorus, and we must see that the names of all the contestants are sent immediately to the district chairman of music so that she will know upon how many to rely. District chairmen of music must appoint a chorus conductor at once if this has not already been done. A suitable place for rehearsals will be provided in Albany and singers will please hold themselves in readiness for the conductor's call.

We are all anxious to have the contests a great success for two reasons—First, to foster the spirit of community singing throughout the state; and second, to prove that we know our state song and can sing it as well as any other state in the union.

It will be a distinct honor to win the prize for fine singing, and with competition as keen as it is, we must work earnestly to do so. We are relying upon the enthusiastic support of each and every club, and there is no club too small to send at least one singer to join the chorus.

Please read the club page of The Constitution each week for any additional plans that may be made. Everyone is looking forward to the contests, and we must not fail to come up to these expectations.

Mrs. Brantley said that when she attended the meetings of the general federation that she had no one to sing the state song of Georgia for her. This must no longer be true. From this time forth we must all know the song and proper preparation for the contests will insure this result.

Let me urge you again to report at once to your music chairman how many singers you will send, and last but not least, urge everyone to join in our effort to make of our state "a singing Georgia."

ELIZABETH H. GILBERT,
State chairman of community singing,
G. F. W. C. Bainbridge, Ga.

State President Defines Mid-Biennial Councils

Inasmuch as the mid-biennial councils are comparatively recent, many questions of detail still arise, and for the information of all club members the following is given:

The composition and work of the council should be clearly defined.

A council is composed of the state executive board, presidents of clubs or alternates elected by the clubs. This includes the three groups of clubs.

The work of a council—The time will be given strictly to the business of the federation, during the session, which may be shorter than a convention.

Business—A council may transact all business that may come before a convention, except amending the constitution and election of officers. All reports of officers and committees will be in order.

MRS. A. P. BRANTLEY,
President of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Tenth District Is Active In Federation Work

The month of February was ushered in with an important meeting of the executive board of the Washington County Federation of Clubs in Tennille, at the home of the president, Mrs. A. E. Gilmore.

Several important matters were disposed of, among which were the details of raising funds with which to finance the placing of a student at Tallulah Falls school on the Ella Mitchell memorial fund. The county federation expressed the hope of considerable return from the play of Friday night.

The play, "The Mask of Dagmon," written by Mrs. J. J. Harris and presented February 4 at the Sandersville auditorium, was a splendid success from every standpoint. The large and commodious auditorium was well filled with an appreciative audience.

The curtain rose on a gorgeous throne scene with Leopold, the 16th century of king of Illeehria, on the throne surrounded by a brilliant court. The costuming of the entire play was most effective. Before this court at the command of the king passed a pageant which wonderfully portrayed the cordial interest of the clubs of the Washington County federation in the court of Illeehria.

The pageant was as follows:

"Hail to the King," Transylvania club, Sandersville; "The Symphony Band," the Twin Cities Presidents' club; "Sweet Six," Tennille Woman's club; "Colonial Period Minuet," Washington county federation; "Bell Hop Song," Sandersville Music club; "Minuet in G," Sorosis club, Sandersville; "When Dreams Come True," Sandersville Woman's club, and "Dance of the Stars," Tennille Parent-Teacher association.

The thrilling story of love and intrigue ended happily for the king and the girl whom he loved, as well as for the other lovers. At the psychological moment Mrs. Gilmore came before the footlights to thank all present for their interest and cooperation. She spoke feelingly of the earnest desire of the county federation to establish a permanent scholarship in honor of one so well known and widely appreciated as the late Miss Ella Mitchell, who taught in Sandersville High school for almost half a century.

The February meeting, Wednesday, February 2, of Tennille Fine Arts club met at "Littledale," the home of Mrs. W. C. Little. Mrs S. C. Knox and Miss Agnes Orr were co-hostesses with Mrs. Little.

Though a number of ladies were in Waynesboro attending a D. A. R. function, quite a good attendance was on hand. Hyacinths and daffodils lent their beauty and fragrance to the occasion and everybody seemed happy and bright.

After a brief business meeting in which the president, Mrs. C. G. Gunnels, in behjalf of the club, welcomed our new member, Mrs. Ovaitte, a splendid program was rendered.

The French dramatist, Edmund Rostand, was studied and his wonderful plays, "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "Chantecler," were discussed. A beautiful paper entitled "The Influence of Rostand" was given by Mrs. A. E. Gilmore. Music was furnished by Miss Agnes Orr, Mrs. J. V. Boatright, Jr., and Miss Annie Mary Smith.

Friday afternoon, February 4, the Tennille Woman's club met at the clubhouse. In the absence of the president, the honorary president, Mrs. A. E. Gilmore, presided.

Among the items reported for the month, possibly the outstanding achievement was the work done by Mrs. W. C. Brantley on the lawn. Mrs. Brantley is an adept with flowers and shrubs. With the advice of a landscape gardener and the assistance of the president, Mrs. W. B. Smith, she has laid the foundation for a beautiful lawn. By her own untiring efforts she has also earned the money thus expended.

Superintendent Jones, of the Tennille public schools, was present and made a challenging talk with regard to plans looking to the future welfare of the school and the entire town. The club heartily indorsed his plans and assured him of their earnest desire of each member to cooperate with his efforts.

The hostesses, Mesdames Theiss, Roy Smith, Wilbur Smith and Henry Sheppard, served a delicious salad course. The entire occasion was most delightful. About 30 members attended.

Roses for Tallulah School

Now is the time to send them! Mrs. J. W. Harks has just sent from "Sowania," her charming home in Gordon, 12 American pillars, six pink Dorothy Perkins and six red Dorothy Perkins.

All these are rooted and with them are some string cuttings of the white American Beauty (Frau Karl Dmschki), which roots very easily.

These fine plants will be a welcome addition to Miss Davis' great new rose bed, in which no single plant has failed to live.

Have you some roses rooted to send?

Mrs. John Sherman Is Pleased at Council Plan

General Federation of Women's Clubs, president, Mrs. John D. Sherman, 1734 N street, N. W., Washington, D. C., February 5, 1927.

Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, Blackshear, Georgia.

My Dear Mrs. Brantley: Mrs. Sherman is perfectly delighted with all the plans that you have made for her as set forth in your letter to me of January 21, with the exception that she cannot on this trip make the trip to Tallulah Falls. It will be impossible for her to give the time that it will take to make this trip, as she has very important federation business engagements here in Washington that will need her presence here immediately after the meeeting at Albany, Ga. Mrs. Sherman told me to say to you that she regrets this more than she can tell you, but she hopes some time in the future she will be able to make a special trip to visit this very interesting school.

Your understanding in regard to the expenses of the trip is correct, that is, Georgia and Florida will share them.

I know you will take care of Mrs. Sherman, and I must tell you that she is looking forward to her visit to you and the Georgia clubwomen with the keenest pleaseure.

With love and best wishes from Mrs. Sherman.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) JULIA M. PHILLIPS,
Secretary.

Covington Club Names Mrs. Clark Secretary Pro-Tem

Mrs. Harmon McDonald, treasurer, of the Covington Woman's club, reported a balance of $160.57 in the treasury and Mrs. G. B. Nixon resigned as corresponding secretary and Mrs. W. C. Clark was elected to fill her unexpired term at the meeting held last Friday in the library with Mrs. S. L. Waites, president, in the chair.

Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee, which were approved. Mrs. W. C. Clark, chairman, reported $33 made by her circle. The Georgia products dinner, which was to have been given on February 12, was called off on account of the critical illness of Dr. W. D. Travis and the corresponding secretary was instructed to write notes of sympathy to Mrs. Travis and Mrs. Joseph Siegel on the death of her mother.

The club was requested to send a box either on Valentine's day or Easter to Veterans' Hospital No. 62, in Augusta, and Mrs. Waites appointed the following committee: Mrs. A. L. Loyd, Mrs. A. A. Aenchbacher and Mrs. L. H. Smith to coopegate with the American Legion auxiliary in sending the box. A letter was read from the state chairman urging the club to put on special children's matinees at least twice a month, and this committee is composed of Mrs. Lester Lee, Mrs. Will S. Cook, Mrs. Ernest E. Callaway and Mrs. C. E. Aenchbacher.

Mrs. C. A. Sockwell reported for the library committee $3.75 from the pay table and $1.70 spent for supplies. Civic committee reported a donation of shrubs to the amount of $30. Mrs. Harvey Hays and Mrs. Paul Cain were unanimously elected to membership. Mrs. R. A. Norris, member of the county home demonstration council, asked the cooperation of the Woman's club for the reception to be given the new home demonstration agent, Miss Jane Roberts, of Greenwood, S. C., who takes charge of her duties on February 15.

The club appointed Mrs. S. L. Waites to serve with the council and the use of the clubroom was tendered them for the reception. At the close of the business session the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee, which presented the following program on Frank L. Stanton, including a poem by Edgar Guest to Frank L. Stanton, Mrs. C. A. Sockwell; "Taps for the Sweet Singer of the South," Mrs. Walker Combs; vocal solo, Mrs. J. L. Allgood.

Mrs. Farmer Outlines Plans On Home Demonstration Work

Mrs. Ira Farmer, of Atlanta, home demonstration chairman for the Georgia federation, has given to The Constitution club page the outlines of splendid plans connected with work for the department in which she is deeply interested and has a store of valuable knowledge. She says:

"Each year when we leave the annual farmers' conference held at the State College of Agriculture, we carry away a new appreciation of Georgia's resources of climate and soil. Each year we take home the belief that all must be right with Georgia with the splendid farmers and farm women on the job. And this year we left with the newly awakened hope that these men and women will come into their own because of the evidence presented that at last all Georgia realizes what some of us have long known, that the problem is not to teach the farmer to diversify (for that he already knows) but that it is to get the crops from the producer to consumer without a loss to the producer, because a crop is not a crop until it is marketed. So, with the slogan of the conference, 'Coordinating Production with Marketing,' adopted by every interest in the state, Georgia agriculture will prove that it has been only a question of proper distribution for many years.

Marketing Crops.

"As to the marketing of the field crops of the farmer the Georgia club woman can give little active assistance, but as was brought out in the farm woman's conference, in Chicago, she can help with her 'moral support,' and that the moral support of the federated club women of America is no small force, has very recently been exemplified in Washington.

"But there is a phase of marketing in which all women are interested and in which the club women can render valuable assistance. In every family, whether residing on Peachtree road or 12 miles from a lemon and no ice, it is the woman's job to plan the feeding of the family. The only difference is that the one purchases what her market affords and the other produces the food in her garden, orchard and poultry yard. Each is equally interested in a balanced diet and the proper number of vitamines (and an interesting bit of research now being carried on by the nutrition specialist at the Agricultural college shows the average diet in Georgia is decidedly deficient in iron). The answer to this problem which is peculiarly the woman's, and one which we know from experience the men are going to overlook in the larger affairs, is for the farm woman to produce the food and the club woman to find the market at a profit to the producer and for the benefit of both. At a meeting I recently attended a business man from a county that has been outstanding in its financial strength these past two years said: 'We make it a rule that there be a market in our town for every crop grown in our county.' No surer plan for success could be given and I give as the work of the home demonstration division for the Georgia federation this year the following:

"(1) Go with a group of farm women to the stores in your town and list, as the farm women name them, the food shipped in which your county can grow. From the merchants, express and freight agents, learn the amounts of these foods shipped in. Give this information to your home demonstration agent or the president of the home demonstration council and ask their aid in having this food produced. Have a merchant to speak to the farm women on how and when and in what quantities these products should be marketed. And keep on the job through the year.

"(2) Start a 'home Industry shop,' open one day a week or as long as necessary, where everything a woman produces can be sold. Seek women, both in town and on the farm, who can do something exceptionally well, whether it be sausage, cured hams, pound-cake, or handiwork, anything that someone else will buy. Large industries in tufted counterpanes, in rag rugs, in pickles, have been worked out by these means. If you find something particularly outstanding, write me and I will help you find a market.

"(3) Have members of your club make out a budget of the canned goods, preserves and jellies for the year and place in the hands of the home demonstration agent not later than March that the canning club girls and women may plant their gardens to supply these wants.

Council Members.

"(4) Have a member of the home demonstration council an ex-officio member of your executive board to attend all meetings and take back to the council those matters in which the farm women and the club women can cooperate for the good of both. Ask that a similar arrangement be made for one of your members to attend the council meetings. Mrs. Barry, chairman of the American home of the general federation suggests one 'Comradeship Day,' during which all the farm women and the club women come together for an all-day meeting and interchange of ideas. I would like to see such a meeting in every county in Georgia this year.

"(5) But you say you have no demonstration agent and no council. Part of your legislative program is to insist that the Georgia legislature make appropriation to meet the Smith-Lever fund dollar for dollar. Then every county will have a demonstrator. Interview your legislator and learn how he stands on this appropriation. Write me what he says. But register first, if you are not now registered. You will have considerably more weight.

"(6) Give publicity to the work of your agent and the canning club girls. Nothing helps like publicity in a good cause and these women are too busy and too modest to tell about their work. Have the canning club girls come before your club and put on a skit. It will be one of your most interesting programs.

"(7) The slogan this year of the home demonstration council is 'Nothing bought that can be raised at home.' Let yours be 'Nothing shipped bought that can be raised in my county.'

Sixteenth Century Lore.

"And with the advice of Dr. Soule, 'Do not dwell on the failures but seek the remedy,' I leave with you this opinion of Captain John Ribault regarding Georgia in the sixteenth century, which is just as true today: 'The fayrest, fruitfullest and pleasantest of all the world, which neuer yet broken with the plough yrons, bringeth forth all kinds of things wherewith the eternal God indued it'."

Norcross Clubwomen To Visit Hospital No. 48 on February 19

A large delegation of Norcross clubwomen will visit Hospital 48, February 19, the birthday of Robert E. Lee, with Mrs. William Keady, chairman, bringing with them blossoms and flower bulbs. This plan was announced at the meeting last Thursday with Mrs. H. H. Miller, the president, in the chair.

Mrs. Keady as floral chairman, announced that the Woman's club would hold a flower show. She also reminded the ladies it was time to plant sweetpeas and other spring flowers for this event.

Chairmen Appointed.

Mrs. Miller appointed Mrs. Homer V. Jones, chairman of American citizenship; Mrs. Ivan Humphries, chairman of motion pictures; Mrs. J. R. Garner, chairman of civics; Miss Annie Ray, chairman of good roads, and Mrs. M. C. Rhodes, chairman of cooperation with war veterans. Miss Flonnie Clement's resignation as club secretary, was accepted, and Mrs. L. B. deJarnett was elected as her successor.

Mrs. Ivan Humphries read a splendid paper on our own Tallulah Falls school, and its need as the most valuable asset of the state federation. Miss May Wootten read Mrs. Mary Sherman's, general federation president, circular letter on the most vital issue of today—"Home Making." Mrs. Miller appointed a questionnaire committee to investigate living conditions as to modern improvements as well as intellectual advantages supplied the growing children. Miss Lola Key, ninth district library chairman, stressed the importance of having a county free circulating library. She also reported two dozen books already on hand to send to the Annie Trippe Rambo library at Alto. Mrs. T. D. McDaniel requested standard magazines be sent to the different public schools nearby. Miss Lena Bess Medlock, the county demonstrator, also requested books and magazines contributed to her home economy club girls and to the rural classes of domestic council of farm women.

Miss Key Presents Program.

Miss Lola Key, thrift chairman, had charge of the program for the social hour. Miss Lurline Collier, of the state university, gave a splendid address of the advantages of thrift in phases of its practical advantages to spend wisely for the present, plan wisely for the future. That thrift household illiteracy spelt bankruptcy in all lines of human uplift. The Norcross Woman's club and Civic club together with Beautiful America club, at Buford, sponsored the education of a young girl at the State Normal at Athens.

A wonderful thrift display was the attraction with many useful as well as beautiful articles exhibited. Mrs. Eugene Davenport displayed many and varied articles made out of sugar sacks and it was a revelation as to utility and beauty, having in this display two exquisite bed spreads.

The exhibit demonstrated that the Norcross Woman's club is the thriftiest of thrift clubs.

Fifth District To Hold Institute On Citizenship

Following out the idea of Fifth District Club institute recently inaugurated in Atlanta, the citizenship department of the fifth district of Georgia Federated Clubs will hold a citizenship institute Friday, February 18, at 10 o'clock, at the Atlanta Woman's club.

We are particularly anxious that all the clubs of the fifth district cooperate to make this a success by having the citizenship chairmen and committees at this institute, and that the presidents also attend with those interested in citizenship work. The women's clubs are being looked to for their valuable aid in arousing the people to the importance of their responsibilities as citizens. The citizenship program which follows, will be of vital interest: "World Citizenship," Mrs. A. O. Granger, life director Georgia federation and international relations chairman; "Duties of Citizenship Chairmen and the Importance of Citizenship Training," Mrs. Arthur De LaPerriere, chairman citizenship training, Georgia federation; "Patriotism," Mrs. R. L. Turman, president Georgia League of Women Voters, and citizenship training Atlanta Woman's club; "Law Enforcement As the Ultimate Aim of Good Citizenship," James A. Hollomon, associate editor Atlanta Constitution.

MRS. J. D. EVANS,
Chairman of citizenship, fifth district of the Georgia federation.

STATUE—COUNTERPART—Crowds of the curious gathered around the Gutzon Borglum statue of Abraham Lincoln in Newark, N. J., when the Rev. Lincoln T. Caswell, pastor of Cornell Memorial church and a living counterpart of the war president, visited the statue recently. Rev. Caswell is an authority on Lincoln's life. (International)

CROSSING THE BAR—Delozel, mount of Miss Mary Wade, of Los Angeles, looms as one of the prize winners in the forthcoming national horse show in the California metropolis soon. He had plenty to spare when this photograph was taken. (Underwood & Underwood)

DOESN'T HURT A BIT—Music as an anesthetic during surgical operations was introduced in St. Mark's hospital, New York, recently. Regular receivers were applied to patients, but 'twas said that this innovation did not bring prospective patients on the rum. (International)

PURE AS A LILY—Tris Speaker, star outfielder and former manager of the Cleveland American league baseball team, was recently vindicated of charges of "sloughing" a baseball game on which he was alleged to have bet money. Tris is shown with his wife reading the good news. He has signed with Washington. (International)

THEY MAKE NO BONES ABOUT IT—Restoring prehistoric animals isn't child's play by any means, experts in the national museum in Washington, D. C., declare. Sometimes the assembly of skeletons requires months. (International)

BRUISER AND BRUIN—Swapping punches is more to the liking of Jim Maloney, Boston prize fighter and aspirant to the crown worn by Gene Tunney, but he can pause long enough to swap osculation with a visiting bear. Bruin seems to go for it. (Herbert)

OUT FOR A HOP—This loving mother, a kangaroo in the zoo at Rome, Italy, gives her baby a treat by taking it "bye-bye." Note how much the baby resembles a terrier dog. (Herbert)

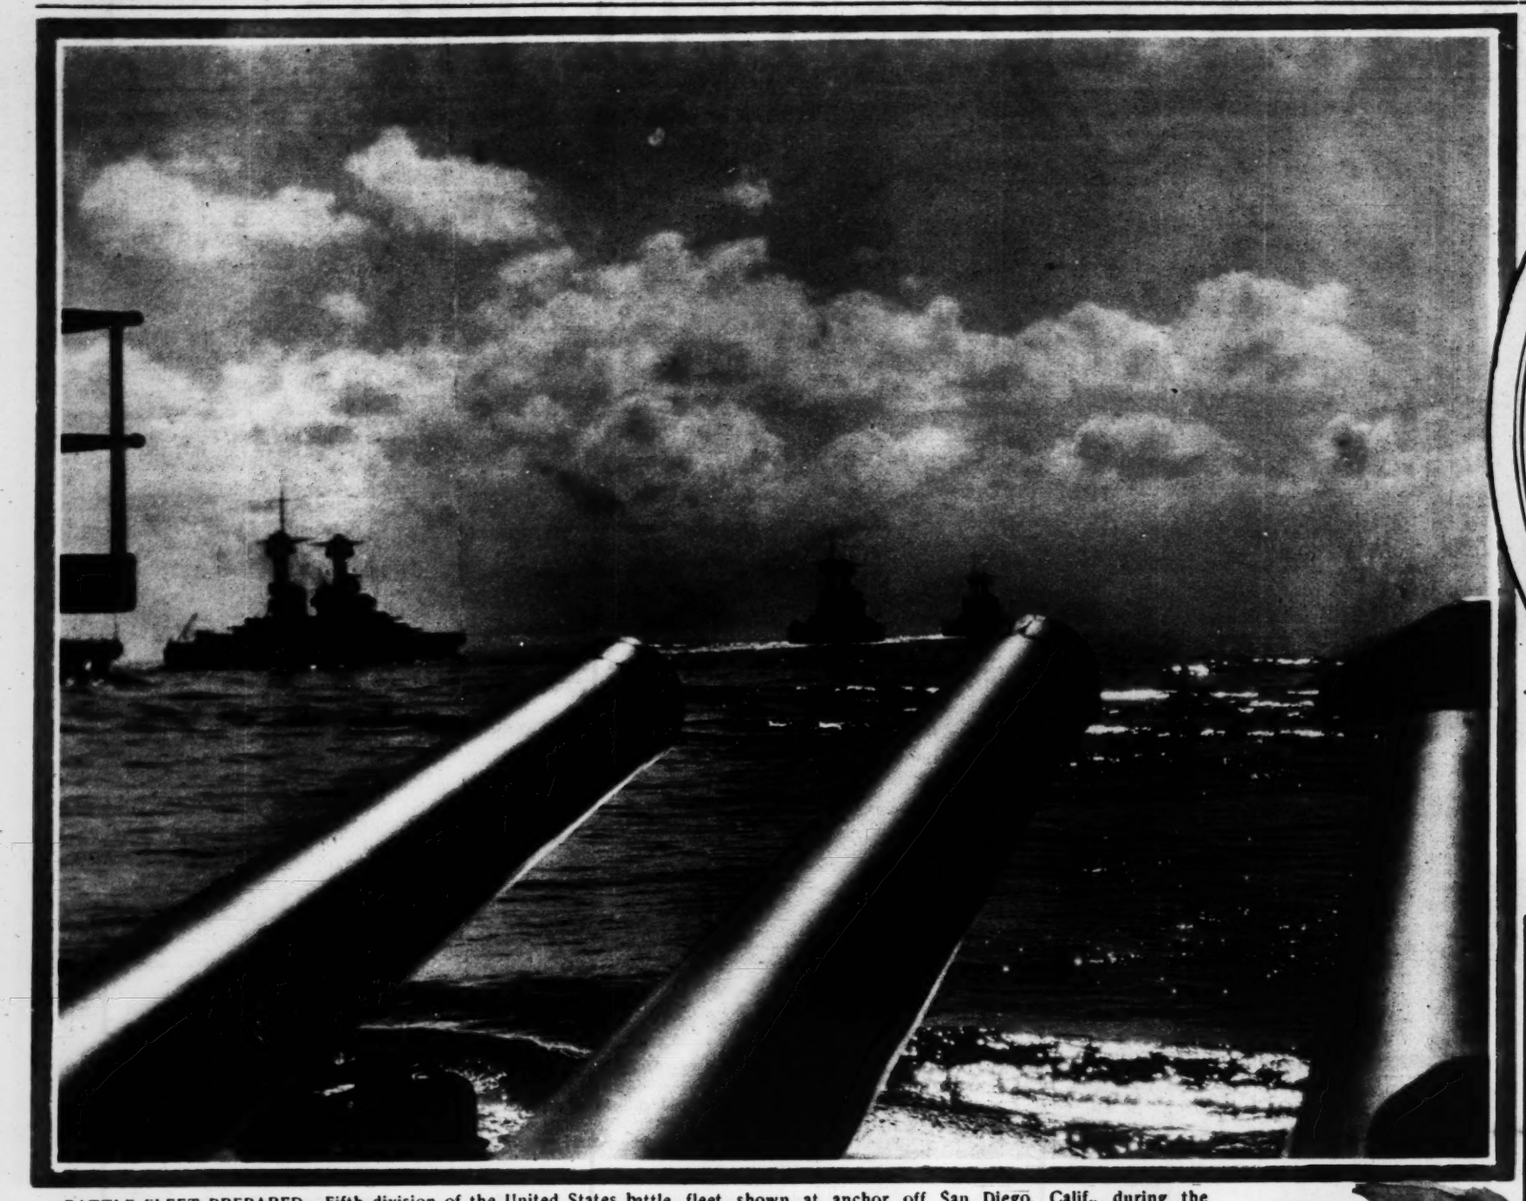

INTERESTS ATLANTANS—This excellent portrait of Walter P. Andrews, prominent Atlantan, is the work of Artist A. Salzbrenner. The portrait is now on display in the lobby of the Atlanta Biltmore, where hundreds have admired it.

LOCKING THE BARN DOOR—After the horse escaped was imitated in Texas when agitation followed in the wake of the tragic death of 12 Baylor university students, members of the basketball team, when a train struck the bus in which they were riding near Waco. Now the residents are up in arms to eliminate grade crossings. Photo shows the Baylor bus wreck. (International)

DEATH A BOON—Empress Carlotta, widow of Maximilian, assassinated emperor of Mexico, went mad following capture of her husband more than a half century ago. She died in her chateau in Belgium recently and the entire world paid homage to her memory. The funeral cortege is shown winding through Brussels in a snowstorm. (Underwood & Underwood)

ATLANTAN WEDS NEW YORK GIRL—"The Little Church Around the Corner" in New York recently formed the settling for a marriage of interest to Atlantans. Miss Frances Wilson Dante, of Albany, N. Y., was the bride and Joseph M. Jones, of Cairo, Ga., and Atlanta, was groom. The latter is secretary to Judge R. C. Bell, court of appeals, and a graduate of the University of Georgia and Harvard law school. While in Atlanta each month, the couple makes their home at 106 Inman circle.

BOY, PAGE P. T. BARNUM! — From New York comes word that biologists are puzzled over Josephine Joseph. Josephine, they say, is a person of parts, is a person of parts, so to speak. One side is typically feminine, soft curves, tender skin and all that sort of thing, while the other side is strictly masculine, muscles, hard lines and a big foot. And New York calls the rest of the country yokels!

FIGHTING AGAINST ODDS—Thirty firemen of Rochester, N. Y., were overcome in combatting flames which swept the Upton Cold Storage company building in that city recently. The fire lasted two days during which zero weather prevailed. (International)

DOUBLE-BARRELED BEAUTY—Pulchritude comes in double doses in the Dodge family of New York city. The noted Dodge sisters, Beth (left) and Betty, Terpischorean satellites, have an abundance of physical loveliness, as the photograph attests. Although pacific by nature, the twins argue about one subject —Beth says Betty is the prettier and Betty contests the point. We'd suggest they flip a coin. (Herbert)

JUST TO BE DIFFERENT—This photograph shan't be titled "Beauty and the Beast." Nevertheless, Florence MacBeth, noted singer, may well be termed a beauty and anyone can see that Benito is a beast and no foolin'. Miss MacBeth visualizes a knockout coat when Benito grows up.

ATLANTA GIRL TO PLAY HERE — Miss Gladys Hanson, well-known Atlanta actress, will appear at the Erlanger theater tomorrow in "The Judge's Husband" as leading woman for William Hodge. Not only because she is an Atlanta girl but because of her fine theatrical portrayals, the advent of Miss Hanson on the new playhouse stage will be warmly received. (World Studio, N. Y. C.)

ATLANTA AT NIGHT—While theater crowds traverse the streets of Atlanta on pleasure bent, the stately dome of the capital surveys the brilliance of the Gate City of the South and notes the ever-growing terrain of lights surrounding it. The cluster of skyscrapers in the distance gives emphatic evidence of the growth of the metropolis. (P. C. Cobb)

SHUN THE SUN—Troglodytes of North Africa erect their houses of mud and stone and arrange them so the sun will never shine into them. The inhabitants seldom venture into the light of the sun, doing most of their work at night. (Herbert)

HUMAN MOLES—Two thousand years ago the Ouerghoma Troglodytes of South Tunisia, North Africa, resided in these gigantic underground caverns. Today their descendants live almost the same way, only that they now build homes of mud on top of the ground. (Herbert)

VALLEY OF MATMATAS—In Africa, where reside the strange Troglodytes. Their homes penetrate into soft marl and they live in darkness beneath the ground. The holes leading to compartments are from 15 to 30 feet deep. Holes into the ground extend for miles and are sometimes 70 feet in diameter. (Herbert)

HANDS IT TO AMERICAN GIRLS—Robert Clarke, American artist, was commissioned to paint bathing beauties and went to France to do it. He couldn't find real beauty of physique there so recently returned to this country to get real models. He is shown with Miss Alice Ridnor, California girl. (Underwood & Underwood)

SOLVES PROBLEM—Miss Rosita Moreno, of Los Angeles, Cal., deserves the gratitude of the world. Rosita discovered how to utilize the loads of handkerchiefs she receives each Christmas. You'll recognize them as the dress she is wearing. (Underwood & Underwood)

Hamlet's "to be or not to be" had nothing on Adolphe Menjou's brow-wrinkler as to whether he prefers "BLONDE OR BRUNETTE," in this sparkling-as champagne French farce at the Howard next week! What gentleman could resist the sunshine loveliness of golden Greta Nissen, or the piquant vivacity of raven-haired Arlette Marchal? Admiration for any type is always a matter of preference, but whatever your coloring, your charm multiplies under the magic touch of Black and White Face Powder! More than 80,000 dealers everywhere have this caressingly soft, fine powder in four flattering tints—perfectly natural looking because exactly matched to the flesh tones.

STILL GROWING 1927

THIS WIRE'S BUSY—But so long as it isn't out of order, the Italian sailor who is walking across it over the Piazzo Umberto in Genoa, won't worry. You'll notice that a net is stretched across the thoroughfare. (International)

A PLUNGING FULLBACK — And there isn't a gridiron for miles around. This fullback is worn at Palm Beach by Mrs. M. C. Wilkins, of New York, who startled the natives by springing the singular bathing costume for no reason at all. This creation isn't any too popular with the freckled damsels. (Herbert)

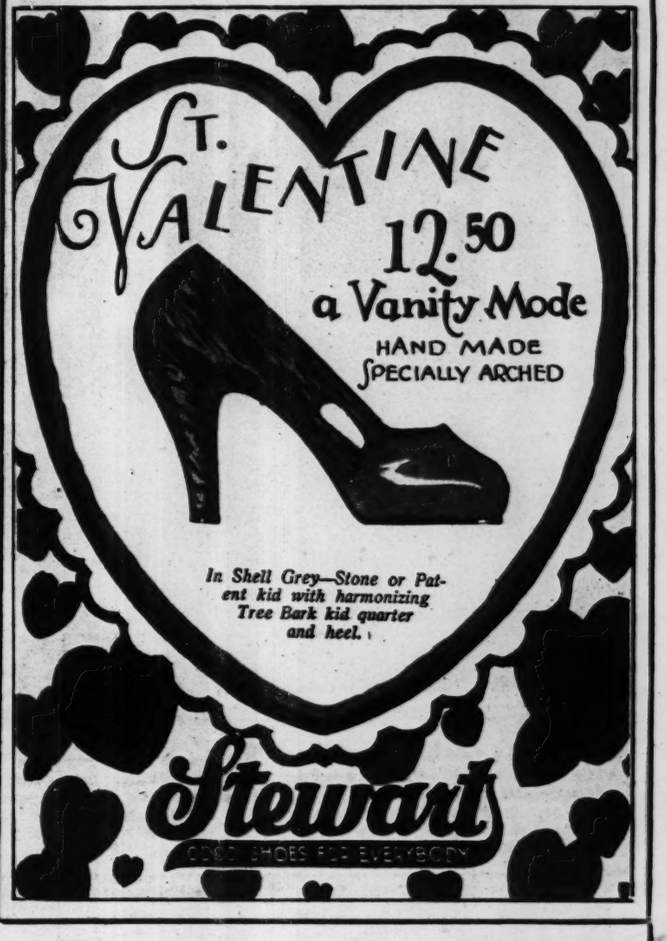

COALMAN'S ALLY—B'rer Groundhog blinked his eyes, ambled forth from his cold-proof domicile, glimpsed his shadow on the ground and hung up the cold weather sign on February 2. But the old fellow should worry—lamp the fur coat he's wearing! (Underwood & Underwood)

HE SHOULD BE DOCKED—The workman here appreciates art when he sees it. He is employed to install an all-glass dance floor in the Mayfair hotel in Los Angeles—costing $25,000—but he believes in educating one's self, too. The girl who is demonstrating how glass floors should be danced upon is Miss Charlotte de Lovelace, if that means anything in your young life. (Underwood & Underwood)

BLIND—FAMOUS — M. Louis Vierne, blind organist of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris, is touring America. He is shown at the famous organ in the auditorium of the John Wanamaker store in New York with Mlle. Marie Richepin, daughter of Jean Richepin, the poet, who reads the music to him. Vierne memorizes the notes by concentration and plays them faultlessly. (Herbert)

"Like scores of others whose everything is their voice and a clear throat, I, when I smoke, prefer the toasted cigarette—Lucky Strike."

Titta Ruffo

© Mishkin, N.Y.

The Precious Voice of Ruffo

Why He Recommends Lucky Strikes —Because "It's Toasted"

TITTA RUFFO, famous baritone of the Metropolitan and Chicago Operas, possesses a voice which always brings a thrill to his audience, a voice which has won international fame.

In smoking, he prefers Lucky Strikes because they give the greatest enjoyment and throat protection.

Lucky Strikes are smooth and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked. They are made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process in treating the tobacco.

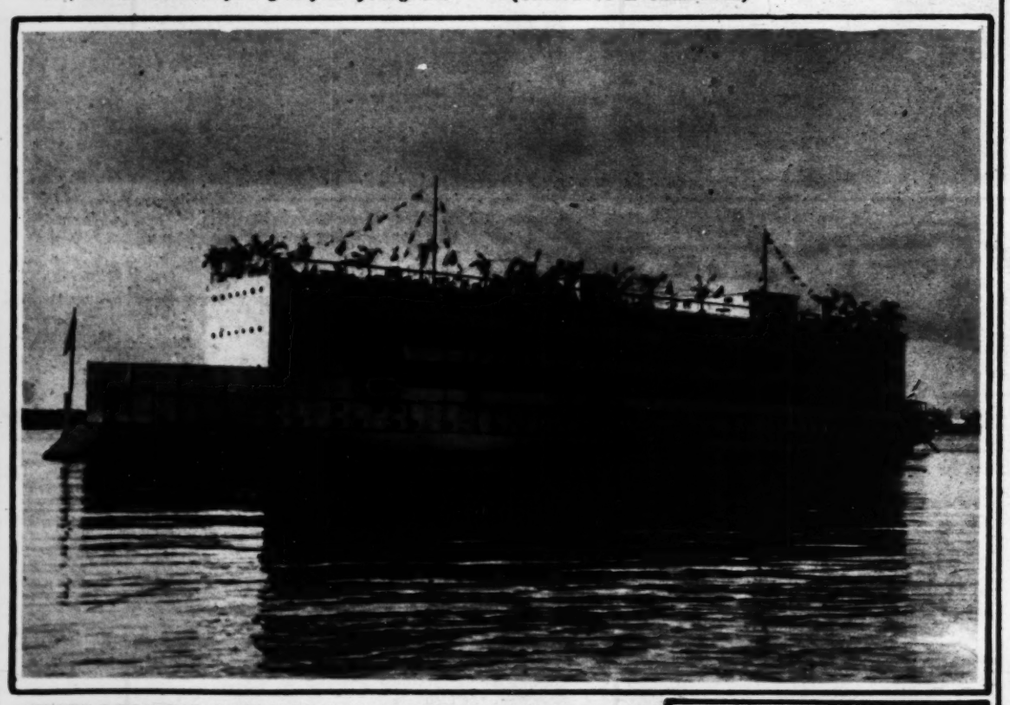

Smoke Lucky Strikes—you'll like them.

"It's toasted"

Your Throat Protection

When in New York you are cordially invited to see how Lucky Strikes are made at our exhibit, corner Broadway and 45th Street.

EVERY ROOM HAS A BATH—And all a guest has to do is jump overboard to get it. The Amphitrite is a palatial floating hotel anchored in Lake Worth, off Dunbar road, Palm Beach, Fla. Once upon a time the boat was a battleship, but now all the battling is done indoors and between married guests. (Herbert)

BONE OF CONTENTION—Colonel Frank Smith, U. S. senator-elect from Illinois, over whom a bitter battle has been waged in the senate. Charges of extravagant contributions in his election led to the fight. (Herbert)

ATLANTA'S GUEST—Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, celebrating her golden jubilee as an opera singer, under auspices of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra, comes to Atlanta to renew an old acquaintance. In the photograph and at the piano is shown Walter Damrosch, who recently resigned as director of the New York Symphony orchestra.

HONK! HONK!—The one principal of the recent "Peaches"-"Daddy" fiasco at White Plains, N. Y., who didn't make a goose of himself on the witness stand is shown at the left. He was the African honking goose mentioned prominently in ringside dispatches as having led, partly, the marital rift in the Browning love cruise. Note the posey in "Daddy's" buttonhole and the acid burns on "Peaches'" chin. (Herbert)

THROWN FOR A LOSS—"One-Eyed" Connolly, world's champion gate crasher, ran a cropper when he attempted to crash the gate of the lion arena at Selig zoo in Los Angeles recently. And it wasn't sour grapes when he exclaimed: "Huh! I didn't want to get in anyway!" (Herbert)

TOO CUTE FOR ANYTHING!—That's what Rosie Pirchase, London girl, thinks of her three pets—huge boa constrictors. She pets them and they fall for it—while London gapes. (Herbert)

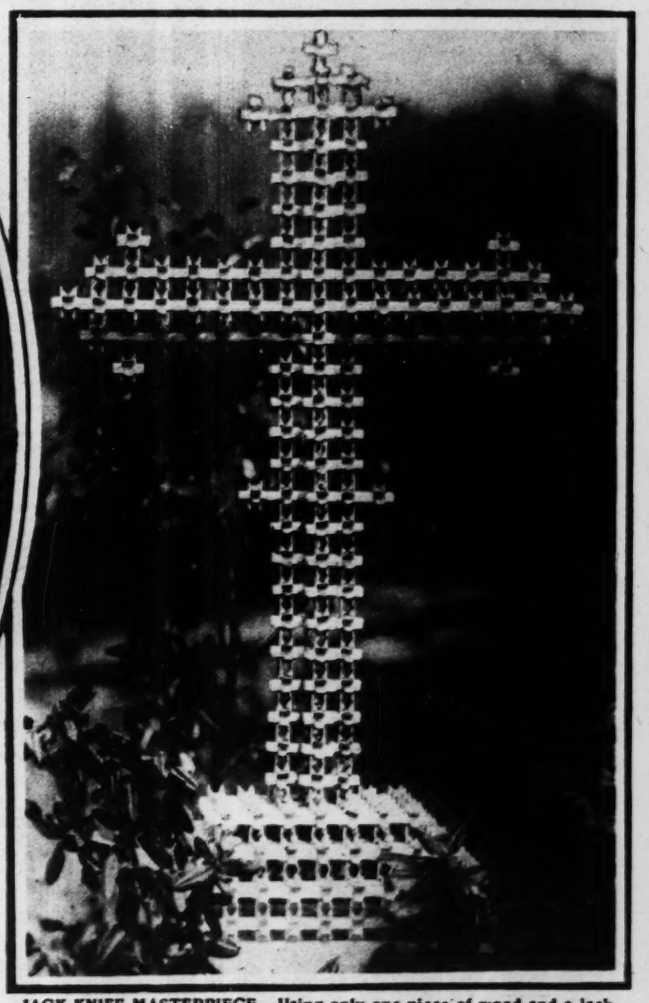

PEEK-A-BOO!—Society folks in New York don't like to have their "mugs" photographed in night clubs. That's why these folks covered up when prohibition agents raided one of the prominent hangouts recently. Note the woman at the left casting a wicked eye at the camera. (International)

MID-YEAR GRADUATES—One of the finest classes in the school history was graduated at the termination of the past semester at the William Bass Junior High school, Atlanta. An elaborate banquet proved the highlight of the graduation.

FINE FEATHERS—Participants in the recent "pageant of Old Orleans" in the Hotel Astor in New York wore plenty of fineries and made it one of the most brilliant affairs of recent years. Miss Fay Lewisohn, daughter of Philip Lewisohn, displayed this array of costly feathers. (Underwood and Underwood)

JACK-KNIFE MASTERPIECE—Using only one piece of wood and a jack knife, a lumberman of Canada carved this cross, using no glue or nails It required three months' work. (Herbert)

ANOTHER RED HEAD WINS—She's a chorus girl, but cavorting before the footlights isn't all Miss Peggy Blake, of Hollywood, Calif., can do. She recently won the diving championship at the Elks' swimming carnival at Philadelphia.

HIGH STEPPERS—Misses Billee Gorman and Lucille Sidney, stars of the Southern California Lacrosse league, aren't averse to taking a high ball on the fly. They're preparing for the Canadian field day and tourist reunion in Los Angeles. (Underwood & Underwood)

A FULL DECK—At the recent celebration of the Fourth Rumanian Cavalry, kings, queens and aces dominated. In the photograph are shown, left to right: Princess Ileana (partly out of the picture for once); Princess Elizabeth, of Greece (white hat); Prince Nicholas; Princess Helena, wife of the wayward Prince Carol; Queen Marie, King Ferdinand and Premier Averescu. In the background are the deuces and treys. (International)

WEDS JERSEY MAN—The former Miss Josephine Pogue, daughter of Mrs. James Wood Pogue, of Atlanta, recently wed Mr. Francis Donald Arrowsmith, of East Orange, N. J., son of the late Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Arrowsmith. The wedding took place in Christ church, Short Hills. (Photo by Marceau)

Good-bye Gray Hair

DON'T believe your hair is hopelessly gray until you have made this amazing test . . . have tried science's latest way to regain natural shade. Broadway's stars say it's amazing. Millions of women will use nothing else. That proves its safety.

A colorless liquid called Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer does it. You simply comb it through the hair. Natural shade quickly replaces gray. Faded streaks quickly disappear. If hair is auburn it reverts to auburn. If black, black it will be.

No crude, messy dyes everyone can see so easily. No danger of robbing hair of its life. Nothing to wash or rub off. Just a clean, colorless liquid that gives back color and lustre.

It takes only a few minutes. It costs only a few cents for complete restoration. If you wish to test first, write address below for free outfit. If you get full-size bottle from druggist, money will be returned if not amazed and delighted.

JACKSON TREE AT ATHENS—So highly did W. H. Jackson, of Athens, prize this stately tree that some 60 years ago he deeded the land upon which it stands to the tree itself, through due process of law. Fifteen years ago George Foster Peabody, noted philanthropist, erected a granite-post fence around its trunk.

THE LIBERTY TREE—Through special permission of the United States government, this member of the arbor vitae family was planted in 1924 on the post office square in Dalton by the Dalton council, No. 30, Junior Order United American Mechanics, assisted by the Daughters of America. Soil from every state in the union and from every county in Georgia provides its life sap.

INDEPENDENT FOR LIFE—The John Eason tree, a stately white oak located on Bishop street in Dalton, Ga, was deeded its own soil by the Dalton city council. The deed provides that the tree shall own the property upon which it stands "until time shall have withered its limbs and the sap has ceased to flow in its fiber."

ATLANTA BASKS—In the much-heralded sunshine of Palm Beach. On the right is Mrs. Julian Clarke Sheen, of Atlanta, shown with Miss Marjorie T. Bush, of Detroit, on the "Breakers promenade." (International)

SPRUNG THIS SPRING—Will be this new Tuscan straw hat in cocoas with a large droopy brim and a spray of flowers with ribbon. It was displayed at the millinery show in New York. (International)

FRENCH FLAVOR—"The Haystack" hat is one of the spring creations imported from Paris. It is of woven raffia and has frills of heavy grosgrain ribbon. (International)

DEUCES WILD

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

by MARY SYNON

Marny Was the Only Self-Sacrificing, Hard Working Member of a Large and Scrappy Family Until She Learned a Lesson from the Worm and Decided to Turn.

"Oh, hello, Gene, old dear! Come on in with me. I've a new kink in the cakewalk to show you."

PEACE after strife, lull after storm, Sunday afternoon settled down heavily upon the turbulent Tracys. From the dining room where she was putting away the flat silver Marny could hear her father's deepened breathing as he slept above piles of half-read newspapers, and the low murmur of voices from the porch where Stella and Herbert were going through the final throes of another reconciliation. Silence of the radio gave testimony that Helen and Lew had taken advantage of their parents' preoccupation to go out, probably with Joe to a ball game. From force of habit Marny listened for the tinkle of Grace's bell, punctuating as always any moment of respite. No sound came, and, her task finished, she went back to the kitchen where Maggie Kenny was hanging up the dish towels.

"You can leave everything else," Marny told her. "I'll get supper if any one wants it."

"There'll be some one to want it," Maggie gave mournful prophecy. "I've been in this house since the Michaelmas before your mother—may the Lord have mercy on her soul; she was a good woman!—died seven years ago, and there hasn't been a Sunday night that you haven't had to set the table for a crowd."

"Father doesn't like to forage."

"He isn't the only one."

"He's the only one I'd bother about."

"One of the rest of them might take a turn once in a while." She wiped her hands on her apron, and slicked back a loose lock of hair. "It's none of my business," she took up her inevitable Sabbath chant, "but I hate to see you so set on, Marny. If some I won't mention would lift a hand to helping——"

"Maggie!"

"I'm naming no names. Well, if you're going to do it, you'll find the cold roast in the ice box back of the tomatoes for the salad. The coffee's in the percolator, and the chocolate cake's in the oven. I had to put it there from——"

"Where's the cheese?"

"Sure. Joe and Lew ate it last night when they came in from the movies."

"They'll get more."

"If you'll get them to go for it, you're doing well. There's Grace's broth all ready to heat, and her tray ready to put it on."

"I'll take it up to her."

"Can't Helen?"

"She's out."

"Again

"She's only a youngster, Maggie."

"Seventeen."

"That's pretty young." A sigh for the years that had run under the bridge since her own seventeen rose almost involuntarily as she looked out into the Maytime brightness over the back yards of the block.

"Old enough to go gallivanting. You're not going out at all yourself?"

"I—I don't know."

"Well, suit your fancy, but if you don't start going out soon, you won't be getting many more chances. It's the cloth on the counter that's sold." She hung her apron over a peg on the door. "If my cousin Annie Harrigan calls for me, will you tell her she's gone to my sister Norah's?" She went up the back stairs to make ready for her departure, and Marny turned to the front of the house as the telephone in the lower hall jangled noisily. She moved hurriedly to answer the call, but Stella, coming in from the porch, intercepted her.

"O, how do you do, Gene?" Marny heard her say. "Yes, she's somewhere in the house. I'll call her if you like, but why don't you come over? We'll all be glad to see you. O, come on! Yes, any time. Fine!"

"That was Gene Graves," she told Marny. "I knew that Herb wants to ask him about that Riverview property, and so I told him to come right over."

"Didn't he ask for me?"

"Why, of course, but I didn't see any sense in calling you when he was coming over." She picked up the receiver again, dialing a number. "That you, Clara?" she inquired. "What are you doing this afternoon? What time? Half-past five. That's all right. Come right over here when you're through. I want to ask you about something." She turned back to Marny. "Clara's going to give me a list of the places in Italy she thinks Helen ought to see."

"Then you're really going?"

"Of course! Lew will be perfectly all right here. You won't have to worry about him, either, for I've just told Herb that he might as well come over and stay here while Helen and I are away."

"What does father say about it?"

"O, Marny, don't be stuffy! You know I'll be able to manage him, if you'll only let me alone. Now don't gum the game, that's an angel."

"But he said the last time you fought with Herb that he was perfectly willing to have you and the children come home, but that he would not let Herb live in this house."

"I know he said it, but he said the same thing the time before, didn't he, and the time before that? I think it's perfectly hateful, anyhow, the way you and Grace always act when I make up with Herb."

"It isn't the making up with him, Stella, that bothers us. It's the certainty that you'll be sure to fight with him again. Besides——"

"Besides what?"

"Well, I think you'd have a much better chance of getting on with each other if you'd just go off by yourselves."

"I might know you'd say that. It's lucky for me that this is father's house, not yours."

"You know you're taking that wrong. I wasn't thinking about us, but about you."

"But how on earth can I keep house, and take care of two children, and teach school?"

"You wouldn't have to teach."

"How could I get along if I didn't?"

"Herb makes a pretty decent salary."

"You know as well as I do," Stella declared, two red spots glowing on her fair cheeks, and her eyes blue fire back of glinting eyeglasses, "that I'm saving money to take Helen abroad this summer, but if you——"

"If you can fix it up with father," Marny cut in, "I'm sure it's nothing to me." From upstairs floated down the faint tinkle of a bell.

"Fix what up with me?" her father's voice rose from the living room.

"Stella'll tell you," she countered as the command of Grace's call rose insistently. She went upstairs with Stella's malevolent glance following her, and Grace's querulous voice lifting protest. "I could be ringing all day, and no one would come near me," her sister wailed. "That's what it is to be sick."

She looked aesthetically invalided rather than really ill as Marny entered the big, sunshine bright room which had been her own before Grace's widowed return to the old homestead. Flowers made gay window sills and mantel, books and magazines were strewn over low tables close to the bed where Grace, exquisitely fragile, lovely in lavender lace, lifted re-proachful gaze from her own beringed fingers to Marny's coming. "I'm so lonely," she complained. "No one has been near me for hours."

"I was busy."

"Where are the rest of them?"

"Joe's out."

"He would be. If he ever left the car around long enough for any one else to use, I think I might manage to ride once in a while."

"I'll take you out any afternoon during the week. Sunday driving's awful, anyhow."

"Your driving makes me nervous. Where are Helen and Lew?"

"With Joe, I suppose."

"Did I hear Herb down there?"

"He'll stay for tea, of course, and just when I was thinking I'd try to get down. Marny, I don't see why you let them all impose so dreadfully on you. It's disgraceful."

"O, I don't mind poor old Herb."

"You don't? Well, I do. I simply can't bear the sight of that man. I never see him that I don't think what a terrible injustice it is that my Frank should have been taken, and Herbert Lorman left!"

"Grace!"

"I can't help it. You know how sweet and kind Frank always was to me, and I'm sure that if he'd lived long enough, he'd have made plenty of money so that I wouldn't have to be living on my father's charity."

"You know that no one thinks that."

"How could any one help it?" Her delicate face quivered, then as suddenly lighted. "Anyhow," she reasoned, "I've really more justice in being here than Stella has. Is that man coming back here?"

"Stella says so."

"I won't stand it." She began to sob. "I'll go away if he comes into this house again."

"Where?'.'

"I don't know. To a hospital. Anywhere. I can't endure it. It's absurd. He and Stella have been married for nearly twenty years, and here they are, quarreling and making up like two bad children, living here one year, taking an apartment the next, then fighting, and Stella and Lew and Helen coming back, then making up again, with Herb on the doorstep, and the whole thing all over. It's ridiculous. It's horrible. I can't see why father lets it go on."

"What can he do?"

"He can hold to what he says, and not let Stella wind him around her finger. He can refuse to let Herb come back. He can tell Stella that if she makes up with Herb, she'll have to find another place."

"I suppose he knows that Stella wouldn't make up with Herb now if she had to do that."

"And why? Because she wants to go abroad. Here I am, not able to go out of the house from month to month, and she's planning to go to all the places I've ached to see. Biarritz, and Deauville, and the Lido—they're awfully fashionable in summer. Do you think that father would take me if I were able to go? The trip would certainly do him good, Marny."

"You know as well as I do," Marny said steadily, "that he can't afford to go this year. The expenses of this house are something terrific. He'd have to be a millionaire to stand them, and do anything else."

"I know how extravagant Joe and Lew are. They bring in crowds to meals without asking if they can."

"Every one does that."

"You act sometimes as if our friends were a burden to you. I don't altogether blame you, of course, when you have to take your allowance out of what's left from the household account, but, really, Marny——"

"Is there anything I can get for you?"

"Why?"

"I'm going to lie down for a while."

"Will you call Doctor Marston, and ask him to run in this afternoon?"

"You don't need him, Grace."

"I need him as much as Stella needs Herbert. Now be a dear, and get me some of Joe's cigarettes."

"You shouldn't smoke."

"A widow must have some consolations."

"All right."

She shrugged resignation, and went downstairs again, calling Doctor Marston and foraging for cigarettes, but was diverted from returning by her father's call: "Why don't you want the house cleaned during the summer?"

"I hadn't thought about it."

"Then what did Stella mean?"

"When?"

"When you went upstairs she told me that you'd been talking about decorating, and said to fix it up with me. She said you want to wait till she comes home, but she thinks it will be less confusing to have it done while she's away."

"It doesn't need to be done at all. You know how high the bills are running, and——"

"I told her we'd do it in the summer."

"All right."

She took the cigarettes upstairs, tossing them to Grace, and went to her own room, banging the door in wooden eloquence. Within sanctuary she flung herself across her bed.

"I'm sick of it," she muttered into the pillow, "just damned sick of it all!" She sobbed herself into a self pity which dimmed her eyes, but, after a little, she relaxed, and slept fitfully for a couple of hours.

She awoke with a start, opened the door and heard the sound of another voice added to Herbert's and Stella's. She hurried to dress, and her eyes shone as she brushed her close cut hair. As she gazed into the mirror of the big old-fashioned dresser, she felt a glow of comfort in the thought that she was good to look upon.

"Yet," she added in her summary, "even if I am twenty-seven." She smiled as the third voice from the porch lifted its tone. "Coming, my dear,' 'she said to it, and dove into the closet for a dress.

Not finding it, she whirled a robe around her, and crossed to Grace's room. "Did I leave my new dress here?" she asked her sister.

"Helen's wearing it," Grace said indifferently.

"My green dress? Why I told her she wasn't even to try it on!"

"Well, she took it."

"It's the last straw," Marny cried. She sped back to her own room, dragging out another gown, and donning it with an indignation which brought banners of rose to her cheeks. She was singularly pretty and quite unconscious of her aspect as she ran down the stairs and out to where Gene Graves talked with her sister and brother-in-law.

He rose with a smile for her which transfigured his dark, rather heavy face, and pushed out a chair into which she sank with a relief in his presence, which she did not try to analyze. Herbert, after a pretense of arising to mark her coming, went on with his stock recounting of the skyrocketing of real estate values in the city.

"You can's go wrong on Edison Gardens, Gene," he advised.

"I haven't." Gene gave Marny a slow wink which brought laughter to her eyes. "I sold what I had out there last week."

"Too soon. You should have waited till September."

"I got my price."

"You ought to buy Vannerdale now."

"I'm going to spend the profits for a change." His eyes flashed Marny a message whose significance she felt, but did not try to fathom. Her pulse quickened its beat, and she thrilled to the sensation of adventure which seemed to rise with his words.

"You ought to go abroad, Gene," Stella said with decision. "Helen and I will meet you in Paris."

"That would be nice, but I don't expect to go to—Paris." Again his look sought Marny, almost with direct question. She lowered her long lashes, and fell into reverie as happy as it was inchoate. Through it Herbert's assertions and Stella's suggestions came to her vaguely, lapping waters against the ship of Gene's mental progress toward her. It was only when Doctor Marston's arrival caught their attention that she rose to alert consciousness.

"Come for a ride," Gene was begging her. "We'll run out to the Lightship for supper."

"O, I can't," she said regretfully.

"Why not?" His face clouded.

"Stella's asked Clara Whelan to tea, and I'm sure that Grace'll ask Doctor Marston."

"Let Stella get it."

"You know she never does."

"Then let them go without."

"I wouldn't mind the rest of them, but father——"

"Why doesn't he ask Stella once in a while?"

"I don't know why he doesn't," she said honestly, "but I do know that I'm always elected. I'm housekeeper, you see."

"I see a good deal I've said nothing about," he began, but she moved nervously and he shifted tone. "Come out after supper?"

She had just time for acquiescence before Joe came expertly up to the curb in the family car, filled now with boys and girls, among them Helen, vivid, noisy, and slightly overflowing the slim lines of Marny's green dress. "The Cubs won, the Cubs won," she chanted, refusing to meet Marny's accusing eye. "Can's somebody hurry the eats? We're all going out to Betty's after we've had something. O, hello, Gene, old dear. Come on in with me. I've a new kink in the cakewalk to show you."

He laughed at her youthful zest, and Marny felt a sudden chill about her as if the sun had slipped down. She made her way through the crowd into the house, and back to the kitchen. Lew, following her, opened the ice box.

"I can get all I want this way," he said, embarrassment thickening his boyish voice. "Honestly, Marny, it's a shame the way they drag gangs in here on Sunday evening and let you do all the work. Can't I do something for you?"

"Run the car down to the delicatessen for some cheese," she bade him, her heart warming to his thought for her as she hurried expertly through the task of putting the food on the table. She was in the thick of her job when Gene came out.

"What do you think you're going to do?" she asked him, glowing in realization that he had forsaken the younger crowd for her. "You look dreadfully out of place in the kitchen," she teased him.

"You don't, but I hate to think of you working for this mob."

"I'm not working very hard."

"You're always working hard," he told her steadily. "There isn't a time I come over when you aren't up to your eyes in something for the gang."

"O, Gene, I——"

"When you know that——"

"Know what?"

"That if——"

"O, Marny," Stella thrust her blonde head into the kitchen to say. "Doctor Marston will stay for tea. I hope you'll have something nice."

"O, damn Doctor Marston," Gene muttered.

Marny began to laugh unsteadily. "You were saying that if——"

"I was saying—Marny, look here, why can't we——"

"Aunt Marny," Helen's young voice floated down the back stairway, "Aunt Grace is going to get up for supper, and wants you to help her dress."

"You help her, Helen."

"I can't."

"If you'll help her, I'll forgive you for something you did today."

"All right." The response came grudgingly. Marny turned to Gene, growing sullen as he stood near the table. "Can't we what?" she asked him breathlessly, her eyes afire with daring.

"Can't we start a home of our own?" Challenge rather than pleading rang in his words.

"O, Gene, Gene, dear!"

He swung across to take her in his arms, kissing her with the passion of long denial. Under it, in the joy of love fulfilled, she blossomed into beauty as she lifted her radiant face to him. They had slipped the anchor of consciousness of all but each other when Lew thrust open the kitchen door.

"Well, I'm a Chinaman," he yelled, flung his package upon the sink, and rushed out.

They drew back, and tumbled into laughter which brought Marny perilously close to tears. "O, wouldn't you know one of them would do it?" she sobbed.

"You would," Gene acknowledged, his eyes shouting emotions his lips dared not frame.

"Aren't the two of you ready yet?" Stella returned to question. "I wouldnt' mind for myself, but Herb has to meet a man downtown at half past seven."

"We're ready," Gene told her, helping Marny to carry platters to the dining room. He tried to find a place beside her as the crowd trooped in, but Stella, major domo of the seating, separated them, putting him beside Grace, who had, with Doctor Marston's help, managed to come downstairs. Marny shot him a smile of understanding, and he sent down the length of the table a look so ardent that she flushed hotly before it, and spilled coffee on the Italian lace runner.

"Keep your mind on your work, Marny," Lew told her gravely.

"Keep still," she whispered.

"What price stillness?" he bantered, but she would not answer.

In the rush of talk, her father's hospitable urgings, Herb's real estate optimists, Stella's high-handed commands, Clara Whelan's guide book accuracies, Helen's effervescent assertions, Joe's baseball prophecies to the youngsters, Grace's low murmured sympathy, Marny felt that she and Gene were being held apart by a rope of circumstances infinitely firmer than it looked. With determination to sever it, she rose quickly when the meal was done.

"Gene and I are going out," she told any one who wanted to listen. "You can leave everything just as it is until I come home."

No one made comment, but Stella moved toward Clara Whelan. "I'll walk home with you, Clara," she said, "and get that book on Florence." In the outward rush of the crowd Doctor Marston departed, and with panic Marny saw only her father and Grace left in the living room.

"I'll have to get her upstairs before we go," she told Gene, but Grace

Things New and Old About The Bible :

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga.

A Variety of Volumes.

"CURRENT Comments on Timely Topics," by Bishop W. A. Candler. The Cokesbury Press, publishers, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.50.

This latest volume by Bishop Candler is one of best sellers of the publishers and promises to have the largest circulation of any book from the bishop's pen. This volume covers a wide range of live topics and each discussion bears the impress of the masterful personality of the author. There are set forth fundamental matters of life and conduct which the readers will readily accept, and in some controversial matters the readers may not agree.

The readers, however, will find no difficulty in understanding the clear and definite position of the author, and it is their privilege to reject him, if they can.

The first chapter of the book discusses "Creed and Conduct," "Sins of the Sensibilities," "A Man or a Merchant," "The Power of One True Man Alone," "The Sin of Gehazi," and "Enthronement of Reason, Enthronement of Sentimentality."

Here is some excellent sermon material, for preachers and laymen.

Throughout the volume the reader will be impressed from time to time that Bishop Candler reaches a high-water mark.

"A Good Sign in Germany" does not signify in its caption the forceful and convincing statement which is made of the supremacy of Christianity among the religions of the world. Students of comparative religion woulld do well to digest the comparison which Bishop Candler makes.

"Unknown Heroes in Peace and War" is a worthy tribute to unconscious goodness and heroism. Under the caption, "Publicomania," the author in his characteristic way mercilessly flays the shallow mania for publicity, and shows the absurd antics which men indulge in when they are drawn away from the central and spiritual motive of placing first the favor and will of God.

Other subjects are discussed which are equally worthy of special mention.

"This Believing World," a simple account of the great religions of mankind, by Lewis Browne. The Macmillan company, New York city. Price $3.00.

Here at last is a book long awaited, a really attractive popularization of the whole subject of comparative religion. The same narrative gift and dramatic quality are in evidence that won so swiftly and favorable a verdict from a large public for Dr. Browne's "Short History of the Jews."

Something of the old shock of novelty will be experienced in reading Lewis Browne's history of the world's religions. For it is done by a writer who has no Christian axe to grind at all.

"This Believing World" is copiously illustrated with block drawings and animated maps done by the author on his travels in the Orient in search of first-hand witnesses through conversation with learned representatives of the various religions of the east.

The student of religion will find this a fascinating volume filled with much interesting information even though he may not accept all the conclusions of the author.

The author covers a wide range within a comparatively brief compass. "How it all Began," "How Religion Developed in the Ancient World," "What Happened in India," "What Happened in China," "What Happened in Persia," "What Happened in Israel," "What Happened in Europe," and "What Happened in Arabia."

The writer is a Jewish rabbi and this is his estimate of the religion of Jesus. "It has made life livable for countless millions of harried souls. It has taken rich and poor, learned and ignorant, white, red, yellow and black —it has taken them all and tried to show them a way of salvation—to all in pain it has held out a balm; to all in distress it has offered peace —to every man without distinction is has said: Jesus died for you—to every human creature on earth it has said: You, too, can be saved. And therein lies Christianity's highest virtue. It has helped make the weak strong and the dejected happy. It has stilled the fear that howls in man's breast, and crushed the unrest that gnaws at his soul. In a word, it has worked—in a measure——"

"God and the New Knowledge," by Brown, Kirkland and The Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tenn. Price $1.00.

No writer has drawn a clearer distinction between modernism and fundamentalism than Dr. O .E. Brown. Chancellor J. H. Kirkland gives a clear concise statement of evolution. Dr. Edwin Mims makes application of the principle of literary criticism to the Scriptures. It is the acceptance of the principle of Biblical interpretation as set forth in Dr. Mims' discussion that will free the church from intellectual confusion.

The chapters of Dr. Kirkland and Dr. Mims taken in connection with the discussion of Dr. Brown set forth the various points of difference between fundamentalism and modernism.

1. There is first the Virgin birth not a question of fact, but a question of its rank in importance among the doctrines of the Christian faith.

2. There is the clear-cut difference of opinion as to the inerrancy of the Bible.

3. There is the scientific theory of evolution, derived by fundamentality and accepted in some form by most modernists.

4. As to the atonement, the fundamentalists contend for the substitutionary theory, while most modernists accept the saving fact of the atonement.

5. The two schools of thought differ totally concerning the second coming of Jesus.

6. The fundamentalists give to the creeds a finality of authority, which modernists regard them as subject to constant change.

7. As to the church, the fundamentalists stress doctrine and the modernists stress the life.

It is hardly necessary to state that the entire treatise is written from the modern viewpoint.

"Johannes—or the Other Boy Born in Bethlehem," by J. C. Solomon. Published by the J. W. Burke Co., Macon, Ga.

This is a well-written story with its setting in the time of the boyhood of Jesus. It measures up to the standard of a good story, both in the excellence of the plot and the superior literary style. It is a booklet which will interest both children and adults.

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

Dere is weepin' down in Georgia,
All de gen'lemen are sad,
And de ladies an' de chilluns
Now is feelin' mighty bad.
An' the sunbeams seem to tip-toe
In a solemn sort o' way
Lak as if dey want to tell ye:
"Mr. Stanton died today!"

Now de cullud folks air cryin'
An' dey shake dere heads an' sigh,
Coz dey loved him as a father
An' dey hoped he'd never die.
An' dey stands before dere cabins
Wipin' sorrow's tears away
Jes' tellin' one another:
"Mr. Stanton died today!"

All de pretty blossoms know it,
An' de song birds on de fence
An' de cattle in de clover
What has happened seem to sense.
An' dere's not a tree in Georgia
Wid its mossy beard of gray
But is bendin' down to whisper:
"Mr. Stanton died today!"

Coz I know de notion's foolish
But I thought I'd lak to send
A telegram to heaven
Jes' to tell about our friend.
An' it wouldn't take much writin',
This is all I'd have to say:
"A brave, sweet soul is comin',
Mr. Stanton died today!"

AUCTION BRIDGE —{}—

By MILTON C. WORK
THE INTERNATIONAL AUTHORITY

WHEN a player makes an original bid of one of a suit or one No Trump, his object is not so much to "buy something" as to give information and to open the way to receive information. Following bids from partner and opponents are thereby encouraged, and the acme of scientific bidding is reached when the successful bidders have assumed the contract which they would have selected had each seen the other's cards.

An original suit-bid of two has a special restricted meaning and is the most definitely informatory of all bids.

But an original bid of two No Trumps, or an original suit-bid of three or more, is prompted by a desire to shut out adverse bids and a willingness to dispense with all answering bids from partner; it is a definite bid for the contract, not a feeler to find out how the land lies. Such a bid is called pre-empting, or a pre-emptive declaration.

A pre-emptive declaration announces that the bidder believes he can win the game with average help from his partner, should his declaration become the contract. A pre-emptive suit-bid indicates that the bidder is very weak in some other suit or suits; and a bid of two No Trumps indicates a special kind of holding which will be referred to later.

Some writers still condemn all pre-empting bids as unwise and unsound, holding that the exchange of information between partners never should be stifled; but both expert and popular opinion today recognize the pre-emptive bid as an important part of the declaration, provided it be limited to hands with which the shutting out of adverse bids is more important than partnership interchange, and which have the strength to justify a high call.

The player who opens the auction has seen but 13 of the 26 cards with which he or his partner will have to play if either of them become the Declarer. He therefore is assuming a serious responsibility when, by pre-empting, he guarantees to his partner that, although he has no information concerning one-half of the cards which constitute the combined holding, he nevertheless feels justified in asserting that his declaration should stand, no matter what 13 cards his partner may hold.

There are but few No Trump hands so strong as to justify an original bid of two. Bidding more than one No Trump tells the partner not to bid a long and strong major suit, and not to rescue with the freak type of hand with which rescuing is advisable. As a rule it is of the greatest advantage to have a dependable partner take out a No Trump when he has the strength and the opportunity; therefore it is usually folly to eliminate the possibility of so helpful a declaration.

To gather the full benefit of a pre-emptive suit-bid, the bidder must have nerve; a pre-emptive bid which should accomplish its purpose is apt to fail when the bidder it timid and attempts to get off too cheaply. A real pre-empting hand contains an unusual distribution of cards, and when one hand has this, the others are apt to be similarly constituted. The chances are, therefore, that a bid of three of a minor will promptly be overcalled; and once that happens, the main object of the declaration is lost; an initial bid of three or four of a major, or four or five of a minor is much more apt to stand and may be cheaper in the end. The hand which justifies a pre-emptive bid must be such that if it had been started with a bid of one and the partner, denying the original bid, had overcalled with any other declaration, the original bidder would have returned to his own suit.

A pre-empting bid may be made in a minor suit, but in that case the bidder assumes a serious responsibility. He is not apt to shut out the adversaries unless he bid four or five, and he tells the partner not to shift to a higher-valued declaration unless the partner's hand assures him of a certain game in it—an unusual situation. There are many hands which would produce just ten tricks for either dealer's minor or partner's major; in which case it would be manifestly unfortunate to shut the partner out.

Although successful pre-emptive bidding depends upon skill, judgment and "bridge perception" rather than a cut-and-dried rule, it may be stated that to justify a pre-emptive declaration the hand of the pre-emptor should contain:

(a) A great length and strength in the suit named;

(b) Generally, if made in a major, shortness and weakness in the other major;

c) A guarantee of the following assured tricks of the declaration stand: Seven tricks when 3 is bid; nine tricks when 4 is bid; eleven tricks when 5 is bid.

WILL JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

Followers of the Head of the House of David Refuse to Be Downcast By Plight of Their Leader

KING BEN, 63-year-old head of the House of David at Benton Harbor, Mich., was cornered the other day after a four-year hunt, and his be-whiskered disciples scan the heavens eagerly each day for the bolts of wrath that are to annihilate his persecutors.

The arrest of the cult leader does not in the least undermine their confidence in him. He himself took care of that matter long in advance. In the early days of the colony, no doubt seeing an ultimate clash with the law, King Ben prophesied:

"The day will come when the Son of Man will be chased like a fox!"

By the Son of Man he referred to himself and he promised that he would turn upon his enemies, confound them mightily and establish upon earth a kingdom in which all those of his followers who had forsworn sin and been purified would live forever in the flesh, free at last to enjoy the pleasures of the flesh.

Benjamin Purnell had simply hit upon the thing that has bound men and women to all religions since the dawn of history—he promised them immortality.

Facing Serious Charges.

Today he is at liberty on $120,000 bail, awaiting trial on the charges of Gladys Bamford Rubel and Ruth Bamford Reed, sisters, and former members of the cult, that he frequently and atrociously assaulted them.

Ruth was 10 years old and Gladys 12, they have sworn, when King Ben initiated them into his "blood purification" rites, an act which is defined by a shorter, uglier word in the criminal statutes of Michigan and other states.

The state charges that Purnell maintained a veritable harem in Shiloh, the house of many rooms and mysterious secret passageways in which he held royal sway for more than thirty years.

To get the background of it all, however, it is necessary to have some understanding of the weird and wondrous theology which enables King Ben to rule as an unquestioned despot over 1,000 human beings—to compel them to turn over to him all their worldly belongings, devote their days to sweating toil to amass wealth for him and, if the accusations be true, surrender their young daughters to his embraces.

A flashback takes you to Devonshire, England, in the year 1792, when the countryside became greatly wrought up over the appearance of one Joanna Southcott, a domestic servant, who went up and down preaching a fiery gospel.

Joanna, then in middle age, declared that, although a virgin, she was with child, and that she was, in fact, the woman mentioned in Revelations XII.

"And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars: And she, being with child, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered."

Miss Southcott convinced hundreds of the authenticity of her claim and to those who professed belief she promised immortal life—always for a financial consideration.

Later it developed that Joanna's obvious physical appearance, which had deluded many, was in reality due to an abnormal tumor, but by that time she was the object of blind devotion on the part of her followers and the sect she had founded persisted.

After her death a male leader arose, styling himself the First Angel Messenger and quoting the mystic Book of Revelation to prove his divine mission.

More of Same Kind.

Within the century there appeared in England the second, third, fourth and fifth Angel Messengers. The cult spread to Australia, where the sixth Angel Messenger set up his regime and where the cult flourished exceedingly.

About 1891 came a voice howling in the wilderness of Kentucky. It was the voice of Benjamin Purnell, proclaiming:

"I am the seventh Angel Messenger!"

Purnell, then about 30 years old, had been a farmhand and carpenter on a small scale. He wandered through Kentucky and Ohio, attracting a few dozen followers, men and women, and being driven with them from place to place before the hostility of the folk of more conservative religious creeds.

One day in the summer of 1893 the citizens of Benton Harbor were amazed at the sight of a strange procession straggling into their town. The men wore their hair long and their faces were unshaven. They marched to a field of several acres on the outskirts, which they had leased in advance, erected temporary shelters and proceeded to mind their own business and till the soil.

Benjamin Purnell, his wife, Mary, and the motley entourage of the seventh Angel Messenger had pitched their tents for good in western Michigan.

At first the folk thereabout looked askance at them. But they continued to attend to their own affairs, bought the land they at first had leased, began to construct permanent buildings, expanded their real estate holdings, deposited money in a local bank in the name of the colony, which was formally incorporated as a voluntary religious association, paid all their bills promptly and soon came to be looked upon as quite desirable citizens even though they were queer and fanatical.

Visitors to the colony were always welcomed with grave courtesy and found a disciple on hand ready to explain to them the tenets of the House of David.

They were told that Benjamin was destined to preside at the "ingatherings" of the twelve tribes—144,000 persons in all—who were to be alive at the judgment day and thereafter to live forever on earth, never growing old. This was claimed to be prophesied in Revelation.

Wed In Name Only.

The expounder of the faith would naively explain that the 144,000 mentioned in Revelations referred only to males and that in reality there would be 288,000 assembled at the ingathering—a woman being provided for each man.

Pending that great day, the members of the cult, forming the nucleus of this great horde, were compelled to forswear all carnal delights.

Married couples might join the colony, but must at once cease all marital relations. Unmarried members of the cult might wed—that is to say, they might go through the marriage ceremony—but it was forbidden them ever to consummate their marriages.

Did not Revelation say that the 144,000 immortals were to be those who were "undefiled of women"?

It has long been a matter of conjecture just how strictly this commandment relative to celibacy has been obeyed by the rank and file of the colony. There have been babies born at the House of David, but they have usually disappeared.

The devotees of King Ben, men and women alike, were forbidden to cut their hair and the men to shave. They must eat no meat, drink no alcoholic liquors and were prohibited from using tobacco.

They must perform cheerfully whatever task King Ben and the little circle of satellites about the throne, known as the governing board, assigned to them.

When they joined the colony they had to sell their earthly belongings and turn the proceeds into the coffers of the colony.

Jewish Folks Barred.

King Ben's followers call themselves Israelites, but are at great pains to explain that they have no kinship with the Jews. No Jew is eligible to join the colony, nor is any colored person, both races being looked upon with something between horror and contempt.

The Israelite who adheres faithfully to the tenets of King Ben believes implicitly that he will never die, but will live forever on the earth, retaining his fleshly body along with the remainder of the 288,000 elect who will have been ingathered on that great day when the seventh Angel Messenger blows his trumpet.

Jews, Gentiles and others outside the fold, Purnell teaches, will merely attain immortality of the spirit, which was promised to all mankind, and will go to that heaven where "there is neither marriage nor giving in marriage."

For not the least of the inducements held out to the cult members is that, after the ingathering, the restrictions of celibacy may be thrown off. When some one does die at the colony the explanation simply is that he or she has sinned and thereby forfeited immortality.

So firm are they in this belief that they will not touch nor even look upon the faces of their dead. Fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, sons or daughters flee in terror from the presence of a loved one the moment life ceases.

A Benton Harbor undertaker has a standing order to dispose of these bodies at $20 each. They are buried like carrion in rude wooden boxes in a forsaken corner of a nearby cemetery. No ceremony marks their interment, no Israelite attends, no stone, nor even a mound, marks the graves.

Converts Come In Throngs.

As the colony grew and prospered during the first decade or so of its existence it grew also in the esteem of the people, particularly the business men, of Benton Harbor. Con-

:: Georgia Trees That Own Themselves ::

BY W. H. CRAIG.

"I fancy I shall never see
A thing more lovely than a tree."

AND the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden . . . and out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that was pleasant to the sight . . . "

Then a curse was placed on the soil because of the sin of our first parents, yet the trees planted on the eastward of Eden handed down to their descendants their matchless grace—and all trees are beautiful.

In every age in history trees have had an exalted place in religion, romance, patriotism and poetry.

The early Germans, and later the Druids, set apart great forest trees as objects of worship.

The most revered shrine of France is the Tree of Domremy, under whose spreading branches the maiden Joan heard the voices bidding her go to the rescue of her country.

One of the beloved heroes of the Confederacy whispered with his dying breath, "Let me pass over the river and rest under the shade of the trees." Robert E. Lee surrendered his untarnished sword under a tree at Appomattox.

* * * *

Of the many millions of lovely trees in Georgia, three of them, from motives inspired by their beauty and sentiments of comradeship, have been accorded ownership of themselves and the land upon which they grow.

In the city of Athens is a beautiful white oak that sixty years ago so endeared itself to its owner, W. H. Jackson, that it was given a deed to itself. In this document, recorded in the archives of the county, Mr. Jackson wrote: "For and in consideration of the great love I bear this tree, and the desire I have for its protection for all time, I convey to it all possession of itself, and all land within eight feet on all sides."

This tree is near the end of Dearing street, which it partly occupies, and is about four feet in diameter at the base. It is lovingly cared for by the people of the city. Fifteen years ago George Foster Peabody, the noted philanthropist, visited Athens and was so impressed with the beauty of the tree, and the sentiment that prompted Mr. Jackson to preserve it, that he had a fence of granite posts built around the lot and an abundance of rich soil placed upon it.

In the city of Dalton are two trees with romantic histories whose tenure of the earth is guaranteed by authority of law.

One is a white oak of stately proportions, located in Bishop street, in an outlying section. It was there when the street was laid off and dedicated to the uses of the public, about seventy-five years ago. The engineers, admiring the tree for its rare comeliness and in deference to the importunities of its friends, decreed that it should be saved from the axe. Since then it has continued to grow apace like the proverbial green bay tree, shading the weary traveler and affording an apartment house to the many feathered songsters that gather and hold high carnival among its branches. In 1924 Mayor McAfee, by proper authority of the city council, deeded to the tree the lot upon which it stands "until time shall have withered its limbs and the sap has ceased to flow in its fiber." The deed was made to "the old John Eason tree, Mrs. Lillian W. Carter, benefactress." This tree shows no sign of decay, and bids fair to enjoy its possessions for many years to come.

The other is the Liberty tree, located on the post office square of Dalton by special permit from the postal authorities at Washington. It is a lovely member of the arbor vitae family and was planted in 1924, under the auspices of Dalton Council No. 30, J. O. U. A. M., assisted by the Daughters of America, during the state convention of the Juniors. This tree mingles its roots with soil from every state in the union and from every county in Georgia, collected by Mr. W. M. Sapp, a distinguished citizen of the city, who conceived the idea of the Liberty tree and collected the soil. It was planted with befitting ceremonies. Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia presided and welcomed the states, represented by forty-eight white-robed young women, and the counties of Georgia, represented by one hundred and sixty boys and girls, each bearing the soil of the respective political division, which they deposited in the excavation made for the tree.

verts flocked to the House of David from all over the world, especially from Australia. Many of them came with tidy fortunes to swell King Ben's treasury.

None is admitted to the cult until much correspondence has passed between him and the officers of the association. The object is to determine whether the applicants are really among the elect of God.

It is worthy of note that an applicant for immortality was seldom or ever accepted unless he had a home or established business or some other asset that could be turned into cash with him and turn it over when he entered the colony. Some members are understood to have paid as much as $50,000 or $75,000 for the privilege of spending the rest of their lives working for King Ben.

Today the House of David owns hundreds of acres of the most fertile soil in western Michigan. Their apple orchards are among the finest in the country. The colony raises all manner of livestock save hogs, which are considered unclean.

The men and women who till these orchards and fields, harvest the crops and do the other tasks about the institution, which is virtually self-sustaining, do not receive one cent of wages. For the most part they live in rude unheated cottages scattered over the domain and subsist on the meanest of fare.

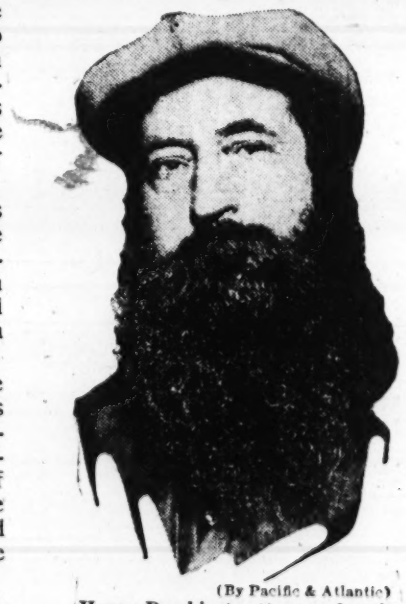

When, due to seasonal exigency, there is a surplus of man-power in the colony, the members are hired out to neighboring farmers, but they are required to turn in every cent of their pay to the cult treasury.

The street cars, for instance, which run from the neighboring town of St. Joseph, Mich., to the House of David, are manned by Israelites. This is a condition left over from war days when the cultists, claiming exemption as conscientious objectors, were drafted for work on all lines of the local traction company.

The traction company does not even go through the formality of carrying the individual Israelite conductors and motormen on its payroll, but pays their wages in a lump sum to the House of David.

Of course, there are a few favorites of the king and cult members of higher intellectuality than the average who enjoy favors and soft living, residing in Shiloh, Bethlehem and other commodious and comfortably furnished main buildings of the colony.

Chief among them are Queen Mary Purnell, Benjamin's wife; Cora Mooney, a veritable amazon who acts as duenna for the young virgins after they have been summoned from their parents' outlying shacks to take up residence at Shiloh; Francis Thorpe, generally considered the brains of the cult; Ada Ross, a clever English woman who acts as secretary and Liaison officer with the outside world, and Harry Dewhirst, former Los Angeles superior court judge, attorney for the colony.

Members of the baseball team and glee club, both of which are accustomed to making profitable tours of the country—that is to say, profitable for King Ben—are also immune from most of the rigor of ordinary cult life. A star pitcher even went so far some years ago as to trim his beard to a neat Van Dyke and got away with it.

A Weird Figure.

And then—there is Myrtle Tulk, one of the most weirdly intriguing figures in all the history of the House of David.

Myrtle Tulk is a woman of about 35. She has been King Ben's almost constant companion since she was 12, at which tender age, according to sworn testimony in the United States district court at Grand Rapids, Mich., she undertook such intimate offices as bathing the seventh Angel Messenger.

An investigation of the colony by the Michigan state attorney general in 1907 came to nothing, but it was at that time that King Ben, cannily preparing his followers for whatever the future might bring forth to destroy their confidence in his supernatural powers, voiced his prophecy from the Scriptures:

"The Son of Man will be chased like a fox!"

The fox hunt did not really begin until 1922. The year before that John W. Hansel, his wife and children, had left the colony and taken up residence in Ohio. This enabled them, because of diversity of citizenship, to file a suit in the United States court for damages against Purnell and the House of David.

They set forth that their property had been taken from them by fraud when they joined the colony and asked for the return of its value and for the value of their services for all the years they had toiled for King Ben for no reward save his promise of immortality. The Hansels recovered judgment for some $32,000.

Still Another Suit.

During the trial of this suit a large number of former women members of the cult testified to having undergone the blood purifying experience, but none of these particular acts came within the Michigan criminal statute of limitations.

Then in the spring of 1923 there came to Detroit two very pretty young sisters with their husbands. They hired a lawyer there and filed suit in the Berrien county circuit court, in whose jurisdiction Benton Harbor lies, for $50,000 damages each against King Ben and the colony.

They were the former Bamford sisters, Gladys and Ruth. They had their husbands, Benjamin Rubel and John Reed, to back them. The young men, too, were ex-cult members. The two couples had been joined in one of the forced group marriages that take place periodically in the House of David.

It was shown that King Ben was in the habit every so often of herding together a number of erstwhile girl favorites who had outgrown the extreme youth he relished and marrying them off to an equal number of male Israelites. A Benton Harbor minister or justice of the peace was called in to tie the knots, the entire group being wed in a single ceremony.

Denied Wrongdoing.

A capias was issued for Purnell's arrest in these civil suits, but when Sheriff George Bridgman went to the House of David to arrest him the seventh Angel Messenger had disappeared. He remained among the missing during the ensuing weeks of the grand jury inquiry convoked by State's Attorney Andrew B. Dougherty.

Scores of young girls were subpoenaed to testify at this probe. They came always escorted by the vigilant-eyed Cora Mooney, who sat with them in the anteroom and escorted each one to the very door of the grand jury room, admonishing her at the last moment with a pat on the shoulder.

Every one of these girls denied under oath that any wrong had ever befallen her in the House of David. Warrants were finally issued on the Bamford sisters' complaints, the last offenses they charged falling within the statute of limitations.

Then began a world-wide search for King Ben. When they trapped the fox the other day they found him old, feeble and ill. He declared he had been secluded in the colony for more than a year, after having traveled in far places for the preceding two and one-half years.

They dragged him off to jail like any common mortal and held him until some Benton Harbor business man put up the $120,000 bail.

But his bewhiskered disciples have not lost faith. They scan the heavens daily for signs of the lightning that is to strike the persecutors of the seventh Angel Messenger.

BRIDGEPORT.

EMERGING suddenly from the shadows into which he flitted some weeks ago, the phantom stabber who has held this city of 150,000 in the bondage of fear for exactly two years, celebrated the second anniversary of his mad career the other night by using his dreaded stiletto upon a fresh victim.

She was Miss Charlotte Mosseau, 18 years old, of 161 Clinton avenue, and the attack brings the elusive knife-wielder's score up to twenty-one.

The girl had gone out to post a letter. On the way home she found herself facing the maniac who without speaking threw his arms around her, hugged her vigorously and slashed her twice on the cheek. Miss Mosseau fainted and was found unconscious on the sidewalk a few moments later.

Miss Charlotte Mosseau, the "phantom stabber's" twenty-first victim in two years, showing on her cheek the marks left by his knife when he hugged and slashed her.

For two years now the police have been exerting every effort to catch him and on few occasions has there been "any trace" after one of his outrages. When they called him the "phantom" they knew what they were doing. A maniac, as he must be, he matches wits with the smartest and escapes. He seldom leaves a clue. All that they know of him is that he has gray hair and is about forty years old.

The two-year duel with the stabber has left Superintendent of Police Patrick J. Flanagan grizzled and worn but not discouraged. Recently he asked for, and received, fifty extra policemen. Virtually all of them are on the hunt for the "phantom."

"We'll get him," promises Flanagan grimly, and his assistant, John H. Regan, who is in charge of the detective bureau, says the same.

"When?" ask the citizens who have a very bad case of "nerves" and are tired of waiting. But Flanagan and Regan don't know the answer to that one.

To add to their worries, Dr. Emanuel S. Brodsky, a well-known alienist, tells them that the mental disease of the stabber probably is progressive and getting worse.

Until now, the phantom foe of society, who has devoted his attentions exclusively to women, has been satisfied to inflict a wound that is most cases has been little more than superficial. In a few instances the knife blade has gone deep, apparently by accident, but in no instance have the injuries been mortal.

Dr. Brodsky thinks, though, that if he is not apprehended, the stabber will cease to get any thrill out of inflicting minor wounds and that Bridgeport will awaken some morning to read of a bloody knife murder.

All the attacks but one have been at night, but not all have been on lonely streets. He has entered department stores in search of victims and even invaded the sancity of St. Augustine's church to cut a woman who had held the door open for him, seeing him fumbling in his pocket, and thinking him old and feeble until he struck.

There are many theories, one being that while there was only one "phantom stabber" in the beginning, other maniacs have been fired by his example, and there are several now. Those holding that opinion would not be satisfied with a single arrest.

The police think the guilty man may be a reputable artisan, business man or professional man, who is normal most of the time, and is considered above suspicion. Suspects have been arrested, grilled, confronted by the victims, but the outrages have gone on.

Very early in 1925, the phantom stabber began his campaign against the peace and security of the women of Bridgeport, and it has raged intermittently ever since.

Mary Annunziato, a little girl, was the first victim. She was attacked at the Burroughs Public Library building on Main street shortly after dark. Having drawn blood, the maniac apparently was satisfied, for he ran away before she could scream. In no subsequent stabbing has he attempted to do more.

The Annunziato girl gave the police the best description they have of the knife-wielder. She said he was about forty, gray-haired, active, smooth-shaven and wore a black overcoat, dark suit and soft black hat.

It was two months before the madman broke out again. It was Miss Mildred Cook, of Flushing, Long Island, who was stabbed, and not a block from the scene of the first attack. The girl was visiting friends on Main street.

On May 1, 1925, Elsie Schwarz, the 13-year-old daughter of John G. Schwarz, a building commissioner, was waylaid in front of the Public Library and cut about the shoulders.

Emboldened by the ease with which he always made his getaway, the miscreant perpetrated his only daylight stabbing on August 22, 1925, picking 12-year-old Edith Zimmerman, of West Philadelphia, who had come up to visit relatives in Bridgeport and benefit by a change of scene. That attack was made in front of the Central High school, just a block from Main street. The phantom more than justified his name in this instance. One moment he was holding his hand over the child's mouth, thrusting the stiletto into her shrinking flesh. The next moment he was gone, and nobody saw him go. When the hue and cry was raised, "there was no trace."

stood what was in the wind she was at the miscreant with a stout umbrella of the family type. Unprepared for such a warm reception, the stabber ran out into the street, but the lady still pursued him. She proceeded to pummel him and to scream with such vim that he took to his heels without accomplishing his design.

What adds greatly to the dread with which the mysterious "phantom stabber" has for two years filled a whole city is the possibility that he has not yet done his cruel worst. It is feared that when next he pounces on a girl victim he may plunge his knife more deeply than he ever has before and leave her dead or dying.

Rose Kenersky, twelve, were stabbed while playing in the same neighborhood, and within a few minutes of each other. There were several others the same month, and then the police arrested a town ne'er-do-well on suspicion, and sent him away for six months on general principles.

There were no stabbings while he was incarcerated and Superintendent Flanagan began to sleep of nights. The ne'er-do-well got out, and in August of last year the stabbings began again.

"Find him for me," roared Flanagan, but when they came to check up, they learned that the suspect had been in a small town in New Jersey on the night the attack was made, and half the people in the town had seen him there. So that was that.

Mary Dirgo, stabbed by a man who lunged at her out of the gloom of a doorway and sank his knife in her flesh so quickly that she could give the police no idea of what he looked like.

There was ar orgy of stabbings during August, September and October of 1926 and panic set in among the women and girls. For the matter of that, it has not yet subsided. Many girls who work late are carrying police whistles and a few of the bolder ones are packing pistols in their handbags.

Early in August, he attempted to slash sixteen-year-old Alice Driscoll on South avenue, and made the strategic mistake of underestimating the prowess of the girl's mother who was with her.

Mrs. Sarah Driscoll comes of fighting stock, and as soon as she understood what was in the wind she was at the miscreant with a stout umbrella of the family type. Unprepared for such a warm reception, the stabber ran out into the street, but the lady still pursued him. She proceeded to pummel him and to scream with such vim that he took to his heels without accomplishing his design.

On August 13, the man attacked Mary Denito, fourteen years old, as she was scurrying along Warren street in the early dusk. He came closer to capture that time than he ever did before.

The child screamed as she saw him advancing upon her. Ernest Noel, a steeplejack, jumped from the window of his ground-floor apartment and was almost upon the "phantom" before the latter realized his danger. But when he did, he slipped away into the shadows with the speed of a jack rabbit, and the courageous steeple-jack lost his footing and could not continue.

On that same night, the phantom stabbed Adeline Kinder, sixteen years old, and Anna Boggart, twenty-six. The Kinder girl, daughter of a prominent sportsman, was attacked in the subway at the railway station. Miss Boggart was cut about the breasts a few minutes after she had left a beauty parlor.

Little Mary Corcoran was stabbed in plain sight of half a dozen women a few nights later, the blade entering her abdomen. The child gave a startled gasp when the man reached out and jabbed as he passed. At first she thought he had struck her with his fist.

By the time the impromptu indignation meeting was over and the chase begun, the guilty man probably was miles away. Mary went to the Emergency hospital, where so many other victims have been taken, and there disclosed the half-inch knife wound that is the trade-mark of one of the craziest criminals to figure in police records since the days of Jack the Ripper.

On October 7, 1926, Carnella Chararalla, nineteen, visited St. Augustine's church, and as she was entering observed a man with his hat pulled low coming toward her in the half-light of the vestibule. He was shuffling along, looking at the floor. Believing him to be old, she obligingly held the door open for him to leave. As he passed, he stabbed her in the left side.

That wound was nearly an inch deep, and differently placed might have caused death. As usual, the phantom showed how he got his name. Although he must have passed under an arc light, by the illumination of which children were playing, not one of them saw him going.

Whipping his courage up to the point of insane recklessness on October 23, just before he "went into retirement" for a while, the stabber invaded Read's department store looking for a victim. On landing on the stairs he found her—Margaret Bruzinski, of 290 Putnam street. The little shopgirl was hurrying down to get her hat and coat

THE MAGIC MAN

A Blue

INSTALLMENT XV.

HE WENT along the corridor slowly, lost in thought, to his bedroom.

As he switched on the light a single canvas stared out, instinct with life and color, from the Henry VIII, linen fold paneling. It was a portrait of his wife, done years before from an indifferent photograph, yet the genius of the copyist had fixed on the canvas a remembered something that made it Roselius's dearest possession.

He sat down before it, as he so often did, pondering.

Love—it was youth's high tide. Natural enough that Pierre should be in love with Rose—just as was Schuyler, just as had been, perhaps more, in their several ways, a half dozen others. The right kind of love meant service, giving, pouring out like the sunshine and the rain. Such love, even if unreturned, was a blessing, not a curse!

After a long time Roselius went down to the lib-lab and seated himself at the organ in its gallery. He drew out its soft stop and began to play, touching the keys lightly and more lightly till the sound was like gnomes piping inside a hill. He played absently, not knowing what he was playing, for his thoughts were far from the keyboard.

He became all at once aware that he had ceased to play—his hands had fallen from the keyboard to his knees.

He got up, shook himself, and went to bed.

* * * *

Some ailments yield to knife or nostrum. Some, perhaps, may be Coued. One may be exorcised by so simple a thing as an invitation to go walking.

As Canuck sat in his room the next Sunday afternoon, listlessly trying to read, there came a tap at the door.

"Come in," he called.

It was Petersen, the footman. "Miss Rose would like to know whether you would care to take a walk with her, sir."

Would he! He bolted down stairs, three at a time, caught up his cap, and went out to the drive, where Rose waited in a kasha frock and a close-fitting piratical hat with a dagger pin.

"Help!" said Rose. "Is the speed a tribute to my personality or only the instinct to get the darn thing over with?"

He laughed and they went chatting together down the drive and out of the great gate. He was pondering the mystery of the change in her that had brought her unaccountably back, the old Rose, with the added puzzle of the rich color that came and went in her cheeks today.

Suddenly he asked: "Why have you been different lately?"

"I? Different? In what way?"

"In every way—little piffling things. So small, sometimes, that I couldn't put my finger on 'em. But they were there. You haven't been the same since the night at the cabaret."

She looked away for an instant; his question touched something that still ached, though the sharpness of the pain had gone. In her anger and trouble of her heart, she could not, for her very life, have acted differently with him. But as days succeeded days and she saw his look of perplexity turn to one of anxiety and helplessness, his piteous unawareness had worked more and more upon her. Shame and anger at last had faded out till pity was most of what remained, and the barrier between them had crumbled down.

"Maybe it's just been a mood," she said.

"I've been wondering—whether you—whether you thought I ought not to have done it—that rough-house at the cabaret, I mean."

"No, certainly not. You had no no option."

"I'm glad you say that. I'm not a scrapper, you know. But when you have something like that handed to you why——" He turned out his hands with a laugh. "It did me good, though," he added, reflectively. "If it hadn't happened, I might never have known I was any use with my fists."

"A good sensation?"

"The best ever!" He spoke with feeling. "The meanest curse in the world is being afraid of things." His fingers stroked his chin, where a cut was healing. "That was a whale of an evening, though, wasn't it?"

The road made a broad sweep about a tongue of forest now, and they walked for a time silently, for the wind that was in their faces.

There was little call to be garrulous, for the wide thoroughfare that goes curving and sweeping over the low hills—now dipping through tracts of stately woods and now skirting the very rim of the water or winding snakily along the lip of a sheer ravine—itself chatters of a thousand things. By it stand the abashed country farmhouse and the plethoric wayside curio mart; here an ancient mill has been turned into a tea shop for dusty throated motorists, and there wealth has been lavished on a structure that to the world roamer titters of he Ginza, moans of the Pincio, or shrieks of Bubbling Well road, or of heaven knows what other place.

"I'll be off and let you go to bed. Just one thing more. I shan't be in the laboratory tomorrow—I must be in the city. There's one experiment—Y.42—that's in its critical stage. The smallest variations in temperature would ruin it."

Canuck nodded. "Yes, I know."

"I want you to take charge of it."

"Me?" Canuck stared. "But that's the most complicated of all. Mr. Faris——"

"I'll speak to him. I want you to handle it alone. It'll take some watching. Come down and breakfast with me in the morning and we'll talk about it. There are some points I want to go over with you."

Canuck followed him to the door in an emotion that held him for a moment so tongue-tied that he could only mutter something unintelligible. Then, all at once, the repression crumbled. Words came, so quick and eager they fairly tumbled over one another:

"I'll go my limit, sir," he said. "I hope you won't be sorry you did it. If anything went wrong, I——"

"Nothing's going wrong," growled Roselius.

"Not if I can help it—no. I mean it simply won't. It shan't!"

"That's better."

"You're right about the moods. I've been ashamed, many a time, at the way I hated it all—how sometimes, I wanted to kick everything overboard—just clear out. But something inside of me's been making me go on, even when I knew I was a flat tire, and when knowing it hurt, and hurt damnably. O, it sounds like rot—what I'm saying—I know!"

"No, no!" said Roselius, and his voice was very soft. "I understand. Something in you said must. Ah, if man always listened to that still reminder! For it's only in the possession of that, my boy, that he's different from cattle and cuttlefish. It's the voice of his better self—the self he should have been and may be."

He seemed to grow taller as he spoke, to bulk bigger in the dim light.

Then, as he turned to the door, he stopped suddenly and his hand came up to fumble in his tawny gray beard.

His eyes were on the writing desk, where was propped a half-tone reproduction of a photograph, cut from a leaf of a weekly magazine and carefully gummed to a square of pasteboard. His swift glance read its printed line, "Miss Rose Roselius, daughter of the chemist wizard."

But Canuck today had no eyes for these things. He preferred to look at Rose, sideways, as she stepped out beside him, slim and straight as a silver birch sapling, her cheeks, stung to a glowing redness and the rebellious ends of her coppery bob curling from beneath the brim of the dinkly little hat that for him framed all the romance of the world.

He drew a deep breath and looked away. Things were breaking his way—a run on the red. Yesterday's experiment, Y.42, had been such a success that Roselius, when he had checked off the test, had gone about for an hour rubbing his hands. He was getting on; even gruff old Faris said so. And here he was, walking through what he knew must be the most wonderful countryside in the whole world—with Rose!

The highway forked presently and they turned into the shore road that hugged the narrow lip of sand whereon motor boats were moored and canoes lay, keel up, drying in the sun. A bit farther on it elbowed the vanished among the trees.

Rose caught Canuck's arm. A small electric roadster that had overtaken and passed them had stopped with a grinding of the brake, and a woman sprang out, a slight figure in gas blue serge and a painted hat. Something familiar in the quick, lithe movement in the toss of her head, told Rose who she was, even before she came close and they saw her face, white under the rouge, and her hard, challenging eyes.

"O, Lord!" groaned Canuck. "It's that girl from the cabaret. She's going to bawl me out for doing up her fellow. This is where I get mine. Gosh, I want to run!"

But Rose did not smile. She was pale with apprehension. The encounter was bringing home to her with appalling clearness the perilous risk that dogged him. What good was all precaution if at any minute, by some ironic chance, he might have the truth about himself flung in his teeth?"

Fritzi was standing before them now.

"Guess you didn't expect to see me out here," she began with a dry laugh. She was sober enough today, but the sight of Rose had jarred her tense control and she could not refrain from adding, with an ugly side look, "I suppose she wasn't expectin' me, either."

Canuck flared up.

"See here! I don't care to be held up on the road like this. Why should I—or this lady—expect to see you? What have you got to say to me?"

"I had a taxi trail you that night from the cabaret," Fritzi said irrelevantly, "and found out where you were. It cost me twenty dollars." She laughed unevenly. "Looks like it was a bum investment, seeing how glad you are to see me again."

Her failure that night to "bring him to his senses," as she expressed it in her mind, she had blamed on her own outburst and the consequent fight. Amnesia and its vagaries were as far from her comprehension as the binomial theorem. To her thinking he must remember her. If she could see him just once more, without all that jazz spiel going on, she could make him remember! So, every afternoon, for ten days, in the little roadster, which she had wheedled Jake Wolfsheim into letting her use, she had chugged along the roads about Melton, awed by the grandeur of the great estate, watching for the chance that had come today. Now, meeting him face to face, she felt baffled and netted.

"What did you have me followed for?" Canuck demanded. "You know well enough that row wasn't my fault."

"Sure it wasn't," she agreed, and he caught the genuine surprise in her voice. "Served Blondy right! I'd a soaked him with a carafe if Jake hadn't held me. Say! That was a bird of a left you give him. I was tickled pink."

"Then what——" he began, puzzled.

"Kid—don't you understand?—I'm tryin' to say I'm sorry I flew up that way that night. Honest to God, I wouldn't-a done it if I hadn't been half soused. I guess I got pretty mad—but when you acted like you didn't even remember me, it made me sort-a wild."

He looked at her frowning. "You can't mean you think—you know me?"

She laughed raggedly, looked at Rose, then back at him.

"Honey-boy," she said, "I guess it's straight goods that you've forgot a lot. But don't let anybody tell you you don't know me." She flung out her arm in a fierce gesture at Rose. "She ain't got a right to keep you away from me."

Canuck's control snapped. "See here, you—you can't speak of this lady—you shan't."

"It doesn't matter—about me, Pierre," said Rose, calmly, though her thought was in tumult.

"You're mistaken," went on Canuck. "I don't know you. I don't even know your name. You don't—what right——"

He stopped abruptly, shaking.

"Right?" jeered Fritzi. "I got what ought to be considered a right." Her small frame tightened. "Can't you see what's in my eyes?"

"It's not true! It's a lie!" he burst out incoherently. "I never saw you before that night at the cabaret."

The shrinking and sick repulsion in his face made Rose quiver. Fritzi must needs have been blind not to realize its utter finality and it came to her like a smothering wave which drowned all of her vicious little being in a blaze of rage. What tenderness she had ever felt for him fell in eclipse. She hated him at that moment with a hatred as passionate as a puma's. And she longed, in stabbing him, to stab the girl beside him.

"If you've forgot," she said, venomously, "I haven't! There's things I'll remember as long as you remember you've got that scar, there on your breast."

Then she turned and stumbled back to the roadster.

Canuck had gone pale and his hand had come up, with startled swiftness, to his left breast.

And suddenly, in the warm June air, he felt very cold.

* * * *

In a stricken silence they saw Fritzi stumble to the roadster, climb in, and start the machine slithering through the rubble of loose shale on the edge of the road, till it leaped into pace at the turn a hundred yards away.

Canuck was shivering as if in a nipping wind. He had not looked at Rose, standing with her hair all rumpled and her skirt blowing about her, staring after the diminishing black cube spinning along the empty curving road.

His face was turned away, but she could see its look of deep trouble, almost terror, and she felt thrill through her a passionate desire to reassure and comfort him.

One of the lost chapters of his forgotten past!—so he was telling himself. What other detestable pages did it hold? Often and often, as he had gone here and there in the city, he had felt roll over him that sense of old intimacy. He must have spent long periods in New York. What other adventures of his—of that lost self of his—did it hide? And what of London and Brussels? Other hunting-grounds! Other dance halls! Other women of that half-world, against which this clean sweet world to which Rose belonged set itself off so sharply! The love he gave her was something bruised and smutted and dishonored. How could he ask for hers? A coward's exchange!

He turned from her, sat down brokenly on a bowlder, and put his face in his hands.

At his posture, so full of pain, something seemed to break up in Rose's breast. She ran to him with a little cry, like a mother's over a hurt child, and her arms went around his neck and her face was pressed to his.

"Pierre, Pierre!" she cried. "Nothing matters to me! I don't care about the past! O, my dear, my dear!"

For a moment he sat absolutely moveless, letting the knowledge of the wonderful thing flow over him and drench every innermost cranny of his being with sweetness. With some detached part of his brain he argued, reasoned, protested, but her fragrant presence shut out all stir of thought. Then in the circle of her arms, he began to tremble. The softness of her body against his, her face bright with pity and longing to comfort, and the beating of her heart that he could feel against his side! Suddenly the tension within him snapped and he caught her to him, his mouth on her trembling lips.

They came slowly back from the great blank space into which they had been caught up—back to the stony slope, the yellow sunshine, the slap of the little waves and the high drone of the wind.

"I'm—I'm not fit for you to love!"

She smiled at him, with the tears wet on her cheeks. "It's only the now that counts to me!"

"My God, Rose! I don't know—what I've been. Half an hour ago I wouldn't have believed——"

"There's nothing the past can make any difference to me!"

"Nothing?"

"Nothing, Pierre! Never, never!"

"Rose—Rose——"

Mitch's Perfidy Is Discovered.

On the lawn the peacock's grating call lifted and died away. From the stables came the squeal of a horse, and from the courtyard the roar of a delivery car from the village. Then these faded out into the silence.

Rose sat on a marble bench in the blue garden, hatless and coatless, drinking in through every pore of her splendid young body the June air and sunshine. She was not quite the same Rose who had flung her arms about Canuck in the hour of his shame and pain. Before that she had looked at life like a child at the pantomime, wondering of what nature love was. But in that moment the meaning of it had seared through all her senses like a quivering white flame. She had sprung at a leap into the great river of understanding and nothing could ever be the same to her again. A thief in the past or a very murderer at that moment—it would have mattered nothing.

The significance of the change in her was to be seen in the fact that she now had her first willful secret from her father. She had not been able to tell him of the coming of Fritzi and its sequel. It was too closely linked to the moment of that revealing kiss, a part now of a secret of her own.

She had had little conversation with Canuck alone during these past days, though every time they met she had seen that same glowing spark flare into his eyes to set her pulses leaping and her heart beating fast. She was gloriously glad of that swift surrender, that passionate embrace, knowing that only her arms and her kiss could have helped him in that black moment. She knew his thoughts had been bitterly occupied and she guessed that he found relief from their burden in the grinding routine of the laboratory.

Rose's battle over Fritzi had been fought out in her own heart in days succeeding the episode at the Green Cockatoo, and the scene on the road that had followed had told her that the ghost had been laid forever. Pierre was hers.

She knew now that she had loved him since the long ago hour when he had come back from the hell of mad hysteria calling for her. Pierre! Pierre! Nothing should come between them any more.

His mother—Rose knew by her woman's intuition that her lips were locked. The girl of the cabaret—a wanton on the fringe of the Great White Way! She had done her worst. Surely there could be no perils closer than those had been! He had been snatched from that past of his and it should not repossess him! Always Rose's thinking began and ended with her passionate cry to him of "Never! Never!" and the feel of his face and lips against hers.

She looked up at the scrunch of a heavy foot on the gravel path. Petersen was bringing her letters from the afternoon mail.

She turned them over listlessly, delaying to open them, half resenting their intrusion upon her day dreams, then caught up one addressed in a sprawling hand.

She tore open the envelope. It held no written word—only a sealed letter, addressed in the same hand, to "The Kid."

Rose would have been more than human if she had not felt a temptation clawing at her to open and read what it contained, as she would have been less than herself if she had yielded to the impulse. How should she give it to him? Should she hand it to him herself or send it to his room in another envelope?

Chance made the decision for her when, a moment later, she saw him crossing the gardens toward her. He leaped the herbaceous border, his arms flung high, so that she caught his silhouette filmed in the golden sunlight against the blue, and came and threw himself down on the grass at her feet.

"I just had to find you," he said. "Do you know I haven't seen you since yesterday?"

She nodded. "I'm glad you came. I was just wondering—I have a letter for you." She held it out.

He sat up and took it, his brows coming together in a frown and a deep red creeping in his temples. She looked away, across the far waste of the sound, while he opened it and read the single sheet it contained.

When she turned her head, he was holding it out to hr.

"Dear Kid: I'm sorry I followed you—got payed back good and plenty. Well, Blondy and me are going to be married tomorrow and go out west whare the wet bisiness is good. Blondy aint you kid and he never will be but you should worry. Well goodby kid if you ever come outa your trance, youll remember who I was from "FRITZI."

She looked down at his face.

"You know, I can't for the life of me feel anything," he said. "I honestly can't! She might be some one I'd never seen. As though the I that knew her was somebody else, not this me at all."

"It was somebody else!"

"Yet I was responsible," he went on, steadily. "I've been trying to work it, out, but it's been like a ball and chain dragging on my leg—till now. This letter—don't you think I can feel free now?"

She nodded. "Yes, I do."

He was kneeling, looking up into her face, his hands holding hers. He lifted them and held them against his cheek. "Rose, I've loved you since the first day I saw you—after I'd been shot—when I thought you were my nurse. I—I've been a rotter—I know that. I'm not worth your caring—not in a thousand years! But, Rose you said you loved me, down there by the water that day. Do—you care enough to—marry me?"

She put out her arms and framed his face in them. By word and deed he had shown her his love for her. But this was the further assurance, the sequel, the confirmation, to which the heart of every woman looks forward. "Yes," she whispered.

The word was silenced by his mouth on hers, so hard that it hurt, yet the pang held an exquisite joy, for her as for him. Their first kiss had been on the selvedge of peril and foreboding, but here was safety and now was peace. This embrace held all the passion and grace of youthful tenderness, the sweet fire of first love and the wild leaping of two hearts, lost for the moment in one another, sensible only of the satiny softness of hair and the velvet softness of young lips. For a long minute they clung together, as oblivious to all else as if they hung aloft in the outer space. There were no tears now on her cheeks, that were flying flags of crimson.

When he looked again into her eyes his own were shining with fluctuant fire.

"Loveliest!" he breathed. "You are running a terrible risk——"

She shook her head, with its wonderful whorls of lustrous hair. "I'll take the chance."

"But maybe you know the worst about me—Lord knows I hope you do!—and with you standing by me——"

There was a splendid radiance in the look she gave him now, mixed of love and confidence. She and Pierre, loving one another always! Going hand in hand together along the warm, thrilling highway of marriage! She could have laughed aloud to think that only a few months ago she had thought of marriage with Mitch! Inseparable from that picture had been the thought of leaving her father for another home, an establishment of her own. But now she had a sweeter mental vision, of Pierre working on always at Melton with her father, like a son—and she his wife.

Some time—years and years hence, of course!—he might be told the truth about himself, but then it wouldn't matter. It would be something ancient and dreamlike then—a nightmare for them to laugh and shudder over together and be thankful. Only, one thing he should never know—that it was her hand that had shot him. No one should ever tell him that!

"I'll stand by you always, Pierre! Always!"

and be off to a picture show. The maniac put his hand over her mouth, drew her close to him, and drove the knife into her left breast. Below, customers surged to and fro. Above, department managers were covering up the counter displays. Employees were everywhere. And still he got away.

Superintendent Flanagan is sure all the suspects he has questioned, including the unfortunate loafer who did six months on suspicion, are innocent. Now he is looking in the ranks of the ultra-respectable for his man. Possibly it may be one of those loudest in outcry when the stabbings become known. A crafty, clever, able-bodied maniac, not too cautious, not too daring.

While he naturally is not announcing what steps he has taken, it is known that he is having the streets patroled by special police in civilian clothes; it is hinted he is employing strong-armed women detectives, and it is rather more than suspected that he is using men operatives disguised as women.

"It is useless to deny we will have to catch this fellow red-handed," Flanagan says.

"Relying upon his victims to identify him afterward is useless. The women are too much excited to note the appearance of their assailant. In court, the conscientious ones, whose testimony might bear weight with a jury, won't identify suspects because they fear they may incriminate the wrong man.

"Let me urge every male citizen of Bridgeport to constitute himself a vigilante and keep his eyes open. A woman's cry for help on a Bridgeport street ought to bring all the able-bodied men within hearing to her rescue, without waiting for the police.

"Dr. Brodsky tells us this man's malady may be getting worse, and he may ultimately whip his crazy courage up to the point of murder. There is no use deceiving ourselves. There is at large among us a madman with all the elements that went into the making of the original Jack the Ripper."

waved off her intention of haste. "I'd like to play pinochle with father," she said, bestowing upon him the tone which always presaged cajolery.

"We won't be late," Marny told her. "You can play till we come home."

"You aren't going out?" Her father scowled in protest. "I was thinking that the four of us could have a good game of bridge. I haven't played since the last time Gene was over. I owe him a beating."

"I'll come over some other night," Gene made overture, "but Marny and I planned to——"

"We'll just play a little while," Tracy overrode him. He brought out the card table with the eagerness of the bored for distraction, and put it into place.

"But I don't want to play," Marny protested. "I haven't been out since church, and I'm dead for air."

"O, come on, come on! We'll just play for an hour, then you two can go."

"O, very well." She would not meet Gene's eye as she took a place grudgingly across from him. "Don't blame me if we lose," she told him.

"I think that's just what I'll do," he said, so earnestly that she was startled into looking at him.

Under the flare of temper she lighted into flame of her own, and sulkily dealt the cards from the deck while her father and siste r contemplated their hands in blissful heedlessness of the drama between them.

"Let's play deuces wild," Grace exclaimed. No one assented, and she pouted. "I love to play them," she told Gene.

"You would," he said with an undercurrent of significance in his voice which only Marny caught. "It's quite a trick," he went on evenly, "to be able to block the other fellow's high cards with your low ones."

"Isn't it?" Grace agreed.

"Misdeal," her father told Marny.

For an hour they played, Grace and her father avid for victory, Gene careful from force of habit, Marny reckless. The clock struck nine before she found a chance to withdraw.

"Come on," she bade Gene, but it was the purpose of indignation rather than the joy of anticipation which rang in her command.

"I'm not going up just yet," Grace, said, as her father and Gene walked toward the porch. "I want to talk to father. I think that Stella would rather stay home this summer now that Herb's coming back, but she doesn't know how to fix it. That's why she went home with Clara. She'll try to get her to go abroad, and take Helen."

"Did she tell you that?"

"She didn't say anything, but don't you suppose I can see it? I thought perhaps father would be glad to have Stella home, and so he'd send me with Helen if——"

"You're day dreaming."

"Well, that's the way to start anything, isn't it?"

"Perhaps." Her own dreams seemed perilously top heavy as she turned away. What a mess it all was! One after the other, her father, Stella, Grace, they had all unconsciously cheated her out of the happiness of an evening which should have been glowing; just as somehow they had, without real intention, cheated her out of years of freedom, of fulfillment, of Gene.

"Ready?" Gene asked her as her father went back to Grace.

"I'm too tired to go now," she told him, knowing her weariness was of spirit not of flesh. "Let's stay here."

He moved a chair close to hers, and took her hand. Once more the utter peace which had come to her with his presence crept over her senses, and she drifted into an awed delight of the soft Maytime evening. Content to linger in the aura of the dream, she was startled by the swift harshness of Gene's voice. "What are you going to do about it, Marny?"

"About what?"

"About me. About them."

"O, I——"

"I've loved you since before your mother died," he went on solemnly. "You weren't any older than Helen the night I met you at Whelan's. Remember?"

"I couldn't forget."

"I've never seen any other girl since."

"But——"

"You've been the reason for everything I've done. I quit college and went to work because I wanted to make money to ask you to marry me when you'd be twenty-one."

"Why—why didn't you tell me then?"

"I couldn't bind you when I didn't have anything."

"Then by the time I was earning enough to get a home, your mother died. I saw how your father needed you, and so I waited. Then Grace married, and Stella and the youngsters came home. I tried my best to pull you out then, but you wouldn't see it."

"You didn't ask me."

"I didn't care. You looked as dedicated to your family those days as if you'd been a nun, and they were your vocation."

"They were, I think."

"Well, isn't it about time to change it to me? I need you more than they do."

"O, Gene!" Her clasp on his hand tightened. "I don't know."

"Don't—know?"

"I thought I did when—when you kissed me. I thought it was just love for you that made me so happy. If you'd asked me then, I'd have said I'd go with you tomorrow."

"Well, why not tomorrow?"

"But I've had time since then to see that there's something else in me that made me glad, and so I can't be sure. You see," she went on painfully, "I've been running the house here for nearly seven years, and somehow they've all got into the habit of thinking that I'm part of the machinery. Nobody thinks of me as a human being but Maggie Kenny and you. They don't mean it I'm sure, but they've brought things to the place where I thought this afternoon before you came that I'd do anything in the world to get away from it all."

"It's about time you saw it."

"O, Gene, dearest, don't you see that is why I can't go with you?"

"In the name of all that's holy, why not?"

"Because. I love you too much."

"That's the best reason in the world for coming."

"But I've been used so long by the ones I've loved that I can't let myself use you. I thought I could. Really, I did. Sometimes I would think that if only you'd ask me, I'd rush right into your arms, and never, never let you stir a step without me. O, for a long, long time, ever since I thought you must love me or you wouldn't stand these Sunday riots of ours, you've been my way out, my ace in the hole. That's why I can't go with you, Gene. I'd be—ashamed."

"Don't you love me?"

Her hand trembled within his hold. "I'll never be able to tell you how much. I've never even thought of any one else, and I think of you—all the time."

"Now, look here, Marny," he said slowly, evenly, but she saw the storm back of his eyes as he bent toward her, "you've got this all wrong. The only thing that's important in all this muddle is that you love me and that I love you. If you didn't love me, you might have a qualm about taking me for a ladder out of the pit."

"No," she said, "it's because I love you so much that I can't let anything like that come into it."

"The trouble with you," he said angrily, "is that you let them play their game with your cards, and their game has been deuces wild, just as Grace called it tonight. Two-spots to win over kings, and queens, and aces! Well, their little cards aren't going to stop our high cards any longer. We're going to play the game our own way, and with each other!"

"If——"

"That's all there's to it. Now are you going to marry me?"

In the dim light from the living room windows he stared at her, as if he were gazing down into the deep well of her troubled soul.

"Yes," she said, and felt the serenity of long denied security as he turned her hand and set his lips reverently upon her throbbing palm.

"When?"

"I—I don't know," she gasped, as she heard her father's step in the hall.

"Now, listen to me, Marny. You've kept me waiting ten years while you've taken care of your family, and you're not going to keep me waiting another week. You're going to marry me this week, or I'll go off to China alone."

"China?"

"Yes, China. When I was a youngster I used to stand by the bridges in the North Branch, watching the old lake boats going out in the spring. There was one of them, the Alice Cameron, whose captain came to know me. I used to yell to him, 'Where are you going?' and he'd always say, 'To China, sonny!' That was when I made up my mind that some day I'd go there. Then I met you, and I put you in the dream of it. Hongkong, Shanghai, the Treaty Ports—what a time we'll have, Marny! You're coming with me if you marry me before Saturday. If you don't——"

"But, Gene, dear——"

"That's that."

"But if——." She paused as her father came to the doorway.

"Nice night," Tracy said judicially, surveying the street. "Is the man coming to cut the grass tomorroy, Marny?"

"Yes."

"Needs it. Tell him not to rake it or the lawn'll burn up. Has Grananoque good fishing in June, Gene."

"Fine."

"Hello, here's Stella." His voice lifted in the pleasure of his eldest daughter's presence always evoked for him, but Stella's response failed

GLORIA SWANSON'S tea in her apartment atop the Park Chambers was really all to the good. This is one of those parties your correspondent not only attended but was invited as well. Some months ago I fell in with a Mr. Richard Halliday who at the time did not look as if he'd ever do me any particular good. Now it develops he is Miss Swanson's press representative, and now look where he's gotten me to tea. I'm glad I put up with him during his uneventful days. You never know.

Any idea I might have had that Miss Swanson would greet her guests swarthed in a Cecil de Mille ballgown with a headgear of paradise was soon dispelled. For that enchanting person—and how enchanting—was wearing an exceptionally simple and becoming gown of gold something-or-other. There were no roses, bow-knots or ermine tails bobbing up suddenly from unsuspected places.

There were about thirty guests at the tea and a colored orchertra played "Oh Kay!" music most of the afternoon. I thought Miss Swanson's tea moved very easily, there being none of those congested knots of embarrassed people most often to be found at teas. Of course Gloria's Marquis was there and he impressed me as being a pretty good scout. John Boles the leading man in her new picture, "The Loves of Sunya," was there. He might just as well start autographing pictures now. The only other two movie celebrities on hand were Lois Wilson, who poured tea, and Walter Goss, who drank it.

A door which during one of my scouting tours I accidentally (?) opened, revealed a glass case with perhaps sixty pairs of Gloria's various colored slippers. The apartment itself is an extremely homelike, rambling affair occupying an entire floor. This Park Chambers frowns directly down upon that apartment in which Nell and Mrs. Sims had such a good time for six months. Mrs. and Miss Sims will no doubt be interested to learn that that building they were in hasn't fallen down yet.

Miss Swanson, who looks you straight in the eye when she talks to you, says she loves those parts of the south she's been in. Atlanta, so it seems, is one of those places she's planning to visit one of these days. I took the liberty of telling her you'd be kinder glad to have her drop down sometime.

If Douglas Paine could have heard all the spasms of enthusiasm which greeted that picture of her in Sunday before last's Constitution when I showed it to a New York group, well, she'd placard every telephone post in the country with one. They haven't let up yet. From present indications she's threatened with having a rather large delegation of uninvited New York guests on her hands on the night she goes up to St. Luke's to do a little marrying. When it comes to three snappy-looking cousins, you've got a hard job before you trying to trump Babylow Sanders Douglas and Louise Stubbs.

Mrs. Harmon, whom I can't imagine Atlanta without, is one of your number with whom I recently collided in the subway. My last encounter with her, as well as I can remember, was that evening in Atlanta when I was more than pleased at being caught at the Woman's club hearing Frank Swinnerton lecture. Read his exceptionally interesting "Summer Storm" if you haven't already."

"Bye, Bye, Bonnie" in the event you can forgive that title, is a smart and engaging musical play. The curtain rises on one of those office scenes in which stenographers, file clerks and office boys are dancing gaily away. It is truly amazing how few such offices there seem to be in real life. There's a fairly intelligent plot tangled up in the music and dances of "Bye, Bye, Bonnie." Dorothy Burgess, who earlier this year did what she could for "The Adorable Liar," is the enchanting heroine of the evening. For no reason at all she reminds me of an American Gertrude Lawrence. The music, as a whole, is excellent and the dancing more than that. Betake yourself to the Ritz and watch Miss Burgess and the office help dance their cares away.

DEUCES WILD

to reach its usual masterful blitheness. She started indoors, then stood at the doorway beyond Gene to say wearily, rather than bitterly, "I hate selfish people."

"O, I don't know," Gene contradicted. "They are the ones that get the work of the world done."

"But when they stick in the mud at home——"

"That's just what I've been telling Marny," he declared.

"Marny isn't selfish," Stella denied, "but it would take an earthquake or a cyclone to move her."

"Sometimes," he said, "the two come together. Then it gets another name."

Stella went in without inquiry, her father following. Gene rose to go. "Please stay," Marny entreated. "I need you to help me fight."

"No," he denied, although his eyes caressed her. "It's a fight you'll have to make alone with them. It's the only way you'll ever really find happiness, Marny, dear. You know I'd make it for you if it were the only way, but it isn't and, if you love me enough, you'll make it. If you don't——"

"I'll telephone you."

"Not unless you're coming."

She watched his going with a pretense of gaiety, but with real fear tugging at her nerves. How was she going to tell them? What would they do without her? Stella hadn't the temperament or Grace the strength to manage the household. Was it fair to leave them? After all, they were her people, her first duty. But were they? Nothing but the realization, as she watched Gene's back, that he would not return to her unless she went into battle for his happiness and her own, steeled her to action. Her knees trembled as she went into the house, and in the living room faced her father, and Grace, and Stella.

"I'm going to be married," she told them, her back to the wall.

"Married?" Stella's shriek and Grace's wail rose in dued.

"For the love of Pete!" her father ejaculated. "Who on earth——"

"Not Gene?" Grace cried.

"Gene."

"Well, it's about time you two decided to do it," Stella thrust in.

"But what'll we do without you?" Grace mourned. "You know that I'm not strong enough to run this house, and Stella——"

"There's no reason why Stella should have to," her father declared. "Marny and Gene can come right here to live."

"If you take my advice," Stella began, "you won't——"

"I don't want any one's advice." She could feel the ring of old circumstances closing in upon her again. "I only want the chance the rest of you have had. Gene and I are going to live in our own house. If we fight, we're going to settle it there. If I get sick, I'll stay there. I'm not going to impose on any one else, and all that I'm asking of any of you is that you'l let me alone in the few days I'm going to be with you."

"Few days?" Her father caught at the tangible angle of her hysterical protest. "You don't mean that you're rushing off into this marriage?"

"Rushing? After ten years? No, I wouldn't call it that, but I'm going to marry Gene this week."

"Marny, you can't!" Grace flung at her. "You can't be married until Stella comes home from abroad."

"I'm not going abroad."

"Not going?' Tracy's interest in Marny's news died down before amazement in Stella's. "What's the matter? What's happened?"

"Well, I've told Herb that I——"

"Herb!" he snorted. "You promised Helen that——"

"Why can't Marny and Gene take her to Paris, and leave her there while they——"

"We're not going to Paris."

"Do you really mean," Grace thrust at Stella, "that you're not going with Helen? Because, if you're not, father could send me, and you can keep house for him while——"

"You know perfectly well that I won't stay here unless Herb can come, and father says that——"

"Why can't you and Herb get an apartment for the summer, and Marny can wait till I come home before—"

"I told you," Marny said steadily, "that I am going to marry Gene this week. I don't care what else you do, but you aren't going to change that." Tightly, as if it were her spar for salvation, she clung to the resolve. "For years and years I've thought of all of you before I thought of myself. Now I'm through."

"You're selfish," Grace sobbed, "hideously selfish." She sank into the nearest chair. "You know I'm not strong."

"It's Marny's unselfishness," Stella cut in, "that's been the trouble with her—and us. We've imposed on her, and cheated her, but we didn't mean it, Marny, dear." Behind her gleaming eyeglasses sudden tears shone in her blue eyes. "We're just like the rest of the world—every man for himself. You haven't been. Maybe you'll have a better chance of happiness because of it. I hope so." She came over to put her arm around Marny. "I don't know how we're going to get on without you, but we'll manage, somehow."

"O, Stella!" She clung to her gratefully.

"Well, if Stella feels that way about it," her father conceded, "I suppose we'll have to make the best of it. Not this week, though!"

"It's all very well for the rest of you," Grace wept, "but I'd like to know what I'll do in this house without Marny. Perhaps, though, if I could get stronger by a trip, and went with Helen——"

"There's no need of Helen going if her mother won't," Tracy trumpeted.

"I promised her, father."

"Then you'll have to take her."

"But if Grace——"

"Settle it between yourselves."

"We shall." There was grimness around Stella's mouth, but her eyes were soft as she led Marny from living room to hall. "I suppose," she said slowly, pausing at the foot of the stairway, "that you won't think I'm much of a counsel, Marny. Marriage hasn't been any level road for Herb and me. It's pretty much of a seesaw. I'm not sorry, though, that I married him. I'd marry him again tomorrow. That's why I'm glad for you that you're going to marry Gene. He loves you. He'll be good to you. You'll be happy, and you deserve it, Marny, dear." She kissed her lightly, then started up the stairs. "Will you tell Maggie to have bacon for Lew's breakfast?" she called back.

"Marny," Grace queried from the other room, "will you telephone the drug store to send over the tonic Doctor Marston told us about?"

"All right," she told them both, but when she took up the receiver she dialed Gene's number. "I've done it," she half laughed, half sobbed into the mouthpiece.

"Good girl," his voice rang in relief. "Was it very hard?"

"It was so easy that——"

"That what?"

"That I don't see why I——"

"It's all in how you call the game," he laughed. "How about tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow? O, I can't!"

"At ten."

"Eleven."

"Dearest!"

"Dear!"

She hung up the receiver, glancing guiltily in to where her father and Grace lingered. They were playing pinochle, paying not the slightest heed to her. She ran up the stairs swiftly.

"Tomorrow," her heart sang wildly, but as she looked back from the top of the stairs, she felt the surgings of remembrance of the childhood and youth which had been hers in this big old house, and knew that, no matter what the tomorrows might bring, no matter what the past had taken, she would be leaving some part of her love, of her soul, of herself in pawn to the rest of the turbulent Tracys.

Women the country over acclaim Maison Marcellers

Miss Anderson's Statement.

When I arrived at the Kaufmann & Fabry Studio my hair was straight as you may see in the picture above. I had very little faith in any of the so-called hair wavers and expected I would have to visit my hairdresser before keeping my other posing appointments in the afternoon. To my delight, as you will see from the center photograph, it was not necessary. My hair was perfectly waved. I have proved to my own satisfaction that Maison Marcellers will save time, money and the bother of waiting to have one's hair marcelled. They can be worn any time which means that you may be doing useful work while the hair is being waved.

I, Edward J Cook hereby certify that these are actual photographs taken by me while Miss Evelyn Anderson's hair was marcelled with Maison Marcellers. The one at the left shows Miss Anderson's hair as she entered my studio. That at the right shows the Maison Marcellers in place. The center photograph shows Miss Anderson's hair as it appears 30 minutes later.

Publisher's Notice to Readers

A Chicago representative of our paper and representatives of over 100 other publishers witnessed a demonstration of these marcellers and found them to be successful and very satisfactory.

I think the Marcellers are great. The girls at school are crazy about my waves and will not believe that my mother does it with the marcellers.

VIRGINIA HAIR.

I hate to think of all the money I spent in beauty shops before I knew about Maison Marcellers. And all the time I might have been having this lovely wave at home without a cent of beauty shop expense!

MISS EDNA KRAUSE.

I can't tell you how wonderful I think Maison Marcellers are. All of my friends are amazed that my hair is invariably so beautifully waved, and that I get these results by only fifteen minutes of arranging once a week. I wear my hair long now. I used the marcellers when my hair was bobbed and can truthfully say they work as well on long hair as on bobbed hair.

EDITH LORD.

Everyone comments on my "marcel"—but no one will believe that it isn't waved by an expert operator, using a hot iron. I must admit I never dreamed Maison Marcellers could make such perfect waves in my hair!

MRS. MARGARET O'NEIL.

Read their glowing tributes—see the gloriously beautiful waves which Maison Marcellers have given them. Then realize that you, too, can have marcels just as perfect, just as professional, just as lovely, all the time. Without ruinous hot irons. Without beauty shop expense. In 30 minutes—at home!

THEY'VE come from every corner of the land—the enthusiastic, grateful words of praise from women who have discovered Maison Marcellers. These letters tell of new hair beauty—new loveliness revealed in smooth, loose, becoming, lasting waves. They speak of the compliments showered on them by friends—of the refusal of these friends to believe that other than the most skilled professional marceller could have created such waves. They talk of the difficulties which their hair presented, of its thickness or thinness, of its softness or coarseness, and they end by telling of the marvelous, unbelievable way in which Maison Marcellers triumphed over these difficulties, and gave them for the first time an utterly satisfying wave.

A $1.50 marcel every day—with Maison Marcellers

They say that never before have they found a waving method that offered everything that one could ask—freedom from the ruinous, hair-destroying hot irons, escape from the constant nuisance of beauty shop appointments, elimination of the appalling cost of professional marcels. These women, free for the first time from all the bother and expense and danger of ordinary waving methods, now know the loveliest marcels that they have ever had and do it themselves, at home, in 30 minutes, while they are dressing.

Read What They Say!

Miss S., Springfield, Mass.
I find each time I use Maison Marcellers a constant delight as they do make such beautiful soft waves on my head.

Mrs. M. S., Camden, N. J.
I am very well satisfied with your Marcellers and is the truest advertisement I have ever sent for.

Mrs. G. S., Sumner, Wash.
I was surprised at the success I had the first time I put them in.

Mrs. A. N., Battle Creek, Mich.
I can't get along without them now.

Miss B. M., Chandler, Ind.
They surely are beautiful when you get them right. Have had several compliments on my wave since using the Marcellers.

Miss C. B. F., Flint, Mich.
I cannot too highly recommend the Maison Marcellers to anyone desiring a perfect marcel effect.

Miss J. E. D., San Francisco, Cal.
I am very well pleased with the soft natural wave which they put into my hair. Many have noticed the more becoming wave.

"I Think They're Just Wonderful."

Miss E. D., Washington, D. C.
I think they are just wonderful. My hair was thin and straight and cost me so much money going to hairdressers' to keep it waved, but since I have these wonderful wavers my hair looks much better.

Miss N. F., Stewartville, Mo.
I am delightfully pleased with them. They make a beautiful wave.

Mrs. E. W. C., White Salmon, Wash.
I was certainly pleased. I marcelled my own and my sister-in-law's hair and would like to say I wouldn't resell it to you for $10.

Mrs. M. S. B., Waukegan, Ill.
The Marcellers arrived two days ago. And as inexperienced as I was I had a wave that same day. Yesterday my husband came home and as soon as he saw my hair he said, "Oh, you got a marcel today!"

Miss M. Z., Duquesne, Pa.
I give a good word about your wonderful Marcellers to all who ask me, "Oh, what pretty marcels. How do you curl your hair?" Of course I'm glad when asked. The marcels are beautiful.

Mrs. D. R., Hazelton, Kans.
I am very much satisfied with them. They certainly are fine and do everything you say they will. One can't realize how easy it is to have waved hair with such little trouble.

You can't imagine the difference in my hair since I've stopped ruining it with hot iron marcels. And to think that I have a better wave now with Maison Marcellers than I ever had before. Seems hardly possible but it is true. Not only do they give a deep and lasting wave, but also a softer, more natural one than a hot iron marcel.

JOSEPHINE E. JORDAN.

"I Wouldn't Take $20 for Them."

Mrs. M. V. S., Elizabeth, N. J.
Am delighted with the wavers. Would not sell my set for $20 if I thought I could not replace them.

Miss R. T. V., Sabana Grande, Porto Rico.
I used your very wonderful Marcellers as soon as I received them and they are really a wonder for the waves they mark when used a few times.

Surely You Want This Wonderful Secret of Beautiful Marcels.

Surely you will want to give to your own hair the same new beauty that these women are enjoying. You will want to be able, as they do, to slip Maison Marcellers on your dampened locks when you start dressing, slip them off when you finish—and see your hair lying in the prettiest, softest, most perfect marcel imaginable! And when you think how your hair, under the kindly ministration of this safe, sane waving method will recover its beauty lost through destructive hot irons and other dangerous waving methods, you will rejoice as these other women do in your discovery of this newest, easiest, most satisfactory way to a perfect marcel.

For Any Kind of Hair—for Any Arrangement.

No matter whether your hair is soft and fluffy, coarse and straight, long or short, the Maison Marcellers will give you a wave of unbelievable beauty—a shingle bob, Ina Claire, horseshoe wave or pompadour, center or side part. And it is the simplest thing in the world to do. The Maison Marcellers adapt themselves to any style, any requirement. Made of soft rubber, light and flexible, scientifically designed. Lie down for a nap with them on—you'll never know they are there.

End—TODAY—the Expensive, Time-Consuming, Hair-Ruining "Beauty Shop" Habit.

Don't be a slave to hair care a minute longer. It isn't necessary. You can be immediately and permanently free from all the nuisance of beauty shop methods and inconveniences and expense. I am so delighted with the marcel I get with Maison Marcellers. It seems unbelievable that by spending only a few minutes every few days I can have such a beautiful wave constantly.

MISS ALLYN MARTIN.

It scarcely seems possible that as simple a device as Maison Marcellers can produce the lovely marcel with its deep undulations and graceful curving hair lines. I was surprised to see such a nice marcel in my hair when the wavers were removed.

MISS THELMA DAVIS.

More people have commented on my hair since I have been using Maison Marcellers than ever before. Of course I know the principal reason is the marvelous marcel which I always have, but then, too, my hair is getting thicker and softer and more lustrous all the time, since I stopped ruining it with other waving methods.

MISS CAROLINE CHASE.

I am so enthusiastic about my Maison Marcellers. I think they give a smoother, deeper, more lasting wave than anything I have ever seen. And they don't hurt my hair, as did the constant hot-iron waving. Then, too, the same set is used to wave my daughter's hair. I really got them for her as I want her hair to be properly trained.

Valentine Day Rites Started in Old Rome

BY W. BOYCE MORGAN.

Two martyrs, both of whom are supposed to have died on February 14, and both of whom were buried in the famous Roman Via Flaminia, are responsible for our present celebration of St. Valentine's day.

One of these men was a Roman priest who lived during the reign of Emperor Claudius in the third century, and the other was the Bishop of Turni, who lived in Umbria at about the same time. After their deaths it became customary to observe February 14 as St. Valentine's day, and later the occasion was broadened to do honor to at least six other martyrs who were known by the same name, Valentine.

It is not entirely clear how the custom of sending "Valentines" or love tokens originated, but this part of the festival of St. Valentine's eve and day was observed in England and on the continent of Europe from the time of Chaucer on. Since the end of the nineteenth century it has not been as widespread as formerly, but it is still a well-known custom in England and America.

In the old English observance of the occasion it was the custom to deposit all the names of the young men and women of the community in a big box on St. Valentine's eve, or the night of February 13. Then each boy and girl drew out a name at random, and those w hose drawings corresponded were to be each other's "valentine" for the next year. On the following day the pair exchanged various tokens of love. Later the girls ceased to give their gifts, but the men continued to make presents to the young ladies whom they had been lucky enough to draw.

Just why this procedure should be followed on the day reserved to the memory of several martyrs is not known, although the coincidence of the two celebrations was probably just an accident. The English festival grew out of an old Roman feast that came in the spring of the year, when people were supposed to fall in love most easily.

Today the day is observed with the old-time giving of "love tokens." In some cases these may be real gifts, but ordinarily now they are only the fancy greeting cards that go under the name of valentines.

It is interesting to speculate how the comic valentine originated. Perhaps in the old days some English country boy, being disappointed with the girl that the lottery had given him for the ensuing year, took his spite out upon her by giving her a foolish present instead of a genuine gift.

A BUSINESS MAN.

A party of motorists, speeding by an old darky trudging down the road with his gun under his arm and his dog at his heels, inadvertently struck the dog. The driver stopped, got out, observed the deceased animal, and asked the old negro:

"That your dog?"

"Yassuh."

"You owned him?"

"Yassuh."

"Looks like I've killed him."

"Yassuh. Suttinly do look so."

"Very valuable animal?"

"Nosuh, not so ve'y val'able."

"Will five dollars satisfy you?"

"Yassuh."

The money was paid and the driver called back from his car:

"Well, Uncle, I'm sorry I spoiled your hunting."

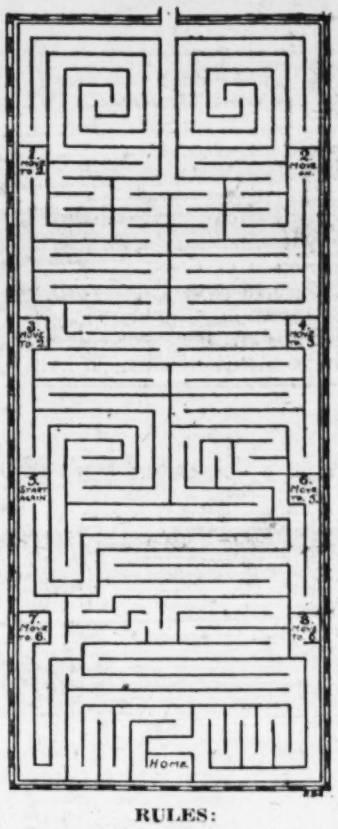

"Wa'nt goin' huntin'," replied the dark philosopher, "wuz jes' goin' down to de rivah to shoot dis heah dawg."

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

AN EASILY MADE WINDOW SEAT.

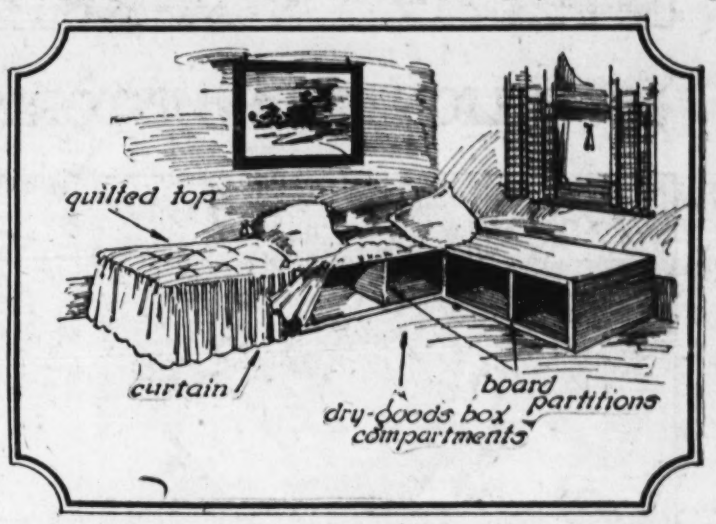

Surprising results can often be obtained from materials found ready at hand. If you desire a lounge or window seat in your room and do not have the means to buy one, visit your grocer and obtain several boxes all of the same size, which, when laid side by side, will give you the size seat you desire.

The illustration shows a lovely addition to any girl's room. It consists of a series of dry goods boxes set along two walls and meeting in one corner. Small nails are driven through the lower sides of the boxes into the floor to hold them in place.

The top is then padded with old quilts or cotton, or any other material which is suitable, and then covered with an attractive sheet of print material. If quilted down the effect will be very pleasing.

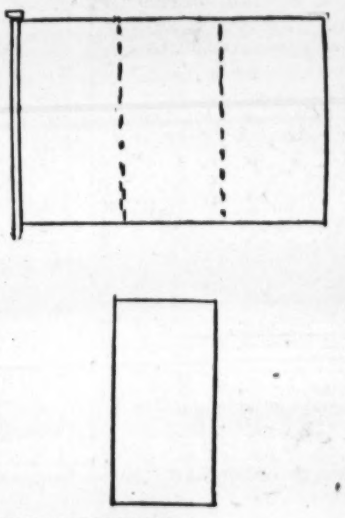

To further hide these boxes, hang a strip of cloth in loose folds from the edge on both ends and both front sides to the floor. This can be tacked on, and the tacks covered with a narrow strip of braid.

Besides this additional lounging space, you have a storage space underneath for the many articles that accumulate in your room and which are somewhat unsightly.

Stories About Abraham Lincoln

"The Sort of a Man Any Boy or Girl Would Like to Have as a Friend"

As the memory of Abraham Lincoln is honored year after year on his birthday, February 12, his place as one of the world's really great men becomes more and more secure. He is held high in the respect and admiration of everyone because he rose to such a lofty position from such a low beginning; because he was a man of great homely wisdom and nobleness of character; because his statesmanship brought the United States through the most perilous years in the history of the nation; and last of all, because he was a "man of the people," intensely human, the sort of man that any boy or girl would love to have as a friend.

This last quality is, perhaps, the one which distinguishes Lincoln from many other men who have been called great. His greatness seems all the more great because he was really so much like all of us in many ways. And one of the things that endears him to all who read or study about him is his love of fun, his pleasure in a good joke, even in the most trying times, and his shrewd humor that always was backed up with common sense and real wisdom.

People who knew Lincoln during his life time have left us many stories that illustrate these characteristics of the man. For example, here is the account of an incident that occurred when he was a young lawyer in Illinois, long before he ever thought of becoming president.

Lincoln knew a lot about horses, and it took a smart man to get ahead of him in any sort of trade. One day while he was practicing law, the question of horse trading came up in some way, and he and an old judge began to banter each other about their ability in this line. To settle the argument it was decided that they would trade horses at nine o'clock on the following morning. Each was allowed to get the worst horse he could, and neither was to see the other's until the trade was made. If either failed to come through with the bargain, he was to pay the other $25.

The judge, after much searching, found a horse which he felt sure would be worse than any Lincoln could find. He was a bony, skinny nag, hardly able to walk by himself. When the judge led him before the crowd that had gathered to see the fun, there were loud shouts of laughter, and everyone thought that Lincoln was beaten.

A few minutes later, however, that young man appeared, and the mirth of the crowd was doubled. For Lincoln was not leading a horse to them but instead arrived carrying an old wooden saw horse on his shoulder.

The judge chagrined at the way he had been beaten, stood silent while Lincoln walked up, set down his wooden horse, and examined the wreck that the judge had brought. Then after looking him over, Lincoln shook his head, smiled, and said, "I guess you win, Judge. This is the first time I ever got the worst of it in a horse trade."

A Big Army.

Another story is told of a joke that Lincoln made at the expense of some of his army officers. It was during the midst of the civil war, when the Union forces were being badly beaten by the soldiers of the south, and when all sorts of excuses were being made for the defeats that the Union generals were suffering.

One day a guest at the capitol asked the president how large the Confederate army was.

"About 1,200,000 men," he answered.

"Is it possible that it is that large?" the other cried in wonder.

"Well," said Lincoln, "whenever one of our generals is licked he says that he was outnumbered three or four to one, and we have 400,000 men. Three times 400,000 is about 1,200,000, isn't it?"

Lincoln as a Dancer.

Lincoln's entrance into society in Springfield, Ill., when he was a young man there was not too impressive. He attended his first ball there because he wished to see one of the guests, Mary Todd, who later became his wife. Mary and another girl were sitting together, and Lincoln approached in his bashful way and asked Mary to dance.

"Miss Todd," he said, in his peculiar manner of speaking, "I should like to dance with you the worst way."

Mary was willing, but it was a trial for her to hobble through the steps with her big, rather awkward partner. As she limped back to her friend and sat down, rubbing her mistreated feet, the other young lady said mischievously:

"Well, Mary, did he dance with you 'the worst way?'"

"He certainly did," Mary replied "the very worst!"

He Deserved It.

Lincoln was a homely man, and he was not ashamed of it. In fact, he took great pleasure in telling the following story about himself.

"In the days when I was traveling on circuit I was once addressed by a stranger in a railway car.

"'Excuse me ——,' this man said to me, 'but I have an article here that belongs to you.'

"'How is that?' I asked him, astonished. He pulled a jackknife from his pocket and handed it to me.

"'This knife,' he said soberly, 'was given to me years ago, and at the time I was told to keep it until I found a man uglier than myself. Since that day I have always carried it, but allow me to say, sir, that I think you are fully entitled to it.'"

Not everybody could thus enjoy a joke of which he was the victim. Perhaps that is another reason why Lincoln is considered a great man!

EYES OPEN, PLEASE.

Isn't it surprising how many opportunities we are given during the day for doing really kindly things? Keep your eyes open for just one day and see if this isn't so.

Beginning right at home: There are so many, many ways to help mother; father's pipe to be placed where he will find it easily; small brother and sister to help with their struggles in dressing. Yes indeed, so many, many opportunities for being kind.

There is stretching before us a whole week of opportunities of this sort. Beginning this very moment is another day in which to do and say only those things that are kind. Let's make a solemn vow to ourselves when we have finished reading this that we will rise up that very minute, if the opportunity offers, and do something that will help another. Let's open our eyes, wide, and give this business of being kind a very fair trial and see how it works!

Famous Monuments — Tomb of Hadrian — By Hendrik Van Loon

Color Instructions

You might try a little symbolism in this picture and make the sky a bright red. For never ha sa building seen as much bloodshed as this gigantic tomb of a long forgotten Roman emperor which afterwards became the chief papal fortress and the prison in which the Borgias used to dispose of their enemies.

As blue and red make a terrible combination, you had better color the river a dark green. This is not exactly correct, for the Tiber is as muddy as the Mississippi. But you are striving after a picture that shall be interesting and that shall leave a certain definite impression upon your mind and not after correct details. If you want details, get a photograph or a colored postcard.

The trees, as usual, must be green but the building itself will give you a chance to try out several color combinations. You can make it a light gray but that will give you a very dull picture. Try a background of yellow and while your yellow is still wet, go over it quite hastily with a brush full of red. In that way you will get the effect of an old stone wall and if in addition you follow some of the cracks with brown you will gain still another couple of centuries in age.

WHEN I was a few years younger and was obliged to learn my ancient history by heart (it was merely a question of dates in those far away days) I was given a certain year in which "the Roman Empire had fallen." And ever since it has been very difficult for me to get rid of this idea of a "fallen empire"—a world state which exists today and behold! Tomorrow and it is gone.

We know better. We know that Rome never "fell" in the sense of a city or a country destroyed by fire or an earthquake. It slowly grew weaker. It was no longer able to defend its far spread frontiers. I gave up one outlying province after the other. It was forced to allow foreigners to settle down in cities that had always been regarded as essentially Roman. Whereas in former centuries it had held savage tribes at a distance with the help of is invincible armies, it now paid them money if only they would leave the Italian peninsula in peace.

But nowhere is the rapid decline of the proud empire shown with greater and more fatal clarity than in the two monuments which I shall show you this week and next.

The visitor of modern Rome is shown a tremendous pile of stones which looks for all he world like a fortress and which during the middle ages, was often used as such. In reality it is the tomb of the Emperor Hadrian who died in the year 138 of our era.

When Hadrian came to the throne or rather was proclaimed emperor by his troops all civilized people still recognized Rome as the center of the world. And this particular ruler had sense enough to know that the time had come for a complete overhauling of his domains. He made a tour of inspection which covered the entire known world. Then he set to work to bring about the necessary reforms.

He built a wall across northern England to keep the wild Scotch at arm's length. He built a wall which reached from the Rhine to the Danube to safeguard against invasion on the part of Teutons. He constructed vast military roads which you may see (and use) to this day. He tried to revive Athens as as international center of learning. He collected back taxes and reformed the financial system of the empire. And having spent a busy life bolstering up the fast crumbling walls of his enormous possessions, he died and got himself buried in a mausoleum which was so big and so high and so strong that it has played a prominent role in every Roman uprising of the last eighteen centuries and stands today for more business.
